Lyden, Mansfield To Vie For Presidency

Indies To Elect Representatives On Wednesday

Not only the Student Council officers, but also the publication heads and the independent Council representatives will be elected during the voting in the Student Center on Wednesday, April 8.

Publications offices that will be decided at the polls are Flamingo and R Book editorships. Jody Bilbo and John Hickey are vying for the editorship of the literary magazine, while Maggie Carrington and Robert Todd are running for R Book editor.

Putting into effect an amendment made to the Student Association constitution last spring, the independent Council representatives will be chosen at the polls by all unaffiliated or independent students.

In the past, Council representatives for the independents have been elected by the independent social groups, but last spring's Council members felt that more unaffiliated students would have a voice in their representation if the representatives were chosen at the polls.

Independents will elect two representatives each for the men and the women.

Candidates for the men's representatives are Jim McKee, Bob Rauch, and Dave Van Schaick; Dixie Forrestal, Tina Levin, Liz Moulton, and Phyllis Zatlin are running for women's representatives.

A sophomore, McKee is a pre-med major. A junior, Rauch is on the Sandspur staff and is a member of Chapel Choir. Van Schaick, who is secretary of Rollins Scientific Society, is also a junior.

Forrestal, a freshman, has worked for the Sandspur. A sophomore, Levin appeared in Shakespeareana, is a proctor at Elizabeth Hall, and is helping reorganize the Studio Club.

A house officer at Elizabeth and co-treasurer of the Indie Women, Moulton is a freshman. Zatlin, a junior who has served as Council representative for the past two years, is past corresponding secretary of Council and current chairman of the Campus Improvements committee.

Council Tables Amendment

Three amendments concerning publications appropriations procedure, the Fiesta "closed time," and the "BYO" aspect of the Saturday night dance were considered by Student Council at Monday night's meeting.

On the former matter, Council voted to table the following amendments to the Student Association Constitution for a vote at next Monday's meeting. These amendments were drawn up at a meeting of the Council appropriations committee with representatives from Publications Union:

1. Publications Union shall meet at least once a term with the Student Association comptroller and president of the Student Association in attendance. Business managers or editors of each publication shall turn in a monthly financial report to the comptroller.

2. An estimation of the different publications budgets shall be submitted to the comptroller at the beginning of fall term each year.

3. If a publication fails to submit a monthly financial report, or if this report is inconsistent with the estimated budget, the Publications Union will be asked to take action and make a report to Council within a week. If the Union fails to do so, Council shall take appropriate action.

Student Council Offices To Be Decided In Voting On April 8

Six students have been announced as candidates for Student Council offices, two for each of the three elective positions.

Vying for the presidency of Council are Jim Lyden and Dick Mansfield.

Lyden, treasurer and past Council representative of Sigma Nu, is president of the junior class. The only junior member of ODK, he has played on the soccer team, is on the varsity crew, and is a member of "R" Club. He has worked this year on the circulation staff of the Sandspur.

"I intend to initiate a program whereby the students will have a greater role in the government of the college," Lyden explains.

"Student Councils of the past have been too much concerned with demanding loudly rights and privileges instead of showing that they are capable of using these rights.

"We as students cannot just ask for and expect to receive these rights and privileges. We have to work in order to show that we are capable of handling more mature problems than those which the Council has had to contend with of late."

Present Council vice-president Mansfield, also a junior, has served as vice-president of Delta Chi and president of his freshman class. He is a member of the Library and Vespers committees.

A member of Student Council for three years, Mansfield is automatic chairman of the Social committee and the Election Board and is on the Student-Faculty Disciplinary Committee.

"I believe the job of Council presidency takes a great deal of training and experience, and I feel I possess these qualifications," Mansfield states.

Toledo

Aufhammer

"I am standing on my record and the record of the past Council. Its record has been a good one but there is still room for improvement.

"I think that the Council comptroller should have control of the Student Association financial books, which are now controlled by the administration.

"If I am elected, I intend to initiate a committee on student leadership to promote participation in student organizations.

"Most of all, the student government should cooperate with the administration, but the students come first; Council's primary aim should be to represent the students and work for their general welfare."

The candidates for the position of vice-president are sophomores Bruce Aufhammer and Tony Toledo.

Baumrind

Lewis

Sigma Nu representative Aufhammer was vice-president of his freshman class and copy editor of the R Book, and he served during fall term this year on the editorial board of the Flamingo.

Chairman of the Fiesta committee, Aufhammer has also been on the Pelican and Orientation committees this year and is an alternate on the Student-Faculty-Trustee committee.

President and song director of Lambda Chi, Toledo has also served as Council representative and a member of the Internal Improvements Committee.

Toledo, president of the sophomore class, will grace the float in tomorrow morning's parade.

PREPARING FOR FIESTA last Tuesday night was Sue Barclay, out-going Gamma Phi president. Finishing touches were being put on the crepe paper Indian princess, to go on the sorority's float.

DESIGNER DALE MONTGOMERY inspected the workmanship on the near-life sized ox gracing the Sigma Nu dining room Tuesday. The ox will grace the fraternity's float in tomorrow morning's parade.

Miss Rollins To Be Chosen Deadline Set For Harvard Scholarship

At Fiesta Fashion Show

A beauty pageant, a fashion show, and musical entertainment are all included in the "Fashion Frontiers" show to be presented in the Annie Russell Theatre tomorrow afternoon, April 4, at 3:30 as part of the Fiesta activities.

Fifteen Miss Rollins candidates, representing each of the social groups on campus, will model in the show. They will each appear on stage twice, once in a bathing suit and once in either casual or cocktail clothes.

Candidates and the groups they represent are Anne Benedict, Independent Men; Babs Bertash, Gamma Phi; Lynda Bridgers, Theta; Helen Dettra, Pi Phi; Sue Hazard, Phi Mu; Lis Jacobs, Delta Chi; Sue Marr, Chi O; Sue Murray, X Club; Shay O'Beirne, TKE; Nancy Pfanner, Kappa; Sara Reed, KA; Elaine Spellman, Indie Women; Charlotte Townsend, Sigma Nu; Barbara Walker, Alpha Phi; and Ruth Lynn Whitaker, Lambda Chi.

Last year's Miss Rollins, Tanya Graef, will crown the winner, who will be chosen by three judges on the basis of beauty, poise, and personality.

Following the Wild West theme of Fiesta, the stage will be set up to represent a stylized western bar. The models will appear through the swinging doors in the center.

Between the different parts of the show and while the judges are making their decision, Chuck Morley, Tal Lovering, Joan Mulac, and Mike Herwig will present musical numbers, including "You Can't Get a Man with a Gun" and "Poor Jud is Dead."

Sussman-Kassman of Orlando, whose fashions are being modeled in the show, is donating door prizes, and Merle Norman cosmetics is supplying favors.

Mary Whitman is chairman and commentator for the show; Maggie Carrington and Kathy Rhoads are directing the entertainment; Beth Van Maanen is in charge of publicity; and Dick Barker designed the sets.

Faculty and administration tickets may be purchased for $1 at the ART box office preceding the show; student tickets are available for 50 cents. Holders of Fiesta tickets will be admitted free upon presenting their ticket stubs.

Tuesday, April 7, has been set as the deadline for applications for the Harvard Summer Scholarship annually awarded to a Rollins student. Letters of application should be left in Dean Scroggs' office.

Harvard Summer School in Cambridge, Mass., offers various subjects for undergraduates in the field of Arts and Sciences. Classes, which meet five days a week, are ordinarily held in the morning, leaving afternoons free for the students to attend seminars and conferences.

In most cases, the courses are small enough to permit intimate discussion sessions.

W. Y. Elliott, director of the school explains, "... the program is more limited in number of subjects, but the breadth of the offering provides a very rich academic fare in which almost everyone in the summer community of students can find subjects of interest and value."

Last year's recipient of the award, which covers the cost of tuition, was Len Wood. Any Rollins student may apply; the faculty honors committee will select the winner on the basis of scholarship and character.

Foreign Film Features Fernandel

France's famed comedian Fernandel plays the title role in The Little World of Don Camillo, next offering in the Famous Film Series at Rollins College's Fred Stone Theatre.

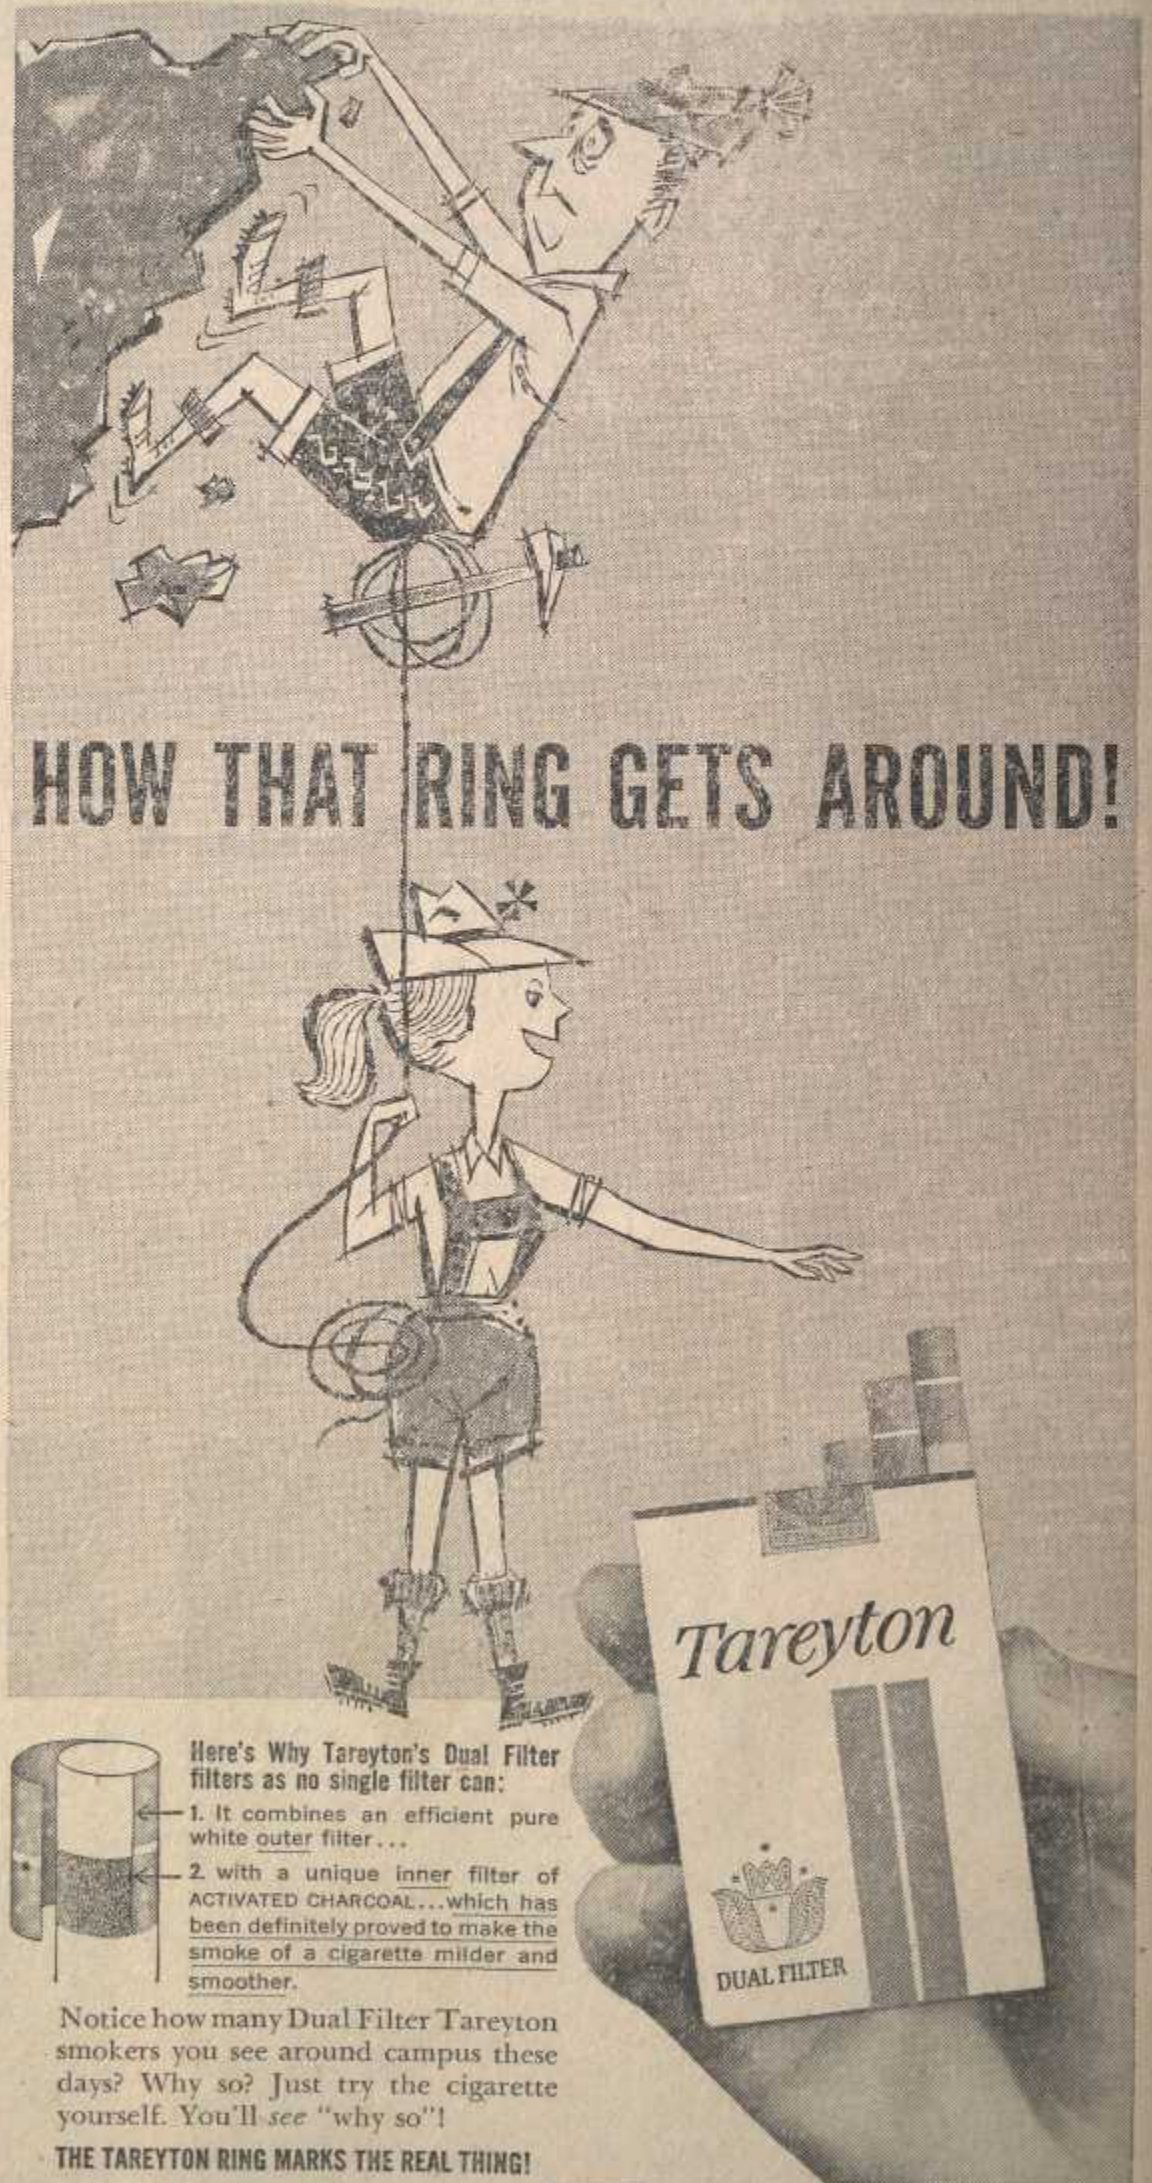

An Italian-French work which also features the Italian character actor Gino Cervi, the movie will be shown at 6:30 and 8:45 on Sunday evening, April 5.

The Little World of Don Ca-millio deals with an all-too-human priest of a northern Italian village and his attempts by guile, charm, and, when necessary, his fists, to out-manuever the Communist mayor of the town.

Fernandel plays the priest, while Cervi takes the role of his spiritual and political opponent.

The film is an adaptation of the best-selling book by Giovanni Guareschi.

Gamma Phi Easter Party Complicated By Guests' Disinterest In Bunnies, Eggs

By PATTY STEVENS
(Written for the Sandspur)

Every year around Easter and Hallowe'en, the sororities on campus begin feeling the I've-got-somuch - and - others - have - so - little spirit, so they give a party for the Orange County orphans or children of broken homes - a very noteworthy enterprise.

Last year the Gamma Phis gave a party for the children from the Orlando Mission. They sat up nights making baskets from oatmeal boxes and bought jump ropes and marbles for the little people to play with. The children always ranged from two to eight years of age.

Again this year the Gamma Phi planned an Easter egg hunt for the children - with major complications.

A week ago Wednesday at 3:00 p.m., the 25 baskets were waiting, filled with jelly beans and little plastic Easter bunnies. The 50 eggs were hidden, the jump ropes and marbles were in position, as were all the sorority girls awaiting the 25 children.

The bus from the orphanage drove up in front of Strong Hall, and the Gamma Phi rushed out with open arms to greet the children. Children? There wasn't one under 13.

The guests tramped into the house and stared with misgivings at the baskets. The Gamma Phi stared with misgivings at the guests, particularly the boys.

Finally the social chairman explained the situation to the teenagers, told them that they were just as welcome, and would they please hunt for the eggs before the sun made them smell?

The boys were off like a shot while the girls stood and giggled and watched.

Kay Leimbacher found a kindred soul in one of the boys, and all afternoon there were shrieks as the two played tag.

The girls decided they wanted to dance; and since the boys didn't know how to dance, the Gamma Phi filled in. It was a regular hop session. Melody Stearns turned up her hi-fi with all the jazzy songs in the house. The girls taught the Gamma Phi how to stroll, and Shirley Sieber and Babs Bertasch taught them how to Charleston.

Many of the kids couldn't dance, so they just stood. Out of desperation, Ginger Cornell and June Worthington taught them how to play "Categories." It was hard to tell who was more uncoordinated at this, the Gamma Phi or the kids. Besides, there wasn't any beer to drink as a penalty for missing - just Kool-Aid.

While the girls were dancing, the boys had discovered the jump ropes and were using them to hang themselves from the balcony and to tie up Sandy Miller. D. A. Sharp challenged the guests to a game of marbles, but she kept winning and they accused her of unfair tactics which was true and that was the end of the planned part of the party.

It became disconcerting to the sorority girls to look up at the balcony and see troops of boys going through one room after the other. The Gamma Phi decided that now was the time to perform skits, so as to get all the kids where they could keep their eyes on them.

The first skit consisted of one sorority girl after the other coming in to tell Sue Barclay how tired they were from throwing pebbles in the brook. At the conclusion of the skit, Sue Scribner, playing the part of "Pebbles," came in soaking wet. The nickname stuck throughout the day.

This was followed by another skit, several stories told by the theatre majors, and instantaneous converts to the theatre. The whole session ended up in a dog-and-cat-impersonation session - along with cows, chickens, et cetera - all being done by the Gamma Phi while the children sat silently and dubiously and watched.

The girls' lungs finally gave out, and the party assembled in the living room to await the coming of the bus. Kay Leimbacher and Melody Stearns gave lessons in chop sticks and the rest of the girls sat around and listened to how "... divine Eddie, the big junior at high school, is ..."

Slowly the conversation got around to the topic of their orphanage. It was then, and only then, that the Gamma Phi came to discover that the "orphanage" was a sort of detention home for misbehaved children.

At this point the bus came. The Gamma Phi ran with open arms to return the children to the head mistress.

During the course of the day the teenage boys had fallen in love with the sorority girls, particularly one chap who kept shouting, "I sure like you!" to Carol Muir as the bus drove away.

The girls liked Carol Sitton because she was "... such a lady and so pretty." They all promised to write and Carol promised to answer.

Next year again will bring Easter and eggs and bunny rabbits and sororities evening up the score with good will. The Gamma Phi will again plan a party for the children, complete with pitch forks, armor, blow torches, and strychnine.

Community Service Elects New Officers

Linda Wolowitz was elected last week to serve as president of Community Service for the coming year. As president of the club, she will also serve on the Chapel Staff.

Other new officers, who were elected at the same time, are Irene Lee, vice-president; Lynn Egry, secretary; and Judy Carl, treasurer.

Susan Morgenthaler will head the committee in charge of all college movies, while Susie Lewis will serve as chairman of the poster committee, and Diane Peters, the activities committee.

Musical Farce Ends ART Season

Final production of the current Rollins Players' season will be the musical farce, An Italian Straw Hat, which will run in the Annie Russell Theatre April 14-18.

Written by Eugene Labiche and Marc-Michel, the play takes place in Paris in 1850 and is considered a spoof on all the French farces that have been written.

A cast of 22 will be headed by veteran ART performer, Garry Goldfarb, who will portray the French landowner, Fadinard.

The plot centers around Fadinard's attempt to replace a hat which his horse has eaten. Without the hat, Fadinard cannot win the hand of Helene, the lovely daughter of Nonacourt, a horticulturist.

Mary Jane Strain has been cast as Helene, while Sonny Everett will portray Nonacourt.

Other members of the cast include Steve Kane, Beauperrhuis;

Chuck Morley, Vezinet; Lynne Pflug, Tardiveau; Bill Smith, Emile Tavernier; Mike Herwig, Felix; Rick Halsell, Achille de Rosalba; Joan Brand, Anais; Sara Reed, Baroness de Champigny; Anne Kettles, Clara; and Kay Leimbacher, Virginie.

Director Robert Chase plans to use all the songs and music of the five-act farce.

SIGN OFF

Today we live in an era of cryptic signs of the "Think!" and "Snile!" variety. These signs, we suppose, were invented to point up hidden meaning in men's lives.

In the Sandspur office signs add meaning to our lives. This is my last issue of the Sandspur, and I am sitting at my desk for the last time as editor contemplating the signs that surround me.

One sign, which was on the wall before I came to office and which I soon realized could only have been placed there as a subtle warning to my ambitions, reads, "Plan ahead." Many times during my editorship I have looked at this sign and found its hidden meaning revealed. If I'd planned ahead, I often sigh, I never would've gotten into this racket.

Oddly enough, the majority of the signs and notations which grace the Sandspur office walls are results of our more frenzied moments. For example, just above and to the left of our "Plan ahead" sign is a silent memorial to a feeling common to staff members just about Monday deadline time. It reads, simply, "I hate people!" Not profound, perhaps, but accurate.

We are not always unhappy, though. On the opposite wall we have pasted a chain of paper dolls — six little figures with linked arms and the letter "R" on their chests. Underneath this happy group a perceptive staff member once pencilled the phrase which pinpoints that for which we work and strive: "The Rollins Family." Nothing like a good, stimulating dose of togetherness, we have always said, while blasting Student Council and/or the Pink Palace.

There are other signs down here, but among them on the wall is something which I think symbolizes for me this last year as editor of the Sandspur. It is a print of the picture I took last fall of a moon shot at Cape Canaveral.

It is not a perfect picture, and its imperfections grow as I look at it, but I am proud and fond of it. I feel the same way about the Sandspur.

The rocket launching picture represents a lucky shot for me, as does the Sandspur in many ways. Both the picture and the Sandspur give me clear, exciting pictures of my generation, standing on the rim of our earth a bit proud and a bit scared before taking the inevitable step out into space.

Any contributions to the Sandspur or Rollins on my part are minute in comparison to the contributions to me on your part. I have learned and experienced innumerable things for which I am grateful to you who elected me editor and to my staff members who have borne with me during it.

My staff made the last 26 Sandspurs possible and has contributed many enjoyable moments during their production. Incoming editor Phyllis Zatlil has been the backbone of this staff and has a balance of organizational ability and imagination which will bring, I'm sure, many improvements to the Sandspur.

When the last Sandspur hits the mail boxes this morning, I turn the editorship over to Phyllis with relief and regret. Good by, and thank you.

Letters To The Editor

Women Upset By Dorm Decision

Editor:

After the long war over which women's social group is to live where, an armistice has been reached. As usual with a compromise, one side is very unhappy. The main part of the war was between the Indies and the Chi O's. It was the same two vying for almost the same thing last year.

I have been in on this war on both sides. Last year at this time Dean Watson was practically begging the Independent Women to live in Corrin Hall. For the most part, they would have nothing to do with it; thus, the Chi Omegas continued to live there. The Indies preferred the luxury and newness of Elizabeth Hall.

The problem is somewhat different this year. Instead of living in the beauty of Elizabeth, they are being moved into Cloverleaf. I admit that it is a comedown, and we don't want to be there either. But is it fair to become irate and to make nasty cracks at the Chi Omegas after it was the Indies' choice not to live in Corrin when there was something better?

Maggie Carrington

Editor:

I should very much like to know just how the Independent Women have been relegated to half of Cloverleaf for next year, while the Chi O's have been given all of Corrin, a dormitory which was originally built for the Independents.

I understand that the late Mrs. Strong's son — Mrs. Strong donated the money to the college for the Indie house — has given Dean Watson permission to house the Chi O's in Corrin next year, but I do not understand why he was asked when it was his mother, not he, who built the dorm and when all concerned on campus had previously been assured that the house belonged to the Independents.

Even last term the Chi O's met with the Indie president to ask if they could continue to live in Corrin again next year. But the Indie president assured them that, if the Indies could not remain in Elizabeth, they would prefer Corrin to Cloverleaf, the only other possibility for housing.

The only logical reason that I have been given so far for the change, however, is that there are more Indies than Chi O's and more room in Cloverleaf than in Corrin. But, when the space for the Alpha Phi's is subtracted from the total space in Cloverleaf, one discovers that the area available in one house is approximately equal to the area available in the other.

Phyllis Zatlil

Editor:

We would appreciate your including this open letter to Len Wood in your letters to the editor column:

Dear Mr. Wood:

In your capacity as president of the student body of Rollins College you should realize that your actions and statements are representative of the Rollins' way of life.

The statement attributed to you in the Feb. 29, 1959, issue of the Sandspur, concerning the ratio of drinkers to students, besides being untrue was in the poorest of taste.

It is statements such as this, issued mainly by carefree orators, that cause our school to be subjected to undue ridicule.

We left Rollins with a feeling of pride and accomplishment, and surely when you graduate you would like to feel the same.

It is difficult to be proud of a school which is not proud of itself. So, help Rollins hold her head high. Think before you speak.

Sincerely yours,

Gerald Sprayregen, '56

Dick Bernard, '56

John Rice, '57

Editor:

This letter is written in response to the various articles your paper has published concerning the "apathy" of our generation. I am not a journalist, and do not pretend to be, but I would like to know: "Who's apathetic? Who's beat?"

I am 21 years old. Do you know what that means?

It means that during my lifetime the world has seen Franco victorious in Spain with the aid of Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy and that 15 years later Franco has become an ally of the U.S. because of Spain's geographical position.

It means that the world has seen the monstrous insanity of a Hitler and the destruction of six million human beings because of the accident of birth.

It means that a savagely brutal world war was fought, the last one of its kind supposedly.

I was very young at the time, but I remember distinctly a news broadcast from the Philippines with the broadcaster describing the Japanese coming down the street, then silence, then my mother crying. Two days later my father was sent to the South Pacific.

It means that the United States won the war but not without using the incomprehensibly powerful, morally insensible atom bomb.

It means that some of the veterans from our neighborhood came back on crutches and that some of them never came back at all.

It means that we all found that the end of the war does not necessarily mean peace.

It means that when we were old enough we went into the service ourselves and that when we thought it through we could not exactly figure out what this war was all about.

Many of my friends returned from the service to be confronted with tyranny at home in the form of the junior senator from Wisconsin.

Some of us, in reading the speeches of Adlai Stevenson in 1952, became convinced that he was a man who might bring some form of sanity to the world we found ourselves in, but though many of us were old enough to be shot at we somehow weren't old enough to vote for an alderman, and he was defeated by a smiling soldier.

We no longer believed in many things and couldn't quite stomach the platitudes the country's leaders substituted for thinking, and some of us left the country and some of us became cynical and substituted the morality of the dollar for the morality of man.

We are now caught up in a vicious arms race, ignoring humanity. We no longer care whether the world could be a better place, but only how to destroy it.

The guys my age — call them the "Beat Generation" or the "Silent Generation" or whatever — are just a little confused. Perhaps we are still suffering under the illusions from another epoch. Perhaps we haven't learned that in order to become adults we have to accept the facts of ignorance, insensibility, power madness as our lot. I don't know.

But in the name of the youth of the world, in the name of those who died in Budapest, in the name of those living under tyrannies in Spain, Algeria, and South America, who can still think and who realize what this world could be, I would like to raise an anguished cry of protest.

We didn't make this world. We didn't cause any of these horrors. We weren't even in a position to prevent them. But if enough of us could at least rise up against the old men who control our lives, if we could shake them from their foundations, if we could prove to them that morality is not a platitude, maybe we could enjoy this beautiful world in the way that free men everywhere should be able to do.

We are not a Lost or Apathetic Generation, but we definitely do not wish to be a Last Generation.

'ROUND ROLLINS

By Deb n' Air

This is the season, girls. You should be off and running by now. The competition's gonna be tough this year, so you'd better get in the groove and be a swinging chick or you may be singing the "Why Ain't I Got a Pin Blues."

We hope we aren't crowding into the territory of our friend and yours, G-2, but we thought that this curious sociological phenomenon of "pinning" deserved a bit of attention. As soon as we began to think about it we reasoned that there must be some other reason than boredom with the "Brothers" and the "House" to explain the sudden rash of pinnings which have taken place over the past few weeks.

It's about to reach the proportions of last year's "Asian Flu" plague and is known to be as contagious. However, we began searching for the reason, and we think we have it.

One of your authors was thinking about the problem down by the lake front one evening and happened to notice a worn, tattered, yellowed piece of paper nearby. Picking it up and then opening it with care, he saw the following:

SIGNA PHI NIL SORORITY
PLEDGE LESSON NO. 8

"Methods of Obtaining a Fraternity Pin"

(1) First, write up a general list of qualifications you would like your boy friend to have.

(2) Second, begin dating fraternity men. Only they have pins.

(3) After playing the field a while, settle upon some unsuspecting soul whom you think you can sink your hooks into and keep under control.

(4) Next, pursue! This means "accidentally" running into him at least once per hour from 7:30 a.m. until 10:30 p.m. Find out where he studies in the library. Find a conspicuous spot nearby. Study there!

(5) When this routine has been firmly established, cut it in half. With luck, he'll miss your presence and begin to inquire.

(6) Now let him bounce the ball. All you have to do is play the rebounds and guard against foul shots.

(7) This is the time to put up as good a front as possible. Get a new hairdo and a new dress or so if you can afford it. Dazzle him.

(8) Let it be known in various and sundry conversations that you know how to type a term paper, that you used to have to iron your brother's knit shirts, and that you have complete notes and test questions for a couple of his courses.

(9) Get him intoxicated. This can be done with either of two things: the moonlight on Lake Virginia or booze. For difficult cases, combine the two.

(10) Throw him some cues. For instance, "Isn't your pin a bit too high on your shirt?" or "Do you ever stick yourself when you're trying to put on your pin?"

Evidently there should have been two pages or so to the pledge lesson because on the back of the sheet was found:

(29) Just for fun now that you have the pin, check his qualifications with those you wrote out for part one to see if he has any of them. With luck, he should have about 10 per cent at most.

The Chapel Tower

By T. S. Darrah

The people that make the college go are the ones that are busy working at it; they carry their own load and a good share of the load that the indolent and indifferent shirk. It is strange — or is it? — that the aimless and bored are not only unhappy but easily swept away and lost.

During the New England hurricane of 1938 the railroad bridge at White River Junction, Vermont, was in danger of being swept away by the floods. It was saved by backing out upon it heavily loaded freight cars. The empty bridge was in danger and it was saved by carrying a load.

Elections will be held in the Student Center on Wednesday, April 8. Len Wood, present Council president, will serve as chairman of the Election Board in place of Mansfield. Presidential candidates will give five-minute speeches in the Center April 6.

Two Freshmen Elected To Vespers Committee

Newest members of the Vespers Committee are freshmen Sue Hazard and Bill Lauterbach, who were elected to the Chapel Staff sponsored organization prior to spring vacation.

The committee, which plans the Tuesday and Thursday evening student services, consists of one man and one woman from each of the four classes.

Members, who are elected in their freshman year and remain on the committee until they graduate or as long as they remain active in the group, are chosen on the basis of high character and of interest in activities both around the Chapel and on the campus as a whole.

Sue is a member of Phi Mu, while Lauterbach belongs to the X Club.

Rollins Economics Course Gets National Attention

An experiment with the elementary economics course at Rollins this year, conducted by professors Robert Pettengill and Donald Hill, is currently receiving national attention.

Visiting economics professor A.D.H. Kaplan first brought the experiment to the attention of economics professors from around the country when he gave a short report of the project at the American Education Association-Joint Council on Economic Education meetings in Chicago early this year.

At the request of the Council, Pettengill and Hill prepared a more complete summary of the fall term work in Economics 211 to send to 85 professors in all parts of the United States who are interested in teaching elementary economics. The professors are now preparing a study of the winter half of the work in the two term course.

Goals of the experiment, as stated in the fall term summary, are:

(1) To aim chiefly at the non-major and the undecided sophomore rather than those who have already decided to become professional economists.

(2) To put arousing interest in economics ahead of developing skill as an economist.

(3) To follow the belief that it is easier to improve the method than to improve the teacher.

(4) To put more faith in student self-direction and motivation than in carefully scheduled, step-by-step syllabi.

Stress in the course was placed on economic problems which interested the students, and members of the class were given the opportunity to evaluate the course.

Horszowski Recital To Feature Works Of Mozart, Beethoven

Works of Mozart and Beethoven will be featured in the recital to be given by Mieczyslaw Horszowski, visiting instructor in piano, on Sunday evening, April 5, at 8:30 in the Annie Russell Theatre.

Following the Mozart "Sonata in F Major," Horszowski will perform the complete "Thirty-three Variations on a Theme by Diabelli" by Beethoven. Composed in 1822 after the last of the 32 piano sonatas, this set of variations is ranked by many critics alongside the "Goldberg Variations" of Bach.

Diabelli, a well-known composer and publisher in Vienna, applied to 50 of the most eminent Austrian composers, including Beethoven, Liszt, and Schubert, for variations on a waltz theme of his own. His object was a volume of 50 variations, one by each of the 50 composers.

Beethoven became so intrigued in the unfolding of his set of variations that he finally submitted not the requested one but 33. Diabelli consequently published two volumes, the first containing Beethoven's set and the second, those of the other composers.

Horszowski is currently presenting his third and final session of master classes at the Rollins Conservatory.

'Streamlined Baseball' Needs Revision If It Is To Succeed

By BOB STEWART
Sandspur Sports Editor

Rollins College's annual Baseball Week has been terminated for another year, and next year more northern colleges will trample down to Winter Park for their "spring training."

This year's Baseball Week must be considered as different from those in the past. The entire Baseball Week was played under Joe Justice's provocative "streamlined baseball" plan.

Stewart

It is hard to rate the effect which Joe's plan had on the visiting ball players, but one thing is positive — Joe's plan needs more rule changes if it is to succeed in its original purpose — that is to speed up baseball games!

Perhaps the greatest violator of Justice's plan is Joe himself. When the first game ended at 3:30, as it must, Justice would take 30 to 40 minutes preparing his boys for their game.

The outcome of Joe's preliminary warmups was the fact that Rollins got to play only two nine inning ball games during the week. All the rest were called at 6:00 with as many as three innings left in the game.

Zack Taylor, well known scout for the Chicago White Sox, stated that Justice's plan could be made effective, but it would take the co-operation of the pitcher and catcher. These two players control the time element in a ball game, and if a pitcher wants to take his time on the mound there is nothing anyone can do.

Only three games during the week were played in less than two hours and Rollins was involved in all three contests. In the fastest game of the week Rollins defeated Wake Forest in one hour, 36 minutes. In the final game Rollins defeated Ohio State U. in one hour, 42 minutes.

Justice's "streamlined baseball" plan received a great deal of publicity all over the country last week, with sports editors, Associated Press, and United Press International all requesting information on all the games being played.

Joe Justice, the man with the plan, has made national news. Now let's see if his team can. At this writing the Tars are sporting a 7-4 record which is tremendous progress over last year's record at this point in the season. The 1958 Tar baseball team won four of its first 13 games.

The Rollins tennis team won seven of its first nine matches, but personally I am disappointed in their showing. No tennis team needs an excuse for losing to the Univ. of Miami netters and Georgia Tech is no slouch either, but still the caliber of play which the Tar netters have shown on the Rollins courts has been disappointing.

Tar Golfers Place First In Tourney, Beat Miami

By ROLAND LAMONTAGNE
Sandspur Sports Writer

Last Saturday the Rollins College golf team successfully defended the first place position which the Tars achieved last year in the Miami Invitational Tournament.

Rollins went into the tournament as an underdog, but after the first round the Tars found themselves enjoying a four stroke lead over the U. of Florida, the Florida Intercollegiate champs.

Saturday the Tars clinched their second straight Miami Invitational Tournament championship by beating their nearest competitor by 19 strokes.

The four low men for Rollins were: Bob Ross — 76-75-76-73-300; Jay Dolan — 77-76-77-72-302; Dick Diversi — 77-80-74-74-305; Joe Miller — 78-79-74-77-308. The other Rollins scores were Jim Curti, 320; Bob Craig, 316; Bob Harrison, 312; Bob Learner, 316; and Roly Lamontagne, 324.

The individual tourney ended in a tie between Jim Peace of Miami and Skip Stigga of the U. of Florida at 299. In a sudden death play off Stigga emerged the new champion. Last year Dick Diversi of Rollins won this honor.

The tourney featured a record entry of 13 colleges and a total of 50 players from various parts of the country. The scores were unusually high as the Biltmore course was windy, and the greens exceedingly difficult to play.

The following day, the Tar team composed of Ross, Diversi, Dolan, Craig, Harrison, and Miller beat the Miami squad by a score of 23-4. In the same week, the Rollins men tied the U. of Georgia 14½-14½.

During spring vacation Rollins defeated Florida State in a match played at Tallahassee. The final score was 14½-12½.

Including last year's record, the Tar golfers have gone through their last 19 matches without defeat. The Georgia tie was the first match which the Tars had not won.

Coach Dan Nyimicz is looking forward to an undefeated season, and with any kind of luck the Tars should equal last year's accomplishments.

At the present, the Rollins golfers are aiming at the Southern Intercollegiate, which will be held at Athens, Ga.

Tars Finish Second In Baseball Week

The end of the 1959 Baseball Week saw the Rollins baseball team finish in second place with a won-loss record of 5-2. Ohio State University proved that Big Ten baseball is rough as the Buckeyes took top honors for the second straight year with a 6-1 record.

The Tars avenged two earlier defeats at the hands of O.S.U. when they edged the Buckeyes 4-2 in the final game of the week. This was the first time Ohio State had lost in Florida since 1957, and the loss smeared the Big Ten school's 22 game winning streak.

Rollins's top pitcher, southpaw Bunky Davis, held Ohio State to two hits, both coming in the second inning when State scored its two unearned runs. After the second inning Davis kept the Buckeyes well in control.

In third place was Wake Forest. The Deacons from Winston-Salem, North Carolina, defeated New York University in the two teams final game. Wake Forest lost two games.

N.Y.U. had a rough week, playing seven games and losing them all. The Violets were completely outclassed by their opponents and did not have the material which the other teams possessed.

Southpaw Chuck Allen looked good as he fired a five-hitter at Wake Forest. The Tars won this game 4-1. With any kind of luck Allen could have had himself a shutout, but a misjudged fly ball in the third inning went for a triple and the runner scored as third baseman Winky Williams errored on the next batter.

In his victory over N.Y.U. Jessie

Lee did what every pitcher should do; that is, he got a single, double, and a triple, and two rbi's. When Lee wasn't hitting he was pitching, and he proved to be equally effective on the mound as he tossed seven innings and gave up one hit.

All in all Baseball Week proved to be quite effective to all participants. Rollins gave an excellent account of itself and Justice seemed quite pleased with his team's showing.

At the time of this writing the Tars are sporting a 7-4 record, a record compiled against very formidable opposition. At this time it appears that the Tars are headed for another post-season tournament bid.

Thirteen of the Tars' last 14 ball games will be against Florida Intercollegiate Conference opponents. Last year the Tars won the FIC and if they can match that achievement this year they will have an excellent won-loss record.

One thing that coach Joe Justice can count on for the remainder of the year is top notch pitching. The Tars' staff, headed by Davis, Allen, Lee, Griffith, and Brouhard, none of which are seniors, has come through for Justice and the hitting has picked up as the season has progressed.

Bunky Davis

Ronnie Pavia, Frank Willis, Mike Cortese, Doug Baxendale Williams, Boyd Coffie, and Jim Johnston have all been getting their share of the hits, and most of them have come with men on base.

If the pitching and the hitting continues as it has through Baseball Week, the Tars are going to be hard to beat.

One thing which has been to Rollins' disadvantage has been the inability to hit the home run. Pavia is the only Rollins player to have hit for the distance to date, and his blow came in a losing game.

Tar Oarsmen Impressive As LaSalle, Purdue Fall

By MOE CODY
Sandspur Sports Writer

The rowing Tars opened their 1959 season with two decisive wins on the waters of Lake Maitland. On Saturday the varsity crew defeated LaSalle College of Philadelphia, then repeated with another win over a Purdue University eight on Monday.

The race with Purdue was by far the most exciting of the two although Rollins led from start to finish. Conditions of water and wind were perfect when both crews got off to very fast starts.

Rollins came off their start at the stroke of 35 compared with the low stroking 32 of Purdue's powerful crew. At the midway point in the race it was Rollins by a length and rowing at a steady 34 cadence.

Coming into the last quarter of a mile of the one and 3/16 mile course, Purdue made a bid which Rollins staved off with a series of leg drives.

At this point it appeared that Rollins would try to break the course record, but Purdue seemed unable to challenge the smooth-rowing Tars who were content to raise their stroke to 38 per minute as they crossed the line.

The winning time was, however, 5:41, just three seconds from tying the old record set by Boston University. Rollins finished a length and a quarter ahead of a very tired Purdue crew.

In an earlier race on Monday, the Rollins J.V. crew came from slightly behind to beat a highly rated Purdue J.V.

On Saturday morning a large crowd had gathered at the boat-house to watch the varsity crew race the 1958 Dad Vail Championship LaSalle College eight.

Rollins led from the start in this contest too, as the Explorers suffered a one and one-fourth length defeat at the hands of the Tars. This was the first time that LaSalle has been beaten by Rollins since 1956. The time for this race, which was rowed over the long course in a heavy crosschop, was 6:02.

In a preliminary race the Rollins J.V.'s came through with a convincing win over the Jacksonville Marines, a crew organized by the U. S. Marine Corps in Jacksonville.

Judging by the results of this weekend's racing, a successful season may have begun for Coach Bradley and his boys.

On Friday, April 3, the crew meets their next opponents, American International College, over the short course on Lake Maitland ending at the Alabama Hotel docks.

Miami, Georgia Tech Hand Netters Defeat

To date the Rollins College tennis team is sporting a 7-2 record. The Tars breezed through their first five matches, all of which were played against Florida colleges.

Then the Tars ran into the powerful gusts of the Miami Hurricanes. The outcome was a 7-2 victory for the Hurricanes. Miami has a 40-game winning streak going and will be hard for any collegiate tennis team to beat.

Luis Dominguez was the only Rollins player to win a singles match. He defeated Bill Minnick in the number four match.

In the Tars' next outing, Georgia Tech proved to be stronger than expected as they edged Rollins 5-4. Once again the Tars hurt in the singles matches, Tech won four of six singles.

Last Friday and Saturday the Tars played host to the U. of North Carolina netters. Rollins won both matches, 5-4, and 6-3. This marked the first time that Rollins was able to defeat the Tar Heels.

Tomorrow the Tar netters tangle with Murray State on the Rollins courts. The matches start at 1:30.
