Notice something different about Webcourses?

During the summer, CDL implemented a new Webcourses feature in partnership with the UCF Libraries. You now see an item in your course's left side menu labeled "Research Guide". This integration is on by default for each class and may be adjusted through course settings.

"Research Guide" embeds the most relevant UCF Libraries LibGuide into your course, providing your students with easy access to countless articles, ebooks, videos, etc.. The depth of the guide may range from a general review of literature in the program in which the course is taught, to a guide curated specifically for your course.

If your Webcourse does not currently have a course-specific guide, OR you would rather it be linked to a different guide, please contact me to request a customized guide or provide feedback.

Value of Libraries

Results of a 2014-2015 library study investigating use of library services and student success (as defined by GPA) revealed that students who used one or more of five library services—library instruction, InfoLit learning modules, the library Canvas course, study room use, and in-depth research consultations— had higher end-of-semester course grades (M=3.20, SD=0.95, N=273,137) compared to their counterparts who did not use library services (M=3.05, SD=1.05, N=376,713, where N is number of credit hours).

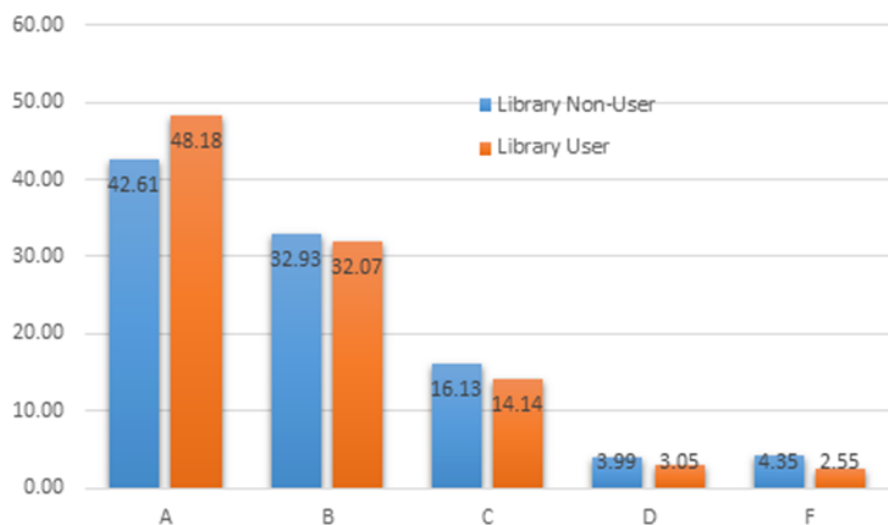

Table: Distribution of Grades. 48.18% of library users receiving A grades compared to 42.61% of library nonusers; nonusers received more B, C, D, and F grades

Thanks to Dr. Morgan Wang (Director of Data Mining) and Statistics graduate student Kanak Choudhury for their data analysis. For further information about this study or Textbook Affordability @UCF, contact Penny Beile, PBeile@ucf.edu.

UCF librarians are working closely with a number of campus stakeholders – including faculty and CDL instructional designers – to promote adoption of free or low cost course materials. Large scale studies have reported that students who take classes with free or low-cost course materials tend to have higher course grades, take more credit hours, and achieve a shorter time to graduate than students who do not.

The Libraries have created a research guide, “Textbooks, Textbook Alternatives & Course Readings from Library Resources” to assist both faculty and students with alternatives to full price textbooks. Check here to browse thousands of full-text online books that can be used in the classroom or by individual students to supplement class readings.
