Your Librarian

Hello, I'm Carrie Moran and I am taking over as the Women's and Gender Studies Librarian. I have a BA in Psychology from the University of North Carolina Wilmington, and an MLIS from Drexel University. In my life I've identified as riot grrl, and am a proud third-wave feminist. I am excited to work with you and your classes. I am happy to provide resources to you and your students, work in your face to face or online classes, and purchase materials to support the program. The best way to get in touch with me is to email me at carrie.moran@ucf.edu

New Collection

Women & Social Movements in the United States –
Scholar's Edition

The Library is happy to announce that our technology fee for this collection from Alexander Street Press has been awarded! From Alexander Street Press "The database/journal is organized around document projects, works of scholarship that link an interpretive essay to 30 or more related primary documents, leading users step by step from discovery to contextual understanding. Four new document projects are added every year."

It will appear in our Database list soon, but can now be accessed using this URL:

Women's and Gender Studies Research Guide

http://guides.ucf.edu/womens\_studies

The Women's and Gender Studies Research guide contains custom information that is relevant to you and your students. Please let me know if you'd like a page for your specific course.

Also, we are doing a beta test of an LTI for the Webcourses platform where you can directly embed the guide, page on the guide, or a box from the guide in your course. Please let me know if you are interested in trying it out this semester!

Syllabus Statement

Your students (hopefully) read their syllabus, and refer to it throughout the semester. This is a great place to include library information. Here's a statement you can copy & paste directly to your syllabus or an email, announcement, etc.

Your best library resource is your Women's and Gender Studies Librarian, Carrie Moran (carrie.moran@ucf.edu). She can meet with you individually to discuss your research needs, or answer questions via phone and email. You can find out more about her at: <http://library.ucf.edu/staff/moran-carrie/>
