Soviet Brought Glasnost To UCF

The University of Central Florida has joined the Oak Ridge Associated Universities (ORAU), a consortium of 55 universities exploring opportunities in science and technology.

In accepting UCF's membership into the consortium, President Steven Altmann told ORAU officials, "The University of Central Florida is immensely pleased to join the Oak Ridge Associated Universities as a research partner. ORAU's collaborative approach to the solution of technological and scientific problems offers an unparalleled opportunity for our university scientists to learn and contribute as they unite with colleagues on vital research tasks."

UCF joins a membership that includes Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, Georgia Institute of Technology, Vanderbilt University, Southern Methodist University, Rice University, Emory University, Clemson University, University of Georgia, Georgia Institute of Technology, Louisiana State University and West Virginia University.

Both a federal laboratory and a consortium of universities, ORAU's efforts focus on four major areas including science/engineering education, training and management.

UCF Joins Science/Tech Consortium

The faculty Senate voted Thursday in favor of a resolution that calls for the university to disengage itself from organizations practicing discrimination. If the resolution is adopted as policy, it could mean the loss of donations from clubs or organizations who discriminate against women, blacks or other minorities.

At least one donor to UCF, the Orlando University Club, openly admits to not allowing women or blacks in its membership, although there is no written policy. Author of the resolution and political science professor, Mark Stern, referring to the Orlando University Club said, "They have two token Jews, no women, no blacks and to the best of my knowledge no Hispanics."

Gennady Gerasimov

He is an author, ambassador and only the second official spokesman out of Moscow. He met his current boss while both were studying law at Moscow University. The Boston Globe, "I got disappointed with international law, because if's a weak law. The UN Charter is not enforced. So I went into journalism."

He worked for New Times weekly and a trade-union paper before being sent to Prague to edit the official magazine of the communist parties known in English as World Marxist Review. He spent three years as an adviser to the powerful Central Committee and from 1972-78 he was a diplomatic correspondent in the United States. Later he was appointed editor and chief of the Moscow News then being offered his current position as top press agent for Gorbatchev.

Gerasimov will discuss the successes and weaknesses of glasnost and perestroika. He will give a noon address in the Student Center Auditorium with a reception to follow in the courtyard.

Gerasimov's speech begins a week-long string of events which include a founder's day convocation on April 26 and the inauguration of President Altmann on April 27.

Senate: 'No' to Discrimination

Truus Pauley, history professor, questioned the practicality of any such a broad resolution. He suggested instead a resolution that would allow the university to accept gifts from any group but it would urge faculty members to be aware of the policies of organizations they may be asked to speak at or participate in. The resolution was voted down.

The accepted resolution reads: "It is not appropriate for the university to engage in any activity which may lend support or give credibility to any club or private institutions which knowingly engage in discriminatory practices on the basis of race, gender, ethnic or religious preferences."

The resolution passed 32-2.

TO: Faculty and Staff FROM: Mary McKinney, Dir. of Student Financial Aid SUBJECT: Scholarship Offer

Many students have received an official-looking letter from an organization called The Academic Council on Financial Assistance. I would like you to be aware that this organization is a private, for-profit concern — not a government agency as the letter would lead students to believe.

The letter guarantees a student's eligibility — not the receipt of a scholarship offer. There are actually many books currently available from which such information can easily be obtained without charge. The UCF library keeps such resources at the Reserve Desk and the UCF Scholarship brochure for 1990-91 will be available later this month.

The UCF Financial Aid Office has had no official dealings with The Academic Council of Financial Assistance, but we have learned that the group is under investigation. Students should therefore approach the services offered with caution and make sure, if they decide to respond to the letter, that they know exactly what they are getting and how much it will cost.
systems, medical sciences and energy/environment systems. The work takes on many different forms. The system is considered an economic generator that invents everything from basic research in biochemistry and microbiology to programs for pre-college science and math students to environmental assessments of government and industrial nuclear facilities.

UCP's membership into the prestigious consortium means opportunities for collaborative research, technology transfer activities, technical assistance and training, and education. For those interested in further information there is an ORAU packet on reserve in the library.

From left UCF's Michael Bass, vice president for research; and President Steven Altman accept membership into Oak Ridge Associated Universities from ORAU's Jon M. Veigel, president and CEO; and Eugene Spejewski, vice president and chairman of training and management systems division. ORAU is both a national laboratory and consortium of 55 universities exploring opportunities in science and technology.

This year's Central Florida Engineer of the Year is Christian Bauer, chairman of computer engineering at UCF. The honor was bestowed at the annual Engineers Week awards banquet Feb. 24 sponsored by nine engineering societies. Bauer has been a member of the UCF faculty since 1970, and recently completed seven years of service on the Orange County Planning and Zoning Commission, the last two years as chairman.

The UCF Report
Your campus events are important and The UCF Report will try to be there to cover them given advance information. Unfortunately, because of time restraints and space limitations, The UCF Report cannot always immediately publish photos from the many events we cover. Therefore, when space allows, we will include as many of the photos as possible. The following is a compilation of photos of events from the past several weeks.

During the recent UCF International Space Policy Symposium Feb. 2, Soviet Cosmonaut Georgi Grechko spoke about Soviet space exploration. As a flight-engineer, Grechko took part in three space flights, once for 96 days.

Roy E. Connally, retired professor, places a nameplate bearing his name on the door of the new psychology student library at a ribbon cutting ceremony Feb. 14. The student library, located in Phillips Hall, Room 227, contains approximately 200 textbooks and some 500 journal issues. Students in the psychology honor society, Psi Chi, organized a book drive to equip the library.

Robert Belle, director of minority student services and asst. dean of undergraduate studies, and wife Maitina Hayes share their collection of art reflecting traditions of the African-American culture. The collection was on exhibit in the Library during February as part of the celebration of Black History Month.

Julian Bond, former Georgian statesman and civil rights leader, spoke to a campus group Feb. 14 as part of the celebrations of Black History Month.
