Illuminations

Welcome to the Fall 2016 issue of Illuminations: A Newsletter for Faculty.

This issue features two articles from faculty: Dr. Mel Stanfill (Assistant Professor of Texts and Technology and Digital Media) and Peggy Nuhn (Regional Campus Librarian).

We also have three pieces in our Special Features section: an interview with Dr. Tracy Wharton, Assistant Professor in Social Work, a peek at what your colleagues are reading, and a discussion on the future of academic libraries with several UCF library employees currently enrolled in library school.

Also included is an update on the 21st Century Library project.

I was lucky to be asked to contribute to Illuminations at the beginning of my UCF career, and to have served as co-editor for the last few years. We've made some big changes to the publication this year. The first is a move to STARS, our institutional repository. This move will allow us to publish articles in PDF format, and to better track readership for our authors. We've also expanded our focus to include all UCF faculty, not just new faculty.

I hope this publication will continue to grow and be strengthened by our diverse UCF community. If you'd like to provide feedback, I am eager to receive it, and I hope you'll consider submitting a piece for publication in the future.

Warm regards,
Carrie Moran, Editor
