Students More Conservative

(CPS) — The 1981 American student body is either more conservative than students of the past, no less liberal, or both — according to two recent studies of political and social values.

A Rutgers University survey of 205 campuses concluded students today are as politically active as ever.

"The only major difference between now and the sixties is that there was a central issue with Vietnam that drew a great amount of media coverage," contends Michele Lamco, one of the Rutgers researchers who oversaw the survey.

The study found that the number of demonstrations on campuses has decreased by only 11 percent over the last two years.

A University of Florida study, on the other hand, "seems to show that students mostly care about themselves," summarizes Phyllis Meek, UF's associate dean of student affairs, who helped poll the student body.

Florida students preferred alcohol to marijuana at parties by a three-to-one margin. Their most pressing concerns are grades, inflation and unemployment, all of which Meek characterized as personal concerns.

When it comes to labelling student beliefs, contradictory studies like Rutgers' and Florida's are typical.

The annual UCLA-American Council on Education survey has shown a steadily declining number of students who call themselves "liberal," while the percentage subscribing to "moderate" and "conservative" labels increased.

A February, 1981 study discovered that 68 percent of the students at Stanford agreed that "preparing myself for a career will be at least as important to me as acquiring a general education."

Yet 84 percent of American students believe student demonstrations "have a place on college campuses today," according to a 153-campus poll conducted by the Emhart Corp., Inc.

The same survey found students not only optimistic (83 percent expected to be happy during the eighties) but sharing many of the anti-big business attitudes that marked the hey-day of campus liberalism.

Business Today magazine uncovered similar anti-business, pro-environmental attitudes in a survey of 202 schools released in June.

The magazine asserts the results of its study mean that students are no less liberal than in the past.

HI, THERE, Q. DUNLEY DUNBAR, FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION. HAVE YOU EVER CONSIDERED A CAREER AS AN AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLER?

SIDEBAR

(CPS)

The battle over how where to cut federal student programs was long emotional. Stretching from second week in February through the first week of August, it prompted the involved in the struggle indulge in the extremes of man behavior. Some of highlights, lowlights and tonales:

THREE NATIONAL STUDENT GROUPS dropped plans to sue the Reagan administration over its plan to make families contribute money to their children's college costs. U.S. Student Association lobbyist Eduardo W. said the lawsuit over increased expenses would be "too expensive."

IN SHRUGGING OFF THE POTENTIAL EFFECTS lowering the maximum amount of money a student get from a Pell Grant by Sen. Harrison Schmidt of Mexico explained to a Senate hearing that it would only the 2.7 million Pell Grant recipients the equivalent of packs of cigarettes per week.

"LAST JANUARY I DIDN'T KNOW what supply economics was all about. I had Economics 101. But I can maybe stand for at least master's exam at the time," U.S. Secretary of Education Terrel Bell told a convention of state education in August.

Aid Cuts Hit Students

(CPS)

Mary, about to start her first year at law school at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, says she'll have to "take it step by step. I can't make it through three years without (financial) aid."

If she can't get enough aid, Mary (not her real name) will "either drop out of school, or wait to go, or just forget about it."

Mary's not alone. Like millions of undergraduate and graduate students this fall, she's feeling the first effects of President Reagan's cuts in federal student aid programs.

Financial aid officials around the country seem to agree that while this year's cuts will hurt students, the worst effects are probably a year away.

The relative scarcity of federal student aid "will literally foreclose the opportunity to go to school" for some students, Martin says.

For others, the cuts "will cause students to maybe delay enrolling" while they hold a job, and "will most likely cause a shift in enrollment patterns from more expensive private schools to public colleges," he adds.

Indeed, some are predicting a rapid disappearance of all but the strongest private colleges. To meet higher tuitions, a greater percentage of private college students uses federal aid money, according to a February, 1981 study by the National Center on Educational Statistics.

David K. Smith, Vanderbilt's student aid director, worries about "a return to the old days when Vanderbilt was known as a rich man's school."

He worries the school might eventually be forced to admit students "in the bottom five percent of our applicant pool" according not to their academic abilities, but to their ability to pay their own way without aid.

Confusion over congressional intent and an administrative delay in processing applications last spring caused the most trouble for fall's students, aid directors say.

Next week the Sandspur interview Bill Lovins, financial Director of College about the effects President Reagan's cuts Rollins College students.

The Rollins Sandspur, Florida's oldest college weekly, was established in 1964 and the following editorial:

"Unassuming yet insightful, sharp and pointed, well rounded yet never-sided, modestly ingenious, yet as gritty and tenacious as the name implies, yet there is single combat and therefore without peer, wonderfully attractive and refined in execution, all these will be focused upon investigating to be among the extraordinary qualities of the Sandspur."

The Rollins Sandspur is a weekly publication produced by the students of Rollins College. Sandspur offices are located in the Student Center, Rollins College. The Rollins Sandspur is produced at The Type People, 1324 Fenton Ave., Winter Park, FL, and printed at the Oviedo Outlook, Oviedo, FL.

In an effort to establish a continuing dialogue within the Rollins community, the Rollins Sandspur promotes discussion and opinions in the school environment. Therefore, this paper encourages students to voice their opinions or criticism on pertinent issues in the form of letters to the editor.

Letters will be printed on a space available basis. All letters must be signed and must be received by the Monday before the paper appears. All letters should be addressed: Editor, Rollins Sandspur, Box 2742, Rollins College.

The Rollins Sandspur would like to thank Dean Roland Goddu for initiating plans for new offices for the student newspaper.

The staff would also like to extend its gratitude to Mr. Tom Wells, director of Physical Plant and especially the carpenters that built the brand new facility.

This year a new club, the "Surf Club," adds its name to the ranks at Rollins College. However don't let the discriminating name fool you. The club was formed not just for surfers, but for anyone who loves "Sun & Fun" at the beach.

The Surf Club is a sub unit of R.O.C. (Rollins Outdoor Club). John Langfitt is the faculty sponsor and was instrumental in helping to get the club organized.

The officers are: Randy Huston, President; Greg Voell, Vice President; Dave Kingsbury, Treasurer; Maria Quinones and Pippa Boyd, Secretaries; Kurt Kempster, Special Projects.

The club will be extremely active through out this year. Their first project will be co-sponsoring the Freshman Beach Day, Sept. 19. Other events planned are contests, parties, beach excursions, campus projects, and a competition surf team in the National Scholastic Surfing Association (NSSA) which will compete against other colleges such as the University of Central Florida.

The Surf Club will also provide the services of a weekend surf report, to be broadcast on Rollins College Radio Station WPRK, and the latest surf magazines will be on display at Sullivan House.

Watch for time of next meeting or stop by Sullivan House for further information.

All students interested in either Scuba Diving or Skin Diving should sign up now at the Sullivan House.

Possible future dive trips will include the Florida Springs, West Palm Beach, and the Florida Keys.

For more information contact Bill Meyer or Peter Lindemann of the Rollins Outdoor Club organization.
