JAMES ALEXANDER ROBERTSON

Dr. Robertson, known to most of us so well, died on March twenty-first. State archivist of Maryland and managing editor of Hispanic-American Historical Review, we Floridians knew him as a former director of the Florida Historical Society and as editor of the exceedingly valuable series of volumes relating to Florida's history published (1922-1933) by the Florida State Historical Society through the interest of Mr. John B. Stetson, Jr. Though the greater part of his work in Florida history was done in Washington, he spent much time in research in Florida and endeared himself to our officers and directors and many of our members. An account of and a tribute to his unsurpassed contribution to the writing of our State's history will be included in an early issue of the Quarterly.
