Gambling and Killing: A Rollins Day at the Races

Kyle Stedman
The Sandspur

Each year Rollins College's Athletic Department receives money from bets placed on the greyhound races at the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club. Many local colleges, including UCF, Valencia, and Rollins, benefit from their "College Night" at the kennel club, during which a percentage of bets are donated to the school. Rollins receives approximately seven percent of the on-site bets made on their night, which translated into approximately $7,000 for the 1998-99 school year.

Carla and Bryan Wilson, representing the Greyhound Protection League, staged a protest to the fundraiser on Friday, January 31 outside Rollins. They carried signs with such slogans as "Rollins - Animal Cruelty" and "Blood $ for Colleges." The group had a right to protest on the public campuses of most local participating colleges. However, because Rollins is a private institution, they were not given permission to setup on school grounds, according to a newsletter the Wilsons distribute.

The dogs raced at such tracks as the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club are subject to inhumane conditions as well as parasitic infestations, such as fleas, ticks, worms, and other internal parasites, said the Wilsons. "The racing industry is still destroying an estimated 20,000 young healthy lives each year."

Kirk Nally, Assistant Athletic Director, said, "I don't think we would engage in a fundraiser we deemed to be hurtful or hateful." Nally explained that the funds made at the track go to the Tar General Booster Fund, which is not worked into the official budget. Rather, they go to such things as offsetting the annual sports banquet or supplying food and beverages at meetings.

"College Night" is not advertised to the students of Rollins. "It is solely for adults," said Nally, who emphasized that the fundraiser is only pushed towards the athletic boosters and their friends and family. Roughly one hundred individuals participated in the event this year, none of whom were students.

The Wilsons describe the annual event as a "dark little secret," which is being used as a "breeding ground for the next generation of gamblers.... The schools have the right to refuse to associate with the dog-killing industry, and the obligation to teach compassion and social responsibility instead of supporting a brutal and destructive industry."

Athletic Director J. Phillip Roach was quoted in an Orlando Weekly article on the subject as saying, "Obviously, we think what we're doing is appropriate. We think it's an evening of entertainment and of fun."

Nally, who graduated from Rollins in the class of 1993, said, "If I was not involved with the department, I would probably attend the evening as a booster along with my wife and friends."

Rollins Wins Best SGA

Alexia Brehm
The Sandspur

If you've been to the Rollins College webpage recently, you may have noticed familiar faces staring out at you from the middle of all those words. Our Student Government Association's President, Julia Boguslawski and Vice President, Greg Linton made the cover of Florida Leader, a popular magazine among Florida college students. Their appearance on the cover celebrates Rollins' SGA winning the coveted "Best Student Government" award. The magazine cover can also be seen on the web at <http://www.florida-leader.com>

This year's competition marked the 11th annual "Best of Florida Schools" awards. The 118 categories that schools were judged on included most active clubs, best campus newspapers, best college town and, of course, best SGA.

While Rollins won best SGA for private colleges, Embry-Riddle was a close runner-up, and Barry University earned an honorable mention. For public universities, the University of West Florida won best SGA with the University of North Florida as runner-up.

Inside Florida Leader, SGA activities and triumphs are discussed. The fight to open the Down Under at an early time each night, the superfluous ticketing brought on by the parking garage, as well as the "How Classy Are You?" program of the "Week of Difference," were all explained and discussed. The "Senate Retreat" was lauded as an act that made the newly elected senators and executive committee more familiar with the organization.

The article also mentions Pipeline, and the ease with which students can obtain their records, email, and campus news.

Tars Finish Season as NCAA South Regional Runners-Up

CLEVELAND, Mississippi—The Rollins College women's basketball (28-4) team finished their season with a 74-44 loss to Delta State University in the Sweet 16 of the NCAA South regional finals. Jill Razor led the Tars with 22 points while Tarniesha Nichols had 12 points. Jill Mitchell had eight rebounds. Rollins finishes as the NCAA South Regional Runners-up and the best record in Rollins women's basketball history.

The Tars were only trailing by 10 at halftime, 35-25. They only shot 31% from the floor in the first half. Delta State ran away with the game in the second half shooting 42% from the floor and 35% from three point range. Rollins finished the game shooting a cold 27% from the floor and 20% from three-point range, but shot 11-12 from the foul line for 91%. Delta State out rebounded the Tars, 46-41.

Jill Razor and Tarniesha Nichols both made the all-tournament team. Delta State now moves on to the Elite Eight at Pine Bluff, Arkansas.

Pope Ends Holy Land Pilgrimage

Jocelyn Noveck
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Pope John Paul II crowned his Holy Land sojourn Sunday with a stunning gesture to the Jews at their holiest site, shuffling slowly up to the Western Wall and placing a plea for forgiveness in a nook between its yellowed stones.

The gesture by the 79-year-old ailing pontiff was sure to become the most indelible image in a week of unforgettable moments.

It came on a whirlwind final day that saw the pope visit the sacred sites of all three faiths, all within the confines of Jerusalem's walled Old City, one of the most disputed patches of land in the world.

At the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, the pontiff knelt at the spot where tradition says Jesus was resurrected. At the Haram as-Sharif, the hilltop where Muslims say the prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven, he met with Jerusalem's top Islamic cleric.

But for Israelis, the highlight of the day, and indeed the week, was when the pope navigated the 86 steps it took him to reach the Western Wall and place a note in its stones, echoing a tradition of generations of Jewish worshippers. He had earlier in the week reached out to Jews at their Holocaust memorial, Yad Vashem. But this was a gesture at the holiest site of all Judaism.

The pope's words were from an address he made earlier this month in Rome, expressing sorrow over the past errors of his church. "God of our fathers, you chose Abraham and his descendants to bring your Name to the Nations," read the typewritten message. "We are deeply saddened by the behavior of those who in the course of history have caused these children of yours to suffer and, asking your forgiveness, we wish to commit ourselves to genuine brotherhood with the people of the Covenant."

After a private prayer, the pope made a sign of the cross, then momentarily placed a trembling hand on the rocks.

Reform Rabbis Mull Same-sex Unions

Gary D. Robertson
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Reform Judaism is poised for a vote that could make it the most influential U.S. religious group to support clergy who perform same-sex unions.

A resolution sanctioning commitment ceremonies is expected to come up at the Central Conference of American Rabbis convention starting Sunday in Greensboro.

In an unusual step, discussions will be held privately, a sign of the issue's volatility. A similar vote at the group's 1998 convention was dropped to head off potentially divisive debate.

The group's 1,800 members serve at least 1.5 million Reform Jews, the largest and most liberal of Judaism's three major branches in North America.

The resolution, introduced by some female rabbis and endorsed by the conference's resolution committee, reads: "The relationship of a Jewish, same gender couple is worthy of affirmation through appropriate Jewish ritual. In accordance with the principles of Reform Judaism, each rabbi should decide about officiation according to his/her own rabbinic conscience."

Supporters believe rabbis should affirm committed relationships between Jewish gays and lesbians as sacred, just like Jewish marriage. While the conference supports civil same-sex unions and approved openly gay rabbis a decade ago, some homosexuals say they still feel like second-class citizens at temple. The resolution would give religious legitimacy to same-sex unions.

"For a major religious group to pass a resolution that same-sex unions are worthy of affirmation through appropriate Jewish rituals, it would send a message to them that they are not abnormal," said Rabbi Paul Menitoff, the conference's executive vice president in New York.

Menitoff expects a majority of the 500 rabbis coming to Greensboro will approve the resolution.

President Derides Tobacco Decision

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Congress should give the Food and Drug Administration power to regulate tobacco, thus bypassing a Supreme Court ruling that the FDA lacks that power, President Clinton said Saturday.

"This is not a partisan issue. It's a health issue for our nation and a life-or-death issue for children," the president said in his weekly radio address.

The Supreme Court ruled last week that the FDA does not hold the authority to regulate tobacco, a legal substance. That makes Congressional action vital, said Clinton, speaking during a trip to South Asia.

"The ball is in Congress' court. They should... give the FDA's tobacco regulations the force of law," the president said.

A leading House Republican denied that intercession by Congress is the answer. Rep. J.C. Watts, R-Okla., urged Clinton to provide "moral leadership" by using the bully pulpit of the presidency to help reduce the incidence of smoking by children.

"Instead of putting forth a courageous program, like Mrs. (Nancy) Reagan's 'Just say no' campaign against drug use, President Clinton passes the buck and tells the American people, 'The ball is in Congress' court,'" Watts said.

The Supreme Court said in its 5-4 decision that by reversing a decades-old policy in 1996 and cracking down on cigarette sales to minors, the FEA was exercising an authority not granted it by Congress.

Clinton said the high court's decision was "a setback for the health of our children." But he noted that the majority opinion labeled smoking "perhaps the most significant threat to health in the United States."

"The American people know this. They've known it for a long time," Clinton said. "Preventing our children from smoking is our common responsibility. It's a fight we can win, and one we must win."

Clinton wants Congress to grant the FDA authority to enforce regulations that prevent children under 18 from buying tobacco products and impose new regulations that would end tobacco advertising aimed at young people.

Suspect Arrested in Costa Rica Killing of Ann Arbor Resident and Antioch College Student

Jodie Kaufman
Michigan Daily (U. Michigan)

(U-WIRE) ANN ARBOR, Mich. — A 16-year-old suspect was identified late Sunday night in the murder of Ann Arbor resident Emily Eagen and her friend Emily Howell of Kentucky.

Eagen had been in Costa Rica for several days visiting Howell, who was studying abroad from Antioch College in Ohio, when their bodies were discovered on a highway March 13 many miles from their severely burned rental sports utility vehicle.

As of yesterday, the family could only report that one suspect had been arrested. Eagen's father, Charles, said the U.S. Embassy has informed the family of the arrest of the 16-year-old male suspect.

"I have no idea when more information will come, it comes when it comes and it is painfully slow," Eagen said.

Officials at the U.S. State Department's Office of Central American Affairs said yesterday that the arrested minor was in possession of a gun that is a ballistic match to the bullets found in the bodies of Howell and Eagen, who was expecting to attend the University in its non-degree program next fall.

The Writing Center Wants You!

The Writing Center is accepting applications for the job of peer writing consultant for fall '00. Applications are available on the second floor of Mills.

Peer consulting requires a commitment of 7 hours per week — 6 hours (paid) and 1 hour of staff meeting (worth course credit). The pay is $5.75 an hour, but the job offers plenty of perks — including a central location, a friendly community, and an opportunity to develop your own writing skills as you help your peers.

In addition to excellent reading, writing, and listening skills, consulting requires reliability, patience, empathy, and tact. Our goal is not to fix flawed papers but to challenge writers of all abilities, at any stage of the writing process, to improve their own work.

A Letter to the Editor

On the loss of our first sailing Coach, Bud Morrow

To the Editor:

A unique institution, such as Rollins, sometimes draws unique individuals, and with our location and aquatic heritage, we have been blessed with many colorful characters in the world of water sports. None match the legacy of Clark "Bud" Morrow.

I knew of Bud before I arrived here; I sailed against him in college when he was the coach at Annapolis. It was my fortune to take a sabbatical replacement one semester and be assigned to teach the sailing classes, during the grand opening of the brand new boathouse, the house that Bud built, that fall.

Bud did not accept my credentials. Everyday, he would quiz me across the hall by barking sailing questions, from tactics to "What's the second sail on the main mast on a three masted square rigger?" By the second day, I had put up charts and graphs all over my office and was barking answers back, and he liked that.

Then, he got to the good stuff. He would just start talking, and I would hear of when he ran away from home at 15, sailing 2,000 miles to Tahiti in a 20 foot open boat, or sitting in with Duke Ellington in Chicago, Bud playing a mean jazz Bass Fiddle (Coach Morrow was professionally recorded).

Then, he would tell me what Pappy Boyton was really like, "a mean, drunken bum..." when he fought alongside the black sheep squadron in the Pacific, as a Marine fighter pilot.

He played polo (the kind on horses) as a journalism major at UCLA. Bud worked for the CIA and still had top clearance; he taught Japanese here on the side. He sailed around the world twice single-handed, and was one of the last great square rigger captains, licensed world-wide to Master the tall ships, a true "tar."

But the best story he told would have to be his life in full. I have made it a priority in my teaching to try and tell all students that life is for living. Clark "Bud" Morrow, the first sailing coach at Rollins College, was a master of living life. What an honor it was to know him.

Dear Dea

Dear Dea,

I feel kind of silly writing to you, but I really need some advice and I'm not sure where to turn. I have been feeling really lonely for a long time and I find that I really get down on myself about things. I worry that I'll be lonely forever and it scares me. Everybody else seems to have so many friends and be so happy here. Sometimes I'm hurting so badly that it almost feels like physical pain. What can I do?

— In Despair in Gale

Dear In Despair,

First of all, I'm very happy that you decided to write. It takes a lot of courage to reach out, instead of holding in all of your pain.

Loneliness is not a defect or a personality characteristic that cannot ever change. In fact, loneliness can, and often does, change. Feeling lonely is a very common experience. National surveys indicate that 1/4 of all adults experience painful loneliness at least every few weeks and the incidence among adolescents and college students is even higher.

Remember, loneliness is neither a permanent state nor "bad" in itself. Instead, try to think of it as an indication of important needs that are not currently being met in your life. When important needs are not being met, it is important to take action.

Begin by identifying which needs are not being met in your life at this time. It is possible that your loneliness is a result of more than one need not being met. It may involve the need to develop a circle of friends or even one close friend. It may involve learning to do things for yourself, without friends. Or it may involve learning to feel better or more confident about yourself in general.

Whatever it is, it is okay and is not permanent. Don't define yourself as a lonely person because no matter how bad you feel, your loneliness will decrease or even disappear when you focus attention and energy on needs you can currently meet and when you learn to develop new ways to meet your other needs.

Don't wait for your feelings to get you going. Rather, get going and good feelings will inevitably catch up with you.

Dear Dea,

I've been feeling really down lately and my mom is really worried that I'm depressed. She keeps trying to get me to go out and get some fresh air and get some exercise, but I just don't feel like it and I don't think it will do anything to change my mood. What do you think?

— Lethargic in Ward

Dear Lethargic,

Your mom may be smarter than you think. Recent studies have shown that people who were clinically depressed who walked, ran, or performed some strength training three times a week for 20 to 60 minutes were significantly less depressed after five weeks. When people maintained their workout regime, improvements were still noted even one year later.

Although it is unclear how physical activity keeps the mind clear, there is speculation that exercise may alter brain chemistry. Another theory is that it increases self-confidence because exercise gets people out in an environment where they receive positive reinforcement from other people.

In sum, it may be a good idea to try your mom's advice and get some exercise. In addition, consider calling the counseling center for an appointment. You don't have to suffer with the blues anymore.

— Dea

Romeo Must Die

Marc Richfield

The Sandspur

After having seen Jet Li's beautiful and brutal martial arts ass-kicking in Lethal Weapon 4, I was sold. I would have seen his American debut as lead actor, had he been in a movie about the compassion of girl scouts. But he wasn't. Romeo Must Die not only presents an ingeniously-shot ballet of beatings, but also boasts enough intelligence to keep viewers interested in the story that occurs between the pummeling.

Gracious director, Andrzej Bartkowiak decided not to interpret the story of Romeo and Juliet too literally: the similarity ends at the circumstance of two rival families from which a man and woman like each other. This time, the families are interracial (Asian and African-American), and the romance between the couple (Jet Li and Aaliyah, who acts as well as she looks) is severely downplayed.

The feuding families put on airs of civility in order to continue a business deal that involves the illegal obtaining of waterfront properties that will, in time, create a large rewarding payoff. Accidents will happen, however, and the hostility escalates as family members inexplicably die. Full of racial overtones (i.e. a white entrepreneur controls both the Asian and African-American families' proceedings), the story develops until it is clear that each family is actually betraying itself.

The real fun of Romeo Must Die, of course, is the fighting. With a style that reminds one of The Matrix, had it been a lot more subtle, the action is filmed with an excitement that makes anyone with testosterone jump up and applaud after each sequence. The funniest and most excessive scene in the movie occurs when members from the black family pick up a game of football and convince Jet Li to learn how to play. Li, trying to impress Aaliyah, receives the ball and is mercilessly crushed the first few times. After wising up, he is able to score after kicking, tripping, and elbowing everyone down-hard.

For a martial arts movie, Romeo Must Die lingered a bit too long in its story development. Nonetheless, the acting is good all around, and Bartkowiak interestingly communicates that bad guys aren't always who you're told they are. In the end, Jet Li is the true VIP, and with any luck he will continue to fill in where Brandon Lee left off.

Rollins Softball Tars on the Offense

Playing ten games during the week, the Rollins softball team struggled to find offensive consistency. The team scored 14 runs in three victories, but managed only five runs in their seven losses.

Sophomore pitcher Hagen Hastings was a major victim of the inability to hit consistently as she registered a 2-3 record on the mound despite allowing only four earned runs in 34.1 innings of action (0.82 ERA). She had 25 strikeouts and surrendered only 24 hits. She allowed only one unearned run with eight strikeouts in a 6-1 victory over St. Thomas. She allowed only three hits in pitching a 5-0 shutout victory over Concord.

In her three losses, Hastings allowed only four runs and 17 hits. She pitched seven shutout innings against Saint Leo before surrendering the winning run in the eighth inning. She allowed Florida Southern just one run in a 1-0 loss.

Offensively, the Tars had their best performances against St. Thomas and Concord. In the 6-1 victory over St. Thomas, Hastings and Erin Cleveland each drove home two runs. Lora Bonifacio added two hits as the Tars had eight hits in the game.

In sweeping two from Concord, Rollins scored eight runs while pounding out 18 hits. A four-run third inning in the first game helped the Tars to a 5-0 win. Candice Hays had a two-run home run in the inning and also added a double in the game.

Miranda Watford also drove home two runs in the game. Lora Bonifacio and Erin Cleveland each had two hits as the Tars won the second game 3-0. Michelle Wakeman allowed only six hits in recording the shutout victory.

No Spring Break for Women's Golf

The Rollins women's golf team took full advantage of the Spring Break Week as they competed against strong competition in a pair of tournaments. The team struggled on the second day of the Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational to finish in 11th position.

However, Rollins finished ahead of Division II competition Lynn University and Longwood College. At the Hatter Spring Fling, they finished the second round with their lowest round of the spring to place eighth against primarily Division I competition.

Freshman Jennifer Beames was the most consistent performer for the Tars during the two events. She finished in 16th place at the Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational with a two round score of 155 (79-76). She tied for 10th place at the Hatter Spring Fling with a two round score of 156 (79-77).

The other freshman standout for the Tars, Lyndsey Devenish, rebounded from a poor performance at the Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational to finish tied for 6th overall at the Hatter Spring Fling. She tied for 43rd place at the Peggy Kirk Bell Invitational with a two round score of 163 (81-82). At the Hatter Spring Fling she tied for sixth with a two round score of 154 (76-78).

9th Inning Grand Slam Gives #3 Tampa Victory Over Tars

Winter Park, FL — Matt Smith's grand slam home run in the top of the ninth inning gave the #3 University of Tampa Spartans (29-5/8-1) an 8-6 win over the Rollins College Tars (20-16/3-3). Justin Sherrod led the Tars going two for four, with a grand slam home run, for four RBI's. Tampa's Eric Sims had three hits for two RBI's. David Muley picked up his first win for Tampa with Chris Sutton recording his fifth save.

Tampa took a 1-0 lead in the third inning. Sean Quigley doubled down the left field line and then advanced to third on a Mike Rabelo single. Quigley then scored when Sims singled to right field.

Mark O'Sullivan singled up the middle to start the fifth inning. Steven Castino's sacrifice bunt moved O'Sullivan to second. O'Sullivan then came in and scored the first of five runs on Brad Vaughn's double down the left field line. Jason Cloar was walked and then Barton Vaughn singled to load the bases. Three pitches later, Rollins was up 5-1 on Sherrod's grand slam home run (10th of the year).

Justin Sherrod hit four home runs, one a grand slam, in three games against Tampa for nine RBI's. He now has 10 home runs for the season and 45 career home runs.

Rollins added another run in the sixth inning. Josh Muse singled up the middle and advanced to second on a Mike Rabelo passed ball. Brad Vaughn's double to left field scored Muse to take a 6-1 lead.

The Spartans crept back into the game in the seventh inning scoring two runs and chopping the Tars lead to three. Ronnie Bohinski homered for the first run with one out. After Quigley flied out to Sherrod, Rabelo hit a two-out double to right center field. Sims then singled Rabelo for the second run.

David Bean continued his relief into the ninth inning where he walked the first two batters. Sims then singled through the right side of the infield to load the bases. Ronnie Merrill reached first on a Muse throwing error that scored Quigley for Tampa's first run in the ninth inning. Joe Sapp then came in to relief for Bean, but the damage was already done. Smith nailed Sapp's fourth pitch for a grand slam and the win.

Barton Vaughn pitched 6.2 innings recording 10 strikeouts and only allowing three runs. Bean came in to relieve for 1.4 innings and allowed four runs on two hits.

Rollins will be in action again on Friday, March 31st, when they host # 17 Lynn University for a three game series at Alford Stadium.
