THE SANDSPUR

ROLLINS COLLEGE, WINTER PARK, FL, AUGUST 29, 1996, VOL. 103 ISSUE 1

Class of 2000, Welcome!

Kim Hanisak
Editor-in-Chief

As the bells rang at 10:30am Tuesday morning, 420 freshmen and 65 transfer students headed into the Knowles Memorial Chapel for the 111th Matriculation Ceremony in Rollins College history.

After attending their second day of conference classes, the students assembled together to be officially welcomed and enrolled at Rollins.

As the students were assembled, they listened to the words of many people. Dean Briggs spoke on behalf of the faculty. He stressed the uniqueness of the Rollins' faculty in that they are "learners who love to teach, teachers who love to learn." He urged students to take advantage of their professors' desire for knowledge.

Both Dean Neilson and SGA President Mark Shanoff spoke on behalf of the current students of Rollins. Their message to the students: become involved. Dean Neilson, in one large breath, recited the 67 clubs and organizations available to students and challenged the new students to become involved in at least two of them. Shanoff, encouraged the students to ponder what he considers to be the three secrets to success at Rollins: involvement, academics, and routine. He urged all students to go out and get involved in Rollins life, for in his opinion it is the only true way to experience all Rollins has to offer.

Representing the class of 2000, Dean Erdman took time out to introduce the new students to one another and to the assembled faculty. He proceeded to run down the credentials of various students, highlighting their successes and amazing talents showing the true breadth of excellence of the freshman class.

President Bornstein, presiding over the convocation ceremony, delivered the official welcoming address. She stressed the significance of this point in time in Rollins history, a time where Rollins is moving towards the 21st century. She reflected back on times of old - when freshmen were required to wear "beanies" and salute the upperclassmen. She looked ahead to the future of Rollins into the 21st century - specifically to the many new campus developments of the coming year. From the new construction to the advances in the curriculum, Rollins is "on the move," Bornstein stated.

Since it's first class in 1895, some 111 years ago, Rollins has strived to provide an innovative and excellent learning environment. With the coming changes, Rollins shall further delve into this quest.

This is a new age. A time where Rollins will grow and expand. Welcome class of 2000. You are the future of Rollins. Good luck!

All new students were welcomed again and again throughout orientation weekend. Photo by Kim Hanisak.

On paper, the class of 2000 looks like many classes before them. They excelled in their high schools, won state and national competitions, held unique talents. However, this year, the class of 2000 brings more than just these things to Rollins. They bring with them a greater sense of cultural diversity than in years past.

This year, Rollins is welcoming 420 freshmen from 38 states and 23 countries including Japan, Mexico, Pakistan, South Africa, Canada, Paraguay, Sweden, Italy, and Iran.

"The geographical distribution is a statement of our interest in diversity in the student body," said Dean Erdmann.

The total enrollment for the fall semester is around 1,415 students. Women represent 57 percent of the student body and men represent 43 percent. Minorities make up 15 percent of the total enrollment.

Rollins has always been concerned with enhancing cultural diversity on campus. Currently, Rollins has many cultural groups to do just that. Based under the Cultural Action Committee (CAC), such organizations include the Black Student Union, the Latin American Student Association, the Muslim Student Association, the Jewish Student League, and many more.

While minorities still only make up 15 percent of the Rollins population, they are becoming more and more active on campus. Such activeness is needed to further enhance the cultural awareness and diversity that Dean Erdmann talked about. It is in essence part of what makes Rollins what it is today - a unique learning experience.

Class of 2000 to Build Habitat for Humanity House

Office of Public Relations
Special to The Sandspur

The freshman class of 2000 at Rollins will break ground this Saturday, Aug. 31 at noon on a Habitat for Humanity house in Winter Park.

Habitat for Humanity is a not-for-profit organization that uses volunteers to raise money and build houses for needy families in the vicinity of their chapter. In its 20th year, Habitat for Humanity has built thousands of homes across the country.

Following in the tradition of a partnership with the Winter Park chapter of Habitat for Humanity, the freshman curriculum during the fall semester will include building a home for a family in need. Dubbed Project 2000, freshmen will help raise the $30,000 necessary for construction supplies and will work at the building site on Saturdays' throughout the fall. The goal is to complete the four-bedroom, one and a half bath home by Christmas. It will be the third Habitat for Humanity house built with the assistance of Rollins volunteers.

Single mother Kim Fletcher and her family were chosen by Habitat to receive the home. They will be introduced during the groundbreaking ceremony at 810 W. Comstock Ave. Fletcher is currently working three jobs (70-100 hours a week) to support her children, ages 11, 13, 17, and a six-month old grandchild. The family is currently living in an apartment with no air-conditioning or carpeting.

Thaddeus Seymour, chairman of the Winter Park Habitat chapter, past Rollins President, and current Rollins English professor, said Project 2000 will provide an invaluable experience to freshmen.

"I feel the only reason to get an education is to use it to better serve humankind," said Seymour. "This project is a direct, tangible way to make a difference."

Under the agreement with Habitat, Fletcher must provide 500 hours of work on her own home and other Habitat homes in the area. This "sweet equity" serves as the down payment on her house. She will also be responsible for a 20-year, interest free mortgage loan with monthly payments totaling around $175 used to support the construction of further homes.

For more information on how you can become involved in the Rollins chapter of Habitat for Humanity, contact Professors Joe Stry or Thaddeus Seymour.

Rollins is On the Move: An Update on Construction

Office of Public Relations
Special to The Sandspur

With Rollins on the brink of one of the most exciting growth spurts in its history, the College wants to ensure that all employees and students are kept informed with up-to-date information on facility closings and construction schedules. To that end, the Office of Public Relations will periodically send updates on the various projects.

The first major undertaking will be the Cornell Campus Center. Construction on the project, which is to expand and renovate Rose Skillman Hall and connect it with the Mills Memorial Building, is scheduled to begin in mid-February 1997 and should take around 12 months. Once it's done, the College community will enjoy a state-of-the-art facility that will serve as the core of campus activities from food service to special events.

In anticipation of construction, some campus services will have to be temporarily relocated. The bookstore, C-store, Sub Connection, and Beans Deli will be moved during the Fall semester. Beans will move at the beginning of the spring semester.

The bookstore will move into the old Rudi's auto shop at 100 W. Fairbanks Ave. in mid- to late November.

The C-store and Beans Deli are expected to move into the Sullivan House over Thanksgiving Break and should be open by the time classes resume December 2.

Both the UpOver and DownUnder areas of the student center will close Dec. 2 through January so work crews can prepare the space to accommodate Beans upstairs and the Sub Connection downstairs. Soon after January Term, Beans will move to the UpOver and Sub Connection will open in the DownUnder. All food, including college catering, will continue to be prepared in the Beans kitchen throughout the renovation period.

As you can see, the campus will be hopping with activity this year. If it seems like it's going to be a time-consuming process, keep in mind that this is no small task. A lot of work is going to be involved in bringing the temporary spaces into compliance with City codes and health department regulations. Working out the logistics of such things as trash pick-up and shuttling food from the Beans kitchen to the Student Center also take time. In addition, plans for the Campus Center are still being finalized.

Many of you will probably have lots of questions about what will be happening this year. To prevent the spread of inaccurate information, the Office of Public Relations is serving as sort of an "information desk" on the issue. Please feel free to contact Kristin Hurst at ext. 2202, e-mail Khurst@Rollins.edu, or campus box 2729 with your questions.

Rollins is "on the move!"

Construction Timeline

August - November: 100 W. Fairbanks (Rudi's) to be renovated for bookstore occupancy.

September-November: Sullivan House to be renovated for C-store and Beans Deli occupancy.

Mid- to Late November: Bookstore moves to 100 W. Fairbanks (Rudi's).

Thanksgiving: C-store and Beans Deli move to Sullivan House and should be open by the time classes resume December 2.

December 2: UpOver, DownUnder closed.

December to Mid-January: Student Center undergoes renovations.

Late January: Beans opens in the UpOver, Sub Connection opens in Down Under.

Counseling Services Move to McKean

John Williams
Special to The Sandspur

The Personal Counseling Services for Rollins College has a new home -- after years of being housed in Elizabeth Hall, the counseling center is now located in the basement of McKean Hall.

Mark Freeman, director of Personal Counseling Services, said the new location will offer Rollins students both more privacy and better facilities since the entire area is dedicated to counseling services. When counseling services were located in Elizabeth Hall, it shared its space with health services, and Freeman said a shared waiting area "didn't work. Confidentiality for our clients was an issue."

The move across campus was made this summer.

Freeman, a licensed mental health counselor, said that many of the Personal Counseling Services' goals are aligned with those of Residential Life, and so being located in the same building as Residential Life made sense. He said the mental health and counseling staff was working on a student development model, and will be creating programming in conjunction with the residential life personnel.

The services which Personal Counseling Services provides will be uninterrupted. One-on-one personal counseling, group counseling, programming, and outreach will continue to expand. Freeman noted that in the new location client confidentiality will be further enhanced in McKean.

Some of the programming being planned for the Fall Term includes sexual assault, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, sexuality, and alcohol and drug education.

For those students, faculty, and staff familiar with McKean, the basement used to contain a classroom and three offices. The classroom is now the reception area, and the offices have been turned into areas for the counselors. Returning students will remember the McKean basement classroom as the place where they picked up their room assignments.

Joining Freeman are Barbara Devane, an intern from Rollins College's graduate program in counseling; Andrea Weisman, a graduate assistant who was formerly a Residential Life Hall Director; and Addie Leibin and John Williams, who are part-time mental health counselors working in the center.

Freeman said the offices' hours will be Monday through Friday, 9am until 5pm, and the hours may be expanded one day a week later in the term. An open house is planned for later in September. To make an appointment or get more information, please call 628-6340.

New Faculty Members Start With Class of 2000

Eleven new faculty members are joining Rollins this fall. Throughout the next few issues of The Sandspur, we will try to highlight each one individually. This week, however, we will give a brief overview of the new faculty members.

Julie Abella, from Florida International University, will serve as a teaching fellow in Foreign Languages. Abella earned her B.A. and M.A. degrees in Spanish from FIU, where she taught courses as a graduate assistant and adjunct.

Stephen Brown, a teaching fellow in the English Department, is expected to complete work this fall toward his Ph.D. in English from the University of South Florida. Brown previously taught English at USF and Hawaii Pacific University.

Nathalie Franco joins the Psychology Department as a visiting assistant professor. Franco earned her degrees at Florida International University. She most recently served as an adjunct faculty member at Nova Southeastern University, where she also served as a NIMA postdoctoral research fellow in the Anxiety Treatment Center.

Jim Fulton, who earned his B.A. from Northern Illinois University and his M.F.A. from the University of Connecticut, will join the theatre department. Fulton has extensive experience in the technical aspects of the theatre.

Suzanne Groth joins the Rollins English department as a teaching fellow. Groth earned her A.B. and M.A.T. degrees in English from Rollins.

Raja Fouad Halwani comes to Rollins from Syracuse University where he just finished his Ph. D. in Philosophy.

Jill Jones, joining the English department, recently completed her Ph. D. at Tufts University after obtaining her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of New Hampshire.

Lee G. Lines is joining the faculty this year as an assistant professor of environmental studies. Lines has taught at Arizona State University, where he earned his Ph. D. Lines earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Florida.

Thomas Ouellette joins the theatre department as a visiting professor. Ouellette has earned his M.F.A. from Catholic University and has acted in numerous stage, film, and television productions, and has taught several courses in acting at several schools, including the University of Massachusetts.

Also joining the theatre department, as a visiting associate professor, is James Prescott. Prescott has been teaching acting at Point Park College in Pittsburgh, PA since 1973. Last year, Prescott served as an instructor and guest director of the production of The Learned Ladies.

Erica Pyles comes to the Chemistry Department from the University of Texas Medical Branch, where she has served as a postdoctoral fellow since 1992. Pyles, who joins the Rollins faculty as a visiting assistant professor, earned her Ph.D. in Chemistry at the State University of New York at Binghamton.

Coming To Terms: Towards a Wonderful Rollins

Alan Nordstrom
Sandspur Staff

What should Rollins aim to be in the 21st Century? Does "a liberal education" need to be reinvented, perhaps in more pragmatic terms for students who will be living and working in the next millenium? These are questions the College is now raising with some vigor, particularly at the prompting of President Bornstein, who is setting up a national conference to address these issues, a conference involving numerous prominent figures in American higher education and scheduled to take place on campus next February.

I would like to see our faculty, administrators, and students using The Sandspur over the next several months to try out different ideas and reveal various viewpoints on this issue of reshaping our educational philosophy and retooling our curriculum so as to offer a stronger educational program than we do now. In that spirit, I'd like to express an oblique observation that rethinking our curriculum, while an important exercise, ought to follow a still greater priority.

What I think will make Rollins more successful and noteworthy as an academic institution than a new curriculum is something simpler to devise and far harder to achieve: a greater number of wonderful classes - just that.

I do not believe that the faculty needs to do backflips to concoct a novel rationale of studies here in the hopes of re-ordering the consciousness and fine tuning the cognitive skills of our undergraduates. Short of something utterly radical - like abandoning departments, cultivating interdisciplinary liasons, changing our grading system, and inventing a vibrant intellectual and cultural community at Rollins - I'd rather aim our efforts and ensuring that professors enjoy the latitude to teach what they believe is most needfull and nourishing to undergraduate minds, bodies, hearts, and souls.

Rollins should aspire to be a Wonderful College, a place of wonderful learning experiences, in and out of classes. If we fix our attention on some dry scheme, some Platonic Ideal of a curriculum, and try to cog each class into a grand master mechanism, we might well neglect what's vital and inspiring, the marvelous rapport among teachers and learners that grows wherever discussion is keen and learning is eager.

Let's first find out more about creating meaningful, engaging, and memorable courses. No, not "popular," "exciting," and "entertaining" courses that cheapen thought and slacken discipline; I mean challenging and rigorous courses that are also wonderfully stimulating or impressively clear, cogent, and compelling - even math, chemistry, and freshman rhetoric. I think that's possible.

Therefore, I say concentrate on hiring radiant and illuminating professors, those who warm and brighten classrooms with their ardor for learning, teaching, and igniting of students. Fiat Lux! Let the Wonderful times begin.

Calling All Students: Get Involved

Signs of the Times. Ballroom Dance Team. Rotaract. Alpha Tau Omega. Student Government Association. Sandspur. Muslim Student Association. R-Flag. Student Ambassadors. Biology Interest Group. Model United Nations. These are just a few of the many student groups and organizations available to Rollins students.

Regardless of what your interest might be, there is a group on campus to satisfy these interests. If, by some off change, you cannot find something that fits you just right, most likely there are other people who share your interests and would love to help you start a club about it. Seek out activities. Do not spend your days going from your room to class to Beans to your room. Look beyond the academic walls of Rollins and utilize it for its many extracurricular activities that it offers students. There are over 65 different student organizations, practically one for anything you can imagine (we even have a club devoted to people who love cigars!). So, how do you get involved. First step, visit the Student Activities Fair on Thursday, Sept. 12 at 4 p.m. on the Mary Jean Plaza. Representatives from most organizations will be present to inform you about their groups.

So get out there and get involved. Take advantage of what Rollins has to offer.

What's Your Opinion?

Question of the Week:

Did you watch the Democratic Convention? What did you think of it?

Each week, we'll pose a new question in The Sandspur. Check each week to find out what you and other Rollins students thought about the issues raised. The Sandspur wants to hear from you. What are you concerned with? What do you want to see changed? What do you think of what people have said in The Sandspur? Let your opinion be heard. Send your Letters to the Editor, Box 2742.

Annie Russell Theatre Set to Open 65th Season

Cole Porter's Anything Goes, the age-old tale of boy-meets-girl, opens the 65th season of the Annie Russell Theatre on October 11-19.

"This is a season of revealed secrets, challenged assumptions and countless surprises," said Annie Russell producing director S. Joseph Nassif. "From the music of Cole Porter to the explorations of family, from wit to wisdom, Shakespeare to David Parsons, the season is diverse, stimulating and provocative."

Among the season offerings, Pulitzer Prize-winning author Wendy Wasserstein creates a captivating portrait of three desperate sisters reuniting and coming to terms with their differences in The Sisters Rosensweig playing Nov. 29 through Dec. 7. Wasserstein, who wrote The Heidi Chronicles, spoke at Rollins last January as part of the annual Winter Term With the Writers program.

Winterfest IV, produced and directed by students of the theater and dance departments runs Jan. 22-Feb. 1 in the Fred Stone Theatre.

Brian Friel's Dancing at Lughnasa runs March 14-22. The Tony Award-winning play tells the story of five unmarried sisters, eking out their lives in a small village in Ireland during the festival of Lughnasa.

Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing, the classic duel of the sexes between Beatrice and Benedick, comes to the Annie Russell for a one-week run May 9-17.

The dance season series this year presents Stars of the American Ballet Oct. 25-26. The special engagement stars such luminaries as Valentina Kozova and Lindsay Fischer of the New York City Ballet and Christing Fegundus of the American Ballet theatre, who will perform the works of Petipa, Balanchine, and Sappington.

The internationally acclaimed Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble returns back by popular demand Feb. 28 and March 1.

Rollins Dance, an event showcasing the combined talents of Rollins, the School for Performing Arts, and Valencia Community College dancers, will be presented April 4-5.

For more information about season subscriptions, call the Annie Russell Theatre box office at 646-2145.

Museum Prepares for Busy Year

An exhibition of paintings by Maury Hurt, one of Florida's most influential artists, opens the season Sept. 21 at the Cornell Fine Arts Museum. This is the largest exhibition ever mounted of Hurt's works. "Maury Hurt: Time & Space" spotlights 48 of his paintings executed from 1970 to 1996, ranging from landscapes to still lifes, dreamscapes and portraits. The exhibition will run through Nov. 3.

Continuing through Sept. 15 at the Cornell will be "100 Years of Collecting, 1896-1996," featuring 100 objects from the museum's permanent collection of European and American art from the 14th century to 1995. "The Elaborate Frame," also on exhibit, focuses on dozens of elegant, gilded picture frames executed in Holland, France, Italy, and the United States.

"Nancy Graves: Excavations in Print," opening Nov. 9 and continuing through Jan. 12, will feature 41 large etchings, aquatints, and dry-points by the late Nancy Graves. This is the first comprehensive show of her prints. Graves, who was attuned to phenomena of the universe and abstract patterns in nature, re-created world history into enigmatic images drawn from various civilizations.

Six exceptional relief printmakers from throughout Florida will exhibit their work in "Beyond the Woodcut in Florida," Jan. 18 through March 2. Elizabeth Heller-Mason, Robert Hodgell, John McCaffery, Robert Skelly, Jack Toepke, and Barry Wilson will exhibit 50 works showing the variety and strength of the relief print in Florida.

"Masterworks from the Tobin Collection of Theatre Arts," March 7 to May 4, is a major survey of 53 designs for the stage, as well as costumes, festivals, and theatre architecture from the Renaissance to the present day. Represented are works from Italy, Flanders, France, Russia, England, and the United States, all selected from the famed Robert Tobin collection at the McNay Art museum in San Antonio, Texas.

Graduating art majors of Rollins will exhibit their paintings, prints, drawings, photographs, sculpture, and crafts in the 1997 "Senior Art Show," May 9-May 25.

"Treasures of the Chinese Nobility: The Chauncey P. Lowe Collection" opens May 31 and continues until Sept. 14. The Lowe collection features more than 50 objects from pre-dynastic China to the Shang through the Ching dynasties. The exhibition will run parallel with the Orlando Museum of Art's "Imperial Tombs of China" exhibition.
