A Scotchman entered a small town bank one day, asking for a loan. He was taken to the President's office:

Scotty: "I would like to make a loan."

Banker: "Well, of course, we have to have some security and we charge the regular six per cent rate of interest. If this can be arranged, no doubt, we can take care of you. Just how much of a loan do you want?"

Scotty: "I would like $10.00." (Reaching into his pocket, he pulled out a bundle of bonds.) "Here is the security, $25,000.00."

Banker: "Why, of course, we can arrange this loan." (Calling the cashier, he instructed him to get $10.00, deducting the six per cent, Scotty leaving, after which the entire bank force had a long laugh at Scotty's expense.)

Several days later, Scotty entered the bank again. Upon seeing him, the banker called him in the office.

Banker: "Scotty, do you know that you would not have had to put up so much security for that small loan the other day?"

Scotty: "Sure, but where else could I get a safety deposit box for sixty cents a year."

MacPherson (at picture theatre box office)—Will ye kindly return the amount of amusement tax?

Clerk—Why, sir?

MacPherson—We wasna amused.

BY
HARRY E. FITZGERALD
Celebrated Sports Writer
A Weekly Feature of the GREETER

Abraham Lincoln was fond of fishing as a boy thus acquiring at an early age a knowledge of the sport of presidents, as now exhibited in the fishing proclivities of President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt.

In fact, Thomas Lincoln, the president's father, was a great lover of fishing and hunting, and neglected both his farming and carpentry to indulge in the sport in the Kentucky woods, where angling early developed as an art. He thus supplied most of the food upon which the family subsisted.

Kentucky, with its lure of forests and streams, produced many followers of Izaak Walton, and claims credit as the first state in the union to establish a factory for the making of reels, back in the early years of the last century.

Born in 1809, Lincoln's memory went back to the peace following the War of 1812 and to the returning soldiers. His particular recollection was of his mother telling him to be kind to the soldiers, and of his once having given a soldier a string of fish.

Lincoln spent his early boyhood seven or eight miles north and east from the Sinking Spring farm, where he was born. This second home was in the valley of a deep and rapid stream, Knob Creek, where the fish were plentiful.

"Abe used to go with me," said Dennis Harb's, his mother's kinsman, "to shoot fish in puddles and holes washed by the water. He exhibited no special trait in Kentucky except a good, kind, somewhat wild nature." He liked to fish and to hunt "with his dog and axe" and "when the dog would run a rabbit in a hollow tree, he would chop it out."

Dennis Harb's followed the family into Indiana, when Abe was eight years old, and reported that they had "to work very hard clear ground fer to keep body and soul to gether and every spare time that we had we picked up our rifle and fished in a fine deer or turkey an' in the winter time we went a-coon huntin'."

As President, Lincoln had neither the time nor the inclination for the present day presidential pastimes, but he would often recall the hills, streams and forests which had been vividly impressed on his boyish mind, and narrate stories of the early days in Kentucky when it was a land of adventure, peopled by such sportsmen as the immortal Daniel Boone.

"Many happy returns!" The "Greeter" is always looking for new features to please you. We feel that although we are a thriving municipality that we are just one big happy family. There are some who would doubt the happiness point but I still stick to it. Beginning at an early date we will publish each week the names of as many people we can find out whose birthday fall in that particular week in order that your friends know when to slap you on the back. You, dear readers, will have to cooperate by calling in or dropping us a postal with the date of your birthday. If you haven't been to the Wyoming Hotel for dinner yet, you are missing one of the best treats in this Central section. Drop in Sunday night for dinner and then stay for the evening concert beginning at 7:30 and lasting until 9. The cuisine is indeed a revelation from the ordinary eating place and the concerts are enjoyed each week by a greater number of particular people.

"Smile and the world smiles with you, frown and it looks like—" according to Evans Crump, Jeweler who has developed quite a reputation as an optimist. It's good logic anyway and this would be a better place to live if more people followed it.

In your travels have you ever dined at the Buttercup Tea Room at Lonenburg, Mass.? If you have I know you have never forgotten it.. This precious tea room is owned and managed by Charleen Baker of Charleen's Tea Horse, 1385 Orange Ave., in Winter Park. Her friends and patrons will be glad to know that she is serving the same delicious food in Florida, for which she has built up her tremendous business at Buttercup Hill.

At Fair week one assumes that carnival spirit—that spirit of adventure that is so closely connected with travel. You too can enjoy your next trip to the fullest extent if every detail to your pleasure is attended to before you leave. There will be no bothersome trifles to bob in route if your arrangements are made by Mrs. J. L. Ensign at the Lanier Steamship Agency. Drop by 44 E. Pine St., the next time you plan to go to Pinecastle or Paris. They say there are interesting sights at both places.

To the visitors who have just arrived in the city, our first suggestion would be a trip to the Perrydell Tea House and Gift Shop. There are very few places in the South with a finer collection of paintings and antique pieces which will delight you regardless whether you are a connoisseur or not because we cannot escape the fact that "a thing of beauty is enjoyed forever"..

The Peter and Jane is stepping out these days. A lot of lovely new things for the children. You and your child will appreciate clothes as chic and clever as these. Be sure and look at the beautiful gifts for the new baby at the Peter and Jane Shop, 27 W. Washington.

FREE ORANGES AT CHURCH & MAIN

Free oranges are now available at every office and shop in the Church & Main Building. Through the cooperation of M. D. Bailey, Jr., every visitor who enters the Building will be offered luscious tree-ripened fruit. You can eat as much as you want while a guest here but, of course, you cannot carry home a week's supply. The Church & Main family urge all other merchants and business men to follow this practice. Surely no one should want for pure orange juice in Orlando and our citrus should be the most easily obtained product in the city so that the public might be educated to "reach for an orange instead".

Charlie Mayer is quite in favor of this plan to exploit the use of oranges, he having recently made use of orange blossoms.

Old gentleman (to new gardener)—Why do you always pull your barrow instead of pushing it?

jest in fun

From what you tell me, Sam, you have been a busy man all your life?"

"Yes, sah; yes, sah."

"You've done a great deal in your time and day, Sam, I guess."

"Yes, sah. Dat is, I'se done a good lot in mah day, but it was in de boss's time, sah."

Get through one minute at a time and you'll get through.

Dawn always comes.

Worms don't fall down. Even the best men occasionally do.

Finance is finite; friendship infinite.

Do your best; forget the rest.

Only the discouraged are defeated.

Even the deepest ocean has a bottom.

Those who get to the top these days are likely to stay.

We're not living higher, but aren't we livin' deeper?
