UCF to Get OK for Capital Improvements

The Board of Regents is expected to approve some $26 million worth of capital improvements for UCF’s academic facilities in its meeting Nov. 3 in Miami. The improvements, slated for the next three years, include the expansion of the computer center, building the first phase of CEBA III and planning for a new classroom building.

The university’s big line items are slated for 1991-92 and 1992-93 with a total of $6.4 million allotted for planning and construction of the computer center expansion and $10 million for building and equipping Phase A of the CEBA III Research Center. In addition, $12.2 million will be voted for remodeling the Humanities and Fine Arts Buildings and $1.5 million for remodeling the Administration.

Robert L. Belle Jr., director of the Office of Minority Student Services at the University of Central Florida since 1979, has been given additional responsibilities as assistant dean of undergraduate studies.

He will continue to administer the OMSS, and in addition will be responsible for developing, coordinating, and implementing recruitment and retention of minority students, said Charles M. Micarelli, associate vice president for academic affairs and dean of undergraduate studies.

An Orlando native, Belle has 31 years experience in education. Prior to joining UCF, he was an administrator and member of the faculty at Sieron Hall University.

He was instrumental in the initiation and development of the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP) at UCF, an alternative admissions program for minority students.

In a recent interview Belle explained that when the university started the OPR there had never been such a program at UCF. The program, Belle explained, "looks at other criteria in terms of admisibility of students." For example, he said, a student may score low on the SAT but his high school grades may be high. High school guidance counselors are very important to the program, Belle explained, because they recommend many of the students who have the potential to benefit from the program.

The program then allows these high school seniors to enroll in UCF the summer following graduation. They live on campus, take required course work and undergo intensive advising. Belle said the program has continued to attract more and more minority students. Last summer’s class was the largest in the program’s nine year history.

Belle said one good feeder program for the OPR is the Academic Enrichment Program which brings high school students on campus once a month for enrichment activities. Belle said, "If we can get them here and have them meet people they are more likely to return as college students."

Building in 1991-92. The BOR staff recommendation also includes $250,000 in 1992-1993 for planning construction of a new classroom building as well as $955,250 for physical plant expansion.

The funding requests are line items on the BOR's PECO (Public Education Capital Outlay) Project Priority List. PECO dollars are used for most university facilities and are generated by utility taxes. Funding for non-academic facilities, such as the Student Union, comes from the Capital Improvement Trust Fund, which is generated from student fees. All projects are subject to legislative approval.

Other university requests include a total of $5.4 million in 1990-91 for equipment in the art complex ($660,000); infrastructure for the Applied Research Center at Daytona Beach ($400,000); equipment for a joint-use facility at Daytona Beach ($100,000); extension of roads, parking and utilities on campus ($1.7 million); renovation of the chemistry building ($1.7 million); and remodeling Howard Phillips Hall ($816,800).

UCF has requested $300,000 in CITT funds to be matched by private gifts for construction of the proposed $600,000 international student/cultural center. Private donations for the project total some $250,000. Nelson Ying, a businessman and philanthropist who was born in Shanghai, China, has donated $250,000 to the construction of the center.

Freshmen." He said it means a lot to those students to see and meet UCF students, faculty and administrators.

Belle has taken steps to continue a mentoring program for minority students. The program will pair minority students with professionals from the community. These community leaders would share their experiences and expertise with the students. Belle said the community professionals would not necessarily be minorities themselves. He said the idea is a modification of a program initiated by the Student Government Association.

He said he is looking forward to the challenges of his new responsibilities, adding that his job is made easier by an excellent staff and cooperation and support from campus personnel.
