Ode to a library:

A Library

By: Elaina Ardjewski

Oh, library. How you are wiser than all,
Sitting in silence
Within your building walls,
Assisting those seeking your guidance.

Mazes of words and artwork all written on paper,
About facts or fiction, from truth or imagination
You house what's most precious to our human nature,
Which is our ability to turn thoughts into creation.

As an enrolled student of college,
You can always find me here
Filling my mind with an abundance of knowledge,
As libraries have done so for many of years.

Oh, library. You appeal to all from young to old,
The stories that you hold, forever will be told.
