DIAMOND'S HIDDEN GEMS

Research Consultations

The University of Central Florida places a lot of emphasis on research for faculty and students alike. While the UCF Library has an abundance of resources available for student use, there is an underused research-minded service that many of us can benefit from.

Offered by UCF Librarians, you can sign up for a research consultation.

Read on below to figure out what these meetings consist of and how you can sign up for one!

A Research Consultation is a one-on-one appointment with a librarian for extensive, in-depth research assistance.

The most efficient way to set up an appointment is to request a specific subject librarian. Subject librarians are essentially UCF librarians who specialize in a designated discipline, like computer science, nursing, photography, and so much more. These librarians are the most familiar with subject-relevant resources and thus are beneficial in providing instruction support for researchers.

You can schedule a research consultation by navigating to the appointment page and filling out the designated form.

Some things to keep in mind:

- Weekend appointments are not available
- Consultations are generally conducted face-to-face, but distance learners may be accommodated via telephone, online chat, or email.
- Please allow at least 48 hours for requests to be processed
- To accommodate entire classes, request an instruction session

If you have any questions, feel free to ask for help in person at the Research & Information Desk, or call/chat using the Ask Us service,.
