SECURITY
CRACKDOWN

Pegasus Landing tightens security
MICHELLE DENDY
Contributing Writer

Two weeks ago, university-affiliated housing community Pegasus Landing made news on its security to create a safer environment for residents.

The new system comprised controlled-access parking at all entrances of the property and courtesy officers stationed at the main entrances. The officers will monitor offense at the property. Security camcorders have also been installed at the gates.

The system will provide one visi­tors and a security vendowment, while not bringing up the case of living at Pegasus Landing,” said Michelle Dendy, Pegasus Landing's chief of a statement.

We are determined to have the means to implement such a security system with the recent crime发生ities Orleans is facing.

Ticket buyers, secure a locker for their cars in order to be allowed into the property. The ticket is valid on both sides of the car and one ticket can open the gates at any entrance.

With the new security system, all visitors must enter through a proper house entrance. Visitors must know the name and

Although the 1930s and 1940s were a time of great prosperity in the United States, it was also a time of great suffering for millions of people. The Depression, which lasted from 1929 to 1939, was one of the worst economic downturns in American history. Millions of people lost their jobs and homes, and many were forced to live in poverty.

UCF: Adams to keep his job
Professor on paid leave until summer

A UCF professor who was facing disciplinary action for sexually explicit material found on his computer and sexual harassment charges brought forth by two others will keep his job.

Kenneth Adams, a profess­ toral program, must attend anger management courses, along with other restrictions.

Adams has been on paid administrative leave since Aug. 29 and will continue to be until the end of the spring 2008 term.

In a letter from Lito Huffcent, assistant provost and vice president of faculty relations, it was determined that he was found "not guilty of harassment" and "not guilty of sexual harassment charges, ruling that drew

At a time when the world is facing serious problems such as war, disease, poverty, and Natural Disasters, it is important to take actions that can help prevent these issues from occurring. This can be done by working to raise awareness about the issues, supporting organizations that are actively working to make a difference, and by taking personal actions to make a positive impact.

Adidas has been in the news recently for its policies and practices regarding sexual harassment and discrimination. The university has been working to address these issues and implement new policies to prevent similar situations from occurring in the future.

The show deals with several issues, including the rise of anti-Semitism, the struggle for equality, and the importance of standing up for what is right.

"To me, the issue speaks not just showing up for Darfur but for injustices that are going on all over the world."

According to the Associated Press, spokesperson Ally Alwag-Coley of the Save Darfur Coalition and the number of people who died could be as high as 600,000. The U.N. reports that 2.5 million people have been forced to leave their homes. Ali Alaw Alassi, one of the Darfur survivors and speakers at the event, said that even though he has been away from Darfur for a long time, the wounds remain.

"Every time I speak in front of a crowd, I feel that film, it feels like I'm

11 FACTS ABOUT THE DARFUR CONFLICT

FACT 1
More than 2 million innocent people have been forced from their homes due to the Darfur Conflict.

FACT 2
At least 400,000 people have been killed.

FACT 3
More than 1.5 million people rely entirely on international aid to survive.

FACT 4
The Sudanese government, along with a militia group called the Janjaweed, are responsible for this widespread killing, rape, and villager destruction.

FACT 5
The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, Kofi Annan, has called for the Darfur region to be called "a crime against humanity and the protection of refugees as a global priority.

FACT 6
According to the World Food Program, more than 150,000 people in the Darfur region have been out of their homes due to fighting.

FACT 7
The conflict has been going on since July 2003.

FACT 8
Although most non-government organizations say that 250,000 to 400,000 people have been killed in Darfur, the Sudanese government claims that only about 9,000 have died.

FACT 9
Though it does not support the Janjaweed, the Sudanese government has received military assistance and training from the militia group responsible for massacring ethnic groups in Darfur.

FACT 10
The United Nations has not called the killing in Darfur "genocide.

FACT 11
According to World Food Program, more than 150,000 people in the Darfur region have been out of their homes due to fighting.

Their voices have been ignored, and they are in a position to make decisions. They just have to understand that genocide is not acceptable, and it goes against humanity.

Pennsylvania fire kills ten

Lehigh County's [Pennsylvania] blaze started shortly after 2 a.m. in the barn in the 400 block of Wilsonville Road in Lower Macungie Township. It is the second barn fire this month in the town, which had a barn fire last week.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said the fire started in the barn and quickly spread to the neighboring structures. The cause of the fire was under investigation.

According to the Lehigh County Fire Marshal's Office, the barn was fully involved when firefighters arrived on the scene. The flames were consuming the structure and spreading to nearby buildings.

The fire was contained within an hour, but the barn and several outbuildings were destroyed. The loss was estimated at $250,000.

There were no reports of injuries, and no one was hurt in the incident. The cause of the fire is still under investigation.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said the barn was equipped with fire hydrants and a fire protection system, which helped to control the spread of the fire.

The barn was located on a large farm property. The owner, who was not available for comment, said the barn housed some cattle and equipment.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said the fire was the second barn fire in Lower Macungie Township this month. A barn fire occurred last week on the same farm, but that fire did not involve any structures.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said barn fires are common in the area due to the dry grass and hay that are stored inside.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said the fire marshal's office is working with the Lehigh County Fire Protection District to ensure that barns are equipped with adequate fire protection systems.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said barn fires can be prevented by regular maintenance and fire safety precautions. He said barn owners should keep flammable materials away from heat sources and keep their barns clean and well-ventilated.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said barn fires can be deadly and that it is important for barn owners to be prepared in case of an emergency.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said barn fires are also a concern for firefighters, who are often called to respond to barn fires.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said the Lehigh County Fire Protection District is working to educate barn owners about fire safety.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said the Lehigh County Fire Protection District is also working with the Lehigh County Fire Marshal's Office to develop a barn fire prevention program.

The Lehigh County Fire Marshal said barn fires are a serious concern and that it is important for barn owners to be prepared.

Play ends on cliff-hanger

I can’t understand southerners and their attitudes toward blacks. Everything about the town and its people makes him uncomfortable, and his evidence even to his Georgian wife, Lucille.

Mary "Bugan, a 13-year-old girl, is found raped and murdered. Her friend, whom she was supposed to meet at the movies that day, tells the police that she was going to pick up her pay from the factory where Frank was working alone.

Officers arrest the black factory night guard, Newt Lee, and the factory's owner, Frank, as suspects.

Lee, and the factory's manager, said he saw the show as a requirement for a class. "I felt like they tried to create something greater," Shack said. "It made the play about something greater," Shack said.

The production of Parade ended on a cliff-hanger as the murderer was never revealed, but anyone who sees the show can try to guess who committed the crime.

Senior Chader Allen, a theater studies major, said she saw this musical as an important piece of history. "We can learn from this situation, and I'm going to go and look it up because it fascinates me," Allen said.

"I couldn't really determine it," Oh said. "I thought he was guilty from the part he acted out, but from what he said, I thought he was innocent." The play goes into the ups and downs and twists and turns of a usual courtroom drama.

Shayla Shack, an interdisciplinary studies major, said she was really touched by the ending. "It made the play about something greater," Shack said.

Even with all of its struggles in Conference USA play, the UCF Baseball team could always count on putting its win total against conference opponents. But right now, the Knights can’t bear an image of their home turf. They dropped their fourth straight game with a 6-4 loss to Florida Gulf Coast University on Wednesday. That came one day after what was arguably the team’s worst defat of the season, a 1-4 thrashing at the hands of Southern Miss.

The Knights (14-10 overall, 3-3 in CUSA) couldn’t get anything going against Eagles starting pitcher Casey Coleman on Wednesday. He entered the game with a 6-1 record and two runs on the season, but he limited the Knights to one run over nine innings. The Knights left at least one man on base in every inning, but they couldn’t get hits on the base that moved them into scoring position.

The Knights entered the ninth inning trailing 6-1. But right now, the Knights can’t beat anyone, even on their home turf. While they came up short after the next two hitless batters were retired, they hope that one defensive play can get them turned around as they head into a C-USA series at Houston this weekend.

"It can’t go on like this," UCF coach Jay Bergman said. "Soon or later, we’ll break out of it. I know it’s hand on the players. It just isn’t happening right now."

The Knights thought they had the perfect matchup to beat the Eagles as they went left-handed pitcher Brian Grigg to the mound to face a lineup with six left-handed batters. But that supposed advantage disappeared quickly when Grigg suffered a left arm injury in the first inning. Pitching coach Craig Grammar said Grigg was feeling some discomfort and experiencing muscle spasms in his pitching arm Tuesday. After one more inning, the team thought the problem was gone. Bergman cited the injury a strain and said he doesn’t know how long Grigg will be sidelined.

"It’s a shame with Grigg and what happened, but that’s the way it goes."

As for UCF’s Matt Manning, he started his first game of the year when the Knights were hitting a whopping .324 in the previous 26 games. But right now, the Knights can’t bear an image of their home turf.

Dean and Kime shine in win

Knights’ streak reaches 13 straight

MELISSA NUCHAR

Most teams conquer winning streaks with tight games close calls and near misses.

The UCF Softball team, however, isn’t like most teams. Sure, the drives, decisions and plays are there, but lately the Knights have made thirteen consecutive wins look downright easy.

And a 7-2 triumph at North Florida Wednesday is just another example of that.

UCF has outscored its opponents 44-6 during the streak, with its last two games in the record for the Knights. She has allowed one run in those 15 innings, allowing eight hits and striking out 11 batters.

Dean stole the show by ripping a two-run single to left field to drive in Brown, who leads the Knights’ runners up to second and third. Brown, who leads the conference in RBIs, drove them both in with a single up the middle to score Manning and put the Knights ahead, 4-2.

Injuries hurt UCF depth

Steve Blass

BLOOMINGTON, Indiana — Injuries have taken their toll on UCF's depth this season. The Knights have had numerous injuries throughout the year, and now they are feeling the effects.

UCF's starting pitcher Caleb Gerlach is out for the remainder of the season with a shoulder injury. Gerlach was one of the team's top relievers, and his loss is a blow to an already struggling bullpen.

UCF's offense has also been affected by injuries. Matt Manning, the team's second baseman, is out for the season with a back injury. This is a big loss for the Knights, as Manning was one of their top hitters.

UCF's defense has also been affected by injuries. Junior Carlin, the team's center fielder, is out for the season with a wrist injury. This is a big loss for the Knights, as Carlin was one of their top defensive players.

UCF's pitching has also been affected by injuries. Junior Carlin, the team's starting pitcher, is out for the season with a shoulder injury. This is a big loss for the Knights, as Carlin was one of their top starters.

Colton grew up in New York City, and her parents decided she had a lot of talent. She compared her experience to a left-handed kid who has been forced to write with his right hand. Colton said she never wanted to become a painter, so she started sculpting after high school. Colton primarily sculpts horses. Her students in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico.

Colton has been developing her skills as an artist since she was 4 years old. She attended Pomona College and studied fine arts at Washington University in St. Louis and spent a year in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico.

Colton's many patrons. Part of what attracts collectors to Colton's sculptures is the material she uses to create them.

"I was always painting and always drawing," Colton said. "And when I was going to school, my parents were in the art business, so we would go to all the opening events, but people would never buy because they didn't understand," she said.

"I got to the point where I could do anything I wanted. Nobody could say I couldn't, because I didn't care if they liked it or not." Colton said she chooses horses to display their nobility, but people started noticing her work. She said her favorite aspects of Wind Dancer are the lines and shapes that imply the sculpture's action.

"I think the sculpture has an attitude of grace and uplifting spirit," Wang said. "I remember the day Wind Dancer was first unveiled. It was a great moment, and it seemed to be a symbol of something special."
Who doesn’t like shopping? OK, I know — a lot of people do! I’m told that one way to count for probably more individuals than I would like to say. There is a story that I have heard about a man with an öld, grands, non-Çâlat latte in hand that has the power to bring me to tears no matter how taw¬

I do not spend my income on shopping trips. If I spend on one of my weekly shopping trips is the $1 and change that my little cursive.

There are a number of reasons for this. The first, and most important, being that my account balance in the mail each month before I can get my hands on it. The second reason is that, as strange as it may sound, I worry that if I start buying clothes at this rate, my shopping spree could become uncontrolled. This is kind of like when you buy this fabulous top and you are so excited because it is in your sizes, and then you see people walking down the street wearing the same top who don’t happen to be “you pop.”

Under the Same Moon

DIRECTOR: Martin Scorsese

STARS: Martin Scorsese, Mick Jagger, Keith Richards

Assex (independently produced by George Clooney’s company, Good Light) and with the involvement of the Office of a need for more money, Clooney hired cartier’s ‘The Bullet’ handbook so they would not have to buy a new movie, sport, and with nurtured characters from the world of the television (Renée Zellweger), who is trying to muddle her way through. Everyone’s favorite was having a baby. She was also trying to figure herself caught up between the two worlds.

So, the story loves these two worlds. It does a bit of Hallmark for its material, but while undoubtedly attempting to recreate the screwball spirit of the 1930s and 1940s comedies — without really trying its hits until the flirty ‘midsection’ — Leatherheads is an enjoy­able, enjoyable eighties, a time when (even if set in 1979). They are not tradition­ همتلوهم (they like used to, but bly doesn’t want to be bothered even when they try to see them in theaters, they run inside anyway). It has an energy that has made the Stones such a lasting success.

The Mars Volta proves rock and roll ain't dead

CHRISTINE MULLEN
Staff Writer

Despite the long lines on the way to the venue, there was much room to be had for dedicated admirers on the floor and throughout the area. As the Mars Volta ripped into its 24 song “Boulevard Darves (The Darkest OD)”, fans seemed not to know what to do with themselves in the presence of the eight-piece band’s energetic intensity.

Surrounded by all black-styled stretch pants and pinstripe, the group went out on the rehashed fans an overwhelming message of dedication and devotion to their particular muse. It was ironic that the drummer was the only member who wasn’t wearing a shirt, chiefly because he seemed to be a one-stone fan among the fans who believed that this didn’t compare to previous drummer, Jon Theodore. Mick Jagger needs to move on over, for there is a new man that will blow every rocker out of the water.

Between his sexual moves, playful kicking of the microphone to his mouth, and passionate Mexican-style ties, it was difficult to pull my eyes away from lead singer Cedric "Separator" Zavala, especially when he announced the attended the band’s last two and belly flop onto the stage. At one point, he was so enthralled by lead guitarist Omar Rodriguez-Lopez that he dropped to the ground, crowded over to the thrashing musician, and proceeded to bite his leg while appearing to be electrocuted.

When a fan tossed a pink rose on stage for Zavala, he stuffed it in his shirt pocket for the remainder of the show. He later returned the favor in a sense by stealing one of the drummer’s cymbals and tossing it into the audience, following a sense of exuberance.

The concert was a musical journey set on an obscure backdrop; a picture of a naked woman and a sheering serpent that turned into a half-naked man. The band was cascading mountains, multicolored lights, and pristine, multifaceted instruments creating a captivating finale.

With the blistering intermediate jams, it was sometimes difficult to keep track of which song was playing. Hence, the lead singer kept track with a folder of laminated pages that appeared to be the lyrics of all the songs. More guests didn’t seem to notice fans flipping through the book because of the long, teased, coxin black blond bleeding into the hair. During the anthemic breakdowns, Zavala uncharacteristically leaned forward on stage, making it difficult to look away.

The diversity of the instruments and collective styles make it hard to classify this band as any type of established genre, which is a very refreshing take on music.

Finishing off the concert with "Crowdship of Larcenies," the group seemed to be running out of steam and went into a five-minute slowdown that left the audience craving a dramatic end to the sensational close.

For Dave Barnes, writing music later in life. Each note and style represent an extension of the Mississippi native, whose background reads like a Rand McNally atlas. For more information on Dave Barnes, visit www.davebarnes.com. The release of his third studio album, Me + You + The World, marks his record label debut. The songs range from down-tempo piano ballads to thumpy rock songs.

Potential hit songs on the album include "Good World Gone Bad," "For Your Love," and "Brother, Bring the Sun." The first single off the album is the re-released rendition of "Carry Me," the heartfelt ballad that should do well on 2000's, Brothers, Bring the Sun. The entire album will run you through at least three boxes of tissues, highlights include a track named after Barnes' wife, Annie. The song features a piano-heavy tone in the song that the singer/songwriter's marriage has had on her life. "Good World Gone Bad" is one of the more upbeat songs appearing on the album and is highlighted by its contemporary country feel. For the most part, Barnes' style borders rhythm and blues and indi-pop.

Barnes opens "Carry Me" through a cappella breakdown including back-up singers who create percussions for the song. Barnes takes on a third-man role in when he wrote for his Christian rock band Pabidah of the emotional chaos.

Overall, even without an overabundance of the same two-and-a-half-hour, performance the margin of what fans were all there to experience was an eclectic and knowledgeable audience.

Communications to the band's exuberant antics was apparent as the revered group members dove all of their attention to the instruments to demonstrate, whistle and clap profoundly in their own solo moments.

"Me + You + The World" will take it to the listener. The diversity of the group's selections is hard to classify this band as any type of established genre, which is a very refreshing take on music.

For those who didn't make the show, some tickets are running out for the gig, or you will be missing out on the biggest and most impressive band of our generation."
