LOCHMEDEK

Vol. I.

WINTER PARK, FLORIDA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1887.

No. 19.

A SCRIBBLED LEAF.

FOR LOCHMEDE.

While turning the leaves, in an idle way,
Of a book I was reading the other day,
I chanced to find, not quite erased,
The name of a friend with a pencil traced.

'Twas a trivial thing, but it sent my thought
Back o'er the changes the years have wrought,
To the old-time friend and the old-time place,
The memory of which time cannot efface.

'Twas a worn school-book I held in my hand,
Frank—the name penciled there, recalled
a gay band—
Grace, Harry and Howard, Ben, Charley and Will,
And Amy and Bertha, Laura, Alice and Lill.

Now, in fancy, I see them as in days of yore
Tripping lightly and gay o'er the time worn floor;
And a vision comes off in the soft fading light,
Of my school-mates dear faces all joyous and bright.

Oh, pleasant the thoughts which the old dream brings,
When each moment seemed freighted with joyous things;
When the hours came too quickly and vanished too fast,
And each eve left another school-day in the past.

But changes have come that are born of the years,
Which strengthen the bond and the memory endears;
Those play days are vanished and time's rigid rule
Has changed fun-loving faces which met there at school.

The years have rolled onward! Where are they to-day?
Like leaves we are scattered o'er life's highway;
And I know ne'er again can we meet as of yore,
E'er we passed out for aye through the school-house door.

I closed the worn book with a vague regret
The familiar name on its margin yet;
And in years to come that name once more
May recall pleasant memories of days of yore.

—DELLA.

HEALTH IN FLORIDA.

The present time seems opportune to say a word or two on this subject. Many people here, in spite of all reasonable considerations to the contrary, are filled with a vague dread of the yellow fever, and people in other parts of the country are half afraid to come to any part of the State. Worse than this, many of the latter class think of Florida as a place particularly subject to a dreadful disease which other parts of the country are free from. Now what are the facts? Certainly, there is yellow fever in Florida, but Florida is a big State—it is nearly 400 miles from east to west across the northern part, and nearly the same from north to south. In all that extent of country, is it wonderful that one or two towns should be found in such an unsanitary condition as to offer a fertile soil for disease? This has proved to be the case in Key West and in Tampa, and the disease once introduced there, naturally spread and multiplied, just as typhoid fever, diphtheria, and other diseases have done in other parts of the country. But when there is an epidemic of typhoid fever or diphtheria in a northern town, does anybody think of deserting a whole State for it? Do not people a hundred miles away, or even ten miles, feel perfectly safe and unconcerned? It may remind them to look after their own premises more carefully, as a preventive of similar trouble at home, and the town where the disease exists probably takes extraordinary measures to remove the conditions which have caused it. Now, that is exactly what has happened here. From one end of the State to the other the towns have taken a new survey of the field, and taken measures to put themselves in as good sanitary condition as possible, and the two towns where the disease has been have worked hard to cleanse themselves and get rid of the causes of their trouble. The rest of the State has not changed in any way from what it has always been, and it has been justly celebrated as an unusually healthy one to live in. It is so still, and there is no reason for any panic at home, nor fear of coming here from abroad. Indeed, the day of panics on account of ordinary diseases ought to be considered as past, among sensible people. The causes of most ordinary diseases are now so well ascertained, that instead of blindly running away from them, we may save ourselves a great deal of unnecessary trouble, if we will quietly investigate our surroundings, and find out whether the conditions of danger really exist. If they do we should remove them if possible, and if not, then remove ourselves, but if we find ourselves surrounded with only the most healthy conditions, it is certainly the greatest folly to run away from them to places where we cannot be better off and may be worse.

As to the yellow fever, it may now fairly be included in the list of ordinary diseases, in tropical countries at any rate, and it may also be included among those which are well understood, and to a very large degree, if not entirely, preventible by well known precautions. This should lead us to do all we can to prevent it, by making it a criminal offense to maintain the conditions known to be dangerous to the public health, and avoid them ourselves. If the disease does come in spite of us, it is no longer to be feared as it once was, for being well understood, it can be more successfully treated. As we stated last week only one case out of eight at Tampa has proved fatal, and it further appears from recent reports that about one-third of those which have been fatal were persons subject to some chronic disease which made them especially susceptible to the fever. This leaves only one fatal case in twelve among persons ordinarily healthy, and it is fair to suppose that at least half of the one-twelfth were drinking men or subject to some such habit known to be especially dangerous in combination with the fever. This would leave about one fatal case in twenty-four among healthy people of good habits. This in a town where the local conditions are such that nearly every white man in it has been sick. What then is the chance for life against the fever in the bulk of the State, where the conditions are known to be in every way unfavorable to the disease? We think it is so good that the danger is easier to describe, and that we can do in one word—nothing.

Calamity liars to the contrary notwithstanding. Florida is, as she always has been, a remarkably healthy State, and still possesses the same gentle and salubrious climate that has made her famous in former years, and the same high and dry sandy soil, clothed with the balmy pine forests, that is recognized as healthy ground to live on everywhere, and is no less so here than elsewhere. The two together constitute an outward world unexcelled anywhere in point of healthy conditions of life, and we have the same confidence we always had in staying here ourselves and inviting our friends in less favored regions to come here and share it with us.

True Love.

Of all the love affairs in the world, none can surpass the true love of a big boy for his mother. It is a love, pure and noble, honorable in the highest degree to both. I do not mean merely a dutiful affection. I mean a love which makes a boy gallant and courteous to his mother, saying to everybody plainly that he is fairly in love with her. Next to the love of her husband, nothing so crowns a woman's life with honor as this second love, this devotion of the son to her. And I never yet knew a boy "turn out" bad, who began by falling in love with his mother. Any man may fall in love with the fresh-faced girl, and the man who is gallant with the girl may cruelly neglect the worn and weary wife. But the boy who is a lover to his mother in her middle age, is a true knight who will love his wife as much in the serene autumn as he did in the daisied spring time.

The carriage which was made by the United States government especially for the use of Lafayette during his visit to this country in 1824 is owned in Chicago. It is a quaint old ark, hung on big springs and wide straps, and from his lofty seat the old Frenchman used to descend to the ground by steps with many foldings.

How to be a "Nobody."

It is easy to be nobody, and the Watchman tells how to do it. Go to the drinking saloon to spend your leisure time. You need not drink much now, just a little beer or some other drink. In the meantime, play dominoes, checkers, or something else to kill time, so that you will be sure not to read any useful books. If you read anything, let it be the dime novel of the day. Thus go on keeping your stomach full and your head empty, and yourself playing time-killing games, and in a few years you will be a first-class nobody, unless you should turn out a drunkard or a professional gambler, either of which is worse than nobody. There are any number of young men hanging about saloons just ready to graduate and be nobodies.

How to Live Long.

In commemorating the 101st birthday of M. Chevreul, the famous French scientist, the Paris Illustré says:

"The venerable patriarch has often been asked what secret he has used to reach his hundred years without infirmities and without a particle of change in his great intelligence. 'I do not drink wine,' answers he, imperturbably. This is a witty, evasive reply. We must seek for the cause of this happy longevity in a severe moral and intellectual hygiene. We address our respectful felicitations to the illustrious savant, and our wishes for his good health. His long life so fruitful, his green old age so active, is an eloquent lesson for youth. It proves that the best means to live and become old is to work constantly and much.

Definiteness in Knowledge.

The memory will only be content when there is that accuracy which gives absolute confidence. Suspicion of inaccuracy is the most vicious element in memory. It is more satisfactory not to recall a thing than to recall it in such a way as not to know what we have recalled—whether the recollection is reliable, where the memory of fact shades into fancy. It requires the best mental activity, the closest observation, the clearest thought, the sharpest discrimination, the cleanest classification, to give knowledge that definiteness which is indispensable to reliability in memory and accuracy in recollection.—Journal of Education.

The Sculptor St. Gaudens.

The following about Augustus St. Gaudens, the sculptor of the new Lincoln statue in Chicago, and the Chapin statue in Springfield, Mass., is taken from the November Century: "As the first step in the resuscitation of sculpture was the abandonment of the stilted imitation of third-rate Roman antiques, and the study of the works of the Italian Renaissance, it was a happy coincidence that Augustus St. Gaudens should have had much of such an apprenticeship as a Florentine sculptor of the fifteenth century might have had. St. Gaudens's father was of southern France, his mother was Irish. He himself is a New Yorker, well-nigh from birth—having been brought to this city from Dublin, his birthplace, while yet an infant. He was early apprenticed to a New York cameo-cutter and faithfully served his time, and even during the period of his study in Paris he devoted half of his working hours to bread-winning in the exercise of his trade. He attributes much of his success to the habit of faithful labor acquired at this time, and speaks of his apprenticeship as 'one of the most fortunate things that ever happened to him.' Perhaps one may attribute to it, also, part of that mastery of low-relief which is such a noticeable element in his artistic equipment. In 1868 he went to Paris to begin the serious study of his art, and after working for some time in the Petite Ecole entered the studio of Jouffroy in the Ecole des Beaux Arts.

This was the year of the Universal Exposition, and in that Exposition he saw the 'Florentine Singer' of Paul Dubois, which had received the medal of honor two years before at the Salon. This statue, in which the very spirit of the Renaissance breathed again, must have marked an epoch for him, as it did for modern sculpture.

Many of the brilliant sculptors of today were educated in the studio of Jouffroy; Falguiere and St. Marceau had left it shortly before St. Gaudens entered it; Mercie was his fellow-student there, and he thus became a part of the young and vigorous movement of contemporary sculpture. He afterwards went to Rome, and finally, returning to this country, was given in a happy hour the commission for the Farragut statue in Madison Square. From the time when that statue was exhibited, in the plaster, at the Salon of 1880, his talent was recognized and his position assured."

WINTER PARK, NOV. 4, 1887.

Our last number was hardly out before the weather again became cool, and reports began to come of a diminution in the number of fever cases at Tampa. A few weeks more will probably finish the story.

OUTING for November has a wood cut frontispiece of a group of the principal members of the Staten Island Ladies' Club, and a history of the Staten Island Cricket and Base Ball Club, with illustrations of the club house, grounds, lawn tennis and cricket fields, etc. General Marcy continues his account of Big Game Hunting in the Wild West, and Thomas Stevens wheels across the Desert of Despair. Olive Thorn Miller describes the habits and peculiarities of different kinds of Birds of Paradise, with some fine illustrations. Summer life at Nantucket, and western ranch life, by lady contributors, and canoeing in Canada, and wheeling in Italy, by gentlemen, are the lighter articles, with a couple of poems and several minor articles to complete the variety.

The Century for November begins a new volume with an exceptionally fine number. Mr. Kennan's paper on the Russian Liberals, before announced, is an important contribution to our knowledge of that country, and should be read by all who wish to understand contemporary politics. The Home and Haunts of Washington touches a subject of perennial interest to Americans, and gives a graphic picture of things as they were a century ago, to which is added an account of Mt. Vernon as it is now. The lovers of fine art are remembered in an account of the sculptor, Augustus St. Gaudens, from which we print an extract, illustrated with some very beautiful engravings of his works. Students of human "types" will be interested in a collection of composite photographs of American college students and professors, which are well reproduced by the engraver. The War Series is appropriately concluded with the final struggle and surrender of Lee's Army at Appomattox. The Lincoln history reaches the time between his election and inauguration, and contains a great deal of interesting and valuable material. Sugar Making in Louisiana, by E. V. Smalley, illustrated with striking local scenes, conveys a great deal of information in a very attractive form. Fiction is well represented by Edward Eggleston, George W. Cable, and William H. Bishop, and there are several good poems, and a timely discussion of current topics, both by editor and correspondents.

A SCARE.

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin," and a touch of fear seems to be a "touch of nature," for it makes not only all men kin, but reduces them to kinship with dumb brutes even. A few days ago a colored woman died in Sanford; the report got about that she had had "black vomit," and forthwith the town was in an uproar, and it was telegraphed all over the country that there was yellow fever in Sanford. There were two or three other cases of fever of various kinds in the town, and immediately it was assumed that these were concealed cases of yellow fever too, and the report went abroad that Sanford had had from three to five deaths from yellow fever. Volusia and Duval counties proclaimed quarantine against Sanford. The house in which the woman had died was burned as a precaution against infection. Physicians were dispatched from Jacksonville and Savannah to report as to the actual existence of yellow fever in Sanford, and in every way the authorities lent themselves to encouraging a general scare. The Jacksonville physician evidently didn't know yellow fever when he saw it; nor know enough of similar diseases to be confident of his own opinion one way or the other, so he reported that he found no certain indications of yellow fever, but agreed with the local authorities that the situation was serious, and demanded all possible precautions. The post mortem examination of the woman was left for the physician from Savannah, and he determined that the disease was not yellow fever after all.

Here was the business of a whole town suspended for two days, its own people and half the population of the State scared into making fools of themselves, and a damaging report sent abroad—all because some ignoramus reported that a sick woman's vomit had been "black," although this symptom is known to present itself in several other diseases as well as in yellow fever. It would seem a legitimate function of local government to check rather than encourage such nonsense, and it should be one of the tests of fitness for public office that a man should have sense enough to keep his head and lead his people at such times. If our local authorities and our own people, who ought to know better, indulge in such folly, they need not wonder if people at a distance, with fewer opportunities of information, entertain unnecessary suspicion of the whole State on account of the Tampa epidemic.

JOTTINGS.

Hon. E. R. Gunby spent Monday afternoon in town.

Judge Welborne returned from a trip to New York, Monday.

C. L. S. C. is to hold a meeting on the 3rd at Dr. Hooker's house.

We had the pleasure of a call Monday morning from Mr. Dixie Beggs.

Robert White, Jr. is having the 2nd story over his store remodeled, and will fix up a good hall for entertainments, etc.

Deacon Larabee has been busy putting in a very neat and handy set of shelves for the library, as ordered at the meeting on the 29th.

Ugh! if you are interested in such curiosities, take a look at Woodruff's big, ugly rattlesnake. It's an interesting sight, but not a very playful pet.

John R. Ergood bought the wind-mill and water works of the Arcade and is now putting them in position so as to supply his lovely cottage and grounds with water.

THE WINTER PARK JEWELRY STORE.—A fine line of Jewelry, Watches, Clocks, the celebrated Willson Spectacles, Florida Curiosities, &c. Repairing.

H. M. WOODRUFF.

Mrs. William C. Comstock arrived on the evening of the first, and is busily at work getting the furniture, etc. for her elegant cottage in place to begin house-keeping there; no lovelier place can be found anywhere.

Miss Blanche Dieffenderfer returned from Virginia last week accompanied by her grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Glenn, who it is hoped will permanently settle with us, as they are very much pleased with the beauty of Winter Park.

Mr. F. W. Lyman dropped in on us last week. He came to assist in the transfer of the Lyman Bank to the First National of Sanford, and returned to his home last Monday night. He reports all his people well.

We had the pleasure of a call from Jas. Cribbet, Esq. a prominent railroad man from Ocala. He expressed himself, as everybody else does, as delighted with our place, and was particularly pleased with the view from the top of the Seminole.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Davies sympathize sincerely with them in the death of their boy, Harold, which took place last Thursday night. The funeral was on Saturday, at 10 a. m., and was conducted by Rev. Bates, of All Saints Church, in a very touching and impressive manner.

On Sunday afternoon, at All Saints Church, occurred the baptism of George Davies, in the presence of quite a large audience. He is now Mr. and Mrs. Davies' only child, and is a bright, attractive boy of about three years. Rev. Bates read the beautiful service of the Episcopal church on the occasion.

The committee on Rules and Ordinances of our Council are hard at work with the aid of Mr. Gunby on a complete set of ordinances for our government. They are going slow so as to get everything right and put as little burden on our people as is possible and at the same time have an effective town government.

The Kindergarten is now in very successful operation, and judging from the great interest manifested by the little folks will do great good. If anybody here has a child old enough who is not attending, he should be sent at once, for experience amply proves that in no other way is as successful a start for an education made as in these delightful institutions.

Hallow-eeen was celebrated at Mrs. A. H. Paul's house before tea by the children, who had no end of fun over the various devices used, and after tea by a small gathering of older people who were nicely entertained by music and conversation. Mr. Gofton, of England, sang several tunes, and showed that he possessed fine ability in that line. We hope he will decide to settle here as he will undoubtedly be an acquisition to our musical and social people.

The regular meeting of the Town Improvement Association will be held on Thursday evening, too late for this issue, at the Winter Park Co's. office, at which time we hope steps will be taken in conjunction with Col. Ingraham, the Winter Park Company, and our Town Council, to improve our depot parks and make the view from the depot and cars attractive to everybody going through here. No better advertisement of our place can be had.

Hugh MacCallum returned from his summer's work in Great Britain last Saturday. His family did not return with him as he expects to return to Scotland early in the spring for the purpose of presenting the claims of Florida still more thoroughly to his people. He says that there is great interest in Florida matters in Scotland and England, and that he looks for a great many people here from there soon. He also says that the great interest he has been able to work up there in Winter Park over other places is due to our fine educational facilities—a fact that we who live here should fully appreciate and do all in our power to further in every way possible.

Our circulating library had a meeting last Saturday at their room in the Winter Park Co's. block at which it was decided to more than double their shelf room, as they haven't near enough room for the books now in the library, and they are expecting large accessions now on the way. They will also open the room Wednesdays and Saturdays from 3 to 5 p. m. to be in charge of Miss Gilbert, Wednesdays, and the Secretary, Miss Lamson, Saturdays. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Rogers for her valuable services during the summer, and a series of entertainments was talked of for the winter. We are glad to see this splendid start made for the winter's work, and hope that it is only the thunder that precedes a perfect deluge of new books and patrons for what all must concede to be one of our most helpful organizations.

Any one interested in the study of human nature would have been much interested to have been present at a birthday party given on last Saturday by Miss Louise Capen. She was five years old on that occasion, and invited in about 35 of her wee friends to help celebrate. Mirth and glee ruled the hour. A supper was served at 5 o'clock, and the little folks left for their homes soon after, all feeling that they had had lots of fun and pleasure. Many pretty and useful presents were presented by the little folks to Miss Louise, filling quite a large table. We could not help thinking as we looked at and admired the little throng, that if so much good nature and unselfishness and so little that was disagreeable, could crop out from such a happy lot of children who did not feel the restraint of society rules and regulations, how much better it would be for them to grow up that way than to, after awhile, put on the robes of conventionality and instead of showing their own good-natured selves seek to hide almost all natural feeling, and be what society calls "dignified."

We are happy to announce to our citizens that Dr. H. C. Jones, late of Cerro Gordo, Ills. has decided to cast his lot with us, and will at once proceed to build a tasty cottage on his lot on Interlachen Avenue, near the Episcopal Church. Dr. Jones is an agreeable gentleman, and an accomplished physician. He is a graduate of the Ohio College of Medicine at Cincinnati, and a post graduate of Rush Medical College at Chicago. He is also a member of the American Medical Association, and was a delegate to their last meeting in Chicago, so that as a physician he has all the requirements necessary. Dr. Jones was also a prominent Mason and Knight Templar in Illinois, and was initiated into that mystic order at Mellonville almost before there was any Sanford. He was a resident of Sanford from 1876 to 1881, and helped to incorporate the place. He with his wife are energetic workers in the Presbyterian Church, or Congregational as we have it here, and will be a great addition to our society. They will probably live in the Hargrave cottage until their house is complete, and we bespeak for them the cordial and hearty reception for which our people are noted.

How to be a "Nobody."

It is easy to be nobody, and the Watchman tells how to do it. Go to the drinking saloon to spend your leisure time. You need not drink much now, just a little beer or some other drink. In the meantime, play dominoes, checkers, or something else to kill time, so that you will be sure not to read any useful books. If you read anything, let it be the dime novel of the day. Thus go on keeping your stomach full and your head empty, and yourself playing time-killing games, and in a few years you will be a first-class nobody, unless you should turn out a drunkard or a professional gambler, either of which is worse than nobody. There are any number of young men hanging about saloons just ready to graduate and be nobodies.

How to Live Long.

In commemorating the 101st birthday of M. Chevreul, the famous French scientist, the Paris Illustré says:

The venerable patriarch has often been asked what secret he has used to reach his hundred years without infirmities and without a particle of change in his great intelligence. "I do not drink wine," answers he, imperturbably. This is a witty, evasive reply. We must seek for the cause of this happy longevity in a severe moral and intellectual hygiene. We address our respectful felicitations to the illustrious savant, and our wishes for his good health. His long life so fruitful, his green old age so active, is an eloquent lesson for youth. It proves that the best means to live and become old is to work constantly and much.

Definiteness in Knowledge.

The memory will only be content when there is that accuracy which gives absolute confidence. Suspicion of inaccuracy is the most vicious element in memory. It is more satisfactory not to recall a thing than to recall it in such a way as not to know what we have recalled—whether the recollection is reliable, where the memory of fact shades into fancy. It requires the best mental activity, the closest observation, the clearest thought, the sharpest discrimination, the cleanest classification, to give knowledge that definiteness which is indispensable to reliability in memory and accuracy in recollection.—Journal of Education.

*WINTER PARK, FLORIDA*

A beautiful location on the Water-shed or backbone of Florida, with nine beautiful lakes of running water; with the Hotel Seminole, accommodating 400 guests; with Rollins College and its 100 students, with an able faculty under Rev. E. P. Hooker, D. D., President. It is one of the most charming resorts in the State. Thousands have visited it to find health and recreation this winter, and none have gone away disappointed. Its educational advantages and its healthfulness, its location and its easy access by railroad makes it the most desirable and loveliest spot in Florida.

Having added a General Real Estate Department, those having property to sell, as well as those looking for investments, will find it to their advantage to give us a call. Property will be shown free of charge and maps, circulars, etc., promptly furnished on application to
