PENSACOLA IN THE WAR FOR SOUTHERN INDEPENDENCE

by JULIEN C. YONGE

PATRIOTIC ARDOR grew steadily in Pensacola during the latter part of 1860 and reached a height when Florida seceded from the Union on January 10, 1861. Two companies of volunteers had already been organized there: the Pensacola Guards with A. H. Bright as captain, and the Rifle Rangers, Edward A. Perry, captain.

On January 5 Senator Yulee had advised that “. . . the immediately important thing to be done is the occupation of the forts. The Naval Station and fort at Pensacola are of first consequence.”

So Governor Madison S. Perry determined to take over the Navy Yard and forts at Pensacola and asked aid from Alabama. In reply two hundred and twenty-four men under Colonel Tenant Lomax were sent to Pensacola, where they and the Pensacola companies were placed under the command of William H. Chase.<sup>1</sup> commissioned major-general by Governor Perry.

General Chase on January 12 ordered the Pensacola companies and the Alabamians, all under Colonel Lomax, accompanied by Richard L. Campbell and Captain V. M. Randolph, to seize the Navy Yard. Colonel Lomax demanded the surrender of the Yard from Commodore James Armstrong. Resistance being useless, the Yard was surrendered. The flag of the United States was lowered and a flag run up of thirteen alternate stripes of red and white and blue field with a large white star.<sup>2</sup>

The three Pensacola forts, Barrancas and McRee on the mainland and Pickens across the channel on Santa Rosa Island, were not prepared for defense, and the total United States force, under Lieutenant L. J. Slemmer abandoned the mainland forts

1. One of the leaders in all of the activities at Pensacola in 1860-61 was William H. Chase, a native of Massachusetts, and under whom, as a major in the Engineering Corps of U. S. Army, the forts on Pensacola harbor had been built. He had resigned from the Corps in 1856, was living in Pensacola, was a civic leader and prime mover in the building of the Alabama and Florida R.R. of which he was president.

Rev. S. F. Pilley, presiding Elder in charge, will preach at the Methodist Church on Sunday morning (to-morrow) at 10 o'clock. Soldiers are invited to attend.

Pensacola Artillery.

This company completed its organization on the 4th inst. by the election of officers, adopting a constitution and by laws, and appointing a committee to procure necessary arms, munition, &c. This is the third company that has recently been organized for the defence of the city, and if Lincoln's hirelings attempt to invade us they will meet with a warm reception.

The following is a list of the officers:

Captain—C. P. Knapp.

1st Lieutenant—F. B. Bohz.

2nd do —J. E. Woolsey.

Junior 2nd Lieutenant—H. C. Bechtel.

1st Sergeant—J. C. Creene.

2d do —A. Gerard.

3d do —J. M. Blake.

4th do K. L. Berry.

1st Corporal—E. P. [unclear]

2d do —J. Walsh.

4th do —G. Quina.

Quartermaster—J. J. Moore.

Civil Engineer—W. H. James.

Secretary & Treasurer—A. J. Mathews.

To the Ladies of Pensacola,

Whose patriotic enthusiasm in the cause of Southern Independence, and whose kindness to the soldiers stationed in Pensacola have won for them the lasting gratitude of all those whom fortune has made the recipients of their soothing and encouraging influence, either in camp or hospital—Mrs. Dr. Lee, Mrs. Lieut. Sweetman, Mrs. Gonzalez, Mrs. Caldwell, Miss Davis, and Mrs. M. E. Crofford, of Mobile, and all the ladies of Pensacola—may they live to see our country restored to peace and independence, and Heaven's choicest blessings be their reward, is the wish of a Dawson Volunteer.

ALBERT S.

(Pensacola OBSERVER)

(July 6, 1861)

(Apparently this company was not enlisted.)
(Note the careless or difficult War printing)

after destroying what ammunition he could not move and, spiking the guns, retired to Fort Pickens which had long been vacant. Here he refused repeated demands for its surrender, and endeavored to place it in some state of defense. Doubtless it could have been taken then by the forces in Pensacola; but the Florida senators in Washington, with Senator Jefferson Davis, still hoping to leave the Union without war, telegraphed State authorities advising that no blood be shed. So no attack was made on Fort Pickens with its meager garrison.

Pensacola was now, because of the situation there, before the eyes of the entire country, North and South. This continued for several months, for Fort Pickens was one of a very few spots in the South over which the flag of the Confederacy never floated.

In January a company of U. S. artillerymen under Captain Vodges sailed for Fort Pickens, but Vodges was instructed not to land unless hostilities had begun.

With the firing on Fort Sumter and President Lincoln's call for troops, the truce at Fort Pickens ended. The forces on both sides were now built up steadily, but it was some time before a collision occurred. This was a night battle, not much more than a skirmish, on Santa Rosa Island when the camp of the Federal forces before Pickens was attacked without result and the Confederate forces retired. (An account of this by Colonel J. L. Larkin follows.)

Subsequent fighting around Pensacola was fierce artillery duels across the entrance of the harbor. The Confederates under General Braxton Bragg had built a series of batteries extending in a semicircle of several miles from the Navy Yard to Fort McRee. There was serious damage on both sides with no other fighting. The Navy Yard and the village of Warrington were entirely destroyed.

As the entrance to Pensacola harbor was controlled by the Federals, the town was of little advantage to the Confederacy and it was evacuated in May 1862, after everything in the area that could be of any service to the Federals was destroyed. The region remained in Federal hands during the remainder of the War.

---

The above is but a summary of what occurred in Pensacola in 1860-1862. A complete account, with full references and citations, is included in this Quarterly: Civil War Operations in and Around Pensacola, by Edwin C. Bearss. (vol. XXXVI. pp. 125-165. Oct. 1957)

THE DOCUMENTS

As the clouds gathered in 1860-61 patriotism in Pensacola rose with them. There is mute evidence of this in the following documents preserved by C. C. Yonge who had a part in what Pensacolians were doing then.<sup>1</sup>

COMMITTEE ON SAFETY

The following is the oath to support the Constitution of the Confederate States, and the list of citizens who have taken it according to a resolution adopted at a general meeting of the citizens of Pensacola, held on the 26th ult.:

I do most sincerely and solemnly swear before Almighty God, without mental reservation of any kind, that I will support and defend the constitution of the Confederate States of America, and that I will in all things demean myself as a true and faithful citizen of the said Confederate States; and I do promise that I will endeavor to discover and will report any and every unfaithful person of whom I may obtain reliable intelligence. So help me God.
