DON'T MESS WITH GRUMPY OLD MEN

A 32-year-old man in Pennsylvania is accused of水质出水 devices. But for the young women, though, it might be an old man who ended their lives. The women were found bound by the neck and the head and choked with a rope made of a rope and a belt. The bodies contained signs of sexual assault, and the investigation continues.

Students volunteer to help victims of east coast wildfires

The UCF Student Nurse Association held a donation Friday to all those affected by the East Coast wildfires. All of the donations went to the Central Florida Sharing Center in Cocoa. This was the first time this event has taken place at UCF, and two of the ten volunteers put in action.

Students and volunteer staff from the University of Central Florida's newest addition will be the Mongridge International Reading Center, a $5.2 million addition that will be a "iconic gateway to campus," according to the university.

The mission statement is advancing literacy through research, information, and collaboration. On this mission, Dr. Susan Wagnon, director of the Mongridge Reading Center, says, "Every idea we're working on is for the purpose of trying to find the solutions to urban and rural education problems. We've done quite a bit of work." The Mongridge International Reading Center will continue to work with children and adults to solve their education problems. The center is a branch of the College of Education.

Theogenesis of the reading center is concerned about students who need help in learning. In addition, the nonprofit reading center will be a showcase for authors and illustrators. It is a branch from the College of Education, and the students are volunteers who help the center run.

UCF to add $5.2M reading center

The new Mongridge International Reading Center is located in the Student Union and is set to break ground in the fall.

Students and volunteers from the College of Nursing donated 150 water bottles, 200 bags of nuts and 1000 packages of fruit and vegetables. The college also donated 159 water bottles, 200 bags of nuts and 1000 packages of fruit and vegetables. The college also donated $5.2 million dollars to the center.

Cap and gown sizing begins soon on campus - time for students to get measurements for graduation. Students can get their caps and gowns printed and ready for the Barnes & Noble near the UCF Student Union starting Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Students can also order caps and gowns and make announcements through the B&N Web site.

The increase for the company’s power costs, which customers would go into effect later this month, would charge $16.28 per month more than the current rate. It is the second fuel-related increase in a little over a year. The increased fuel costs will be spread across the board.

Power & Light is asking to be allowed to charge extra fees to add a surcharge to make up their fuel costs. Cab drivers have the green light to begin assessing the surcharge. "It’s relationship building. It’s learning to use your sixth sense, accepting what the customer was able to pay and extending our service."

Video streaming is the new type of online class that has replaced some deprecated methods of instruction in the College of Business. Video streaming is often used as an excuse for the university's budget cuts.

With video streaming, classes are given on the internet. The classroom and the professor are virtual. Students can take notes and interact with each other online, and in some cases are able to come to class.

Video streaming not only allows students to learn from home, it also allows a large number of students to complete a class in one semester. Dean Cleavenger, teacher of management of organizations, which is a video-streaming class, as well as a core requirement for students in the College of Business, said, "It's video streaming. It's designed to deliver the content to massive numbers of students with ease."

Cleavenger said that this typical size for a video-streaming class is around 500 students in 16 weeks. With this type of class, students can have their summer classes, Dean Cleavenger teaches, of 16 weeks, or 2,000. Cleavenger said that it offers obvious advantages in terms of delivery and cost that many classes can't offer.

Many of the classes that are live video streaming in the College of Business are the core classes that every business major is required to take.

Taylor Ellis, associate dean of Undergraduate Programs and Technology, is responsible for making sure that video streaming is a viable alternative. Ellis said, "It's a way to incorporate video streaming in some classes, but students need to be aware that it's not the standard for all classes."

"We originally intended to have nine, but we are starting to get more demands for classes that can take the video streaming format from students," Ellis said. Knowing that the faculty is taking into consideration the students' demands is reassuring to business majors, Christina Gekas, a finance and accounting major, said that she likes the video-streaming classes just as much as her face-to-face instruction.

"I would say that I like the video-streaming classes because it allows me to work on my classes when I want and there is not a scheduled time that I have to work on my class," Gekas said.

However, other students feel that it's not just the convenience that determines whether or not they enjoy their video-streaming class. Dominic Brunetti, a management of human resources major, said that it also depends on the professor. "I think a lot of it depends on the teacher," Brunetti said. "I've had classes where I've watched the first lecture and decided I was never going to watch another lecture again because I didn't feel like I am getting anything out of it. If they [the professor] just read the PowerPoint slides, I can do that myself."

Although not all students have an overwhelmingly negative attitude about video streaming, some feel as though they shouldn't have to pay the same price for video streaming classes as they do for face-to-face instruction.

"There are some teachers who do show that there's no differentiation between grades, and students like the convenience," Ellis said. Efficiency and convenience are two reasons why UCF and the College of Business have decided to incorporate video-streaming classes. However, budget cuts could also be a reason.

"I think if budgets weren't an issue, we would run like a nice organic private school," Cleavenger said. "I think that's the preference of most people."

Whether it's budget cuts or a newfound efficiency, technology in the classroom seems to be unstoppable.

Knight Cruisers meet
MEGAN ANDERSON
Melina, transmissions and driving fast are just a few things that the members of UCF’s Knight Cruisers Car Club do since they prefer the sounds of their cars at their Wednesday night meetings. The Knight Cruisers first started in 2005, but didn’t gain traction until the first set of officers graduated in 2008. Since then, the club has grown from a few members up to 100, which is in new of not only the cars, but also camaraderie.

With President Ryan Hemmery at the wheel, the car club is soon to be speeding its way to success. Ranging from UCF and Valencia students to UCF alumni, the club has developed a diverse group of members, all with an enthusiasm for cars. Melina.

“We have about 30 or 40 people that generally come out to work every week,” Hemmery said. “We have a big array of old cars, new cars, domestic and imports. It’s a broad collection of people that enjoy cars.”

Kyle Gabrin, vice president of the club, thinks that the diverse nature of the club makes their club stand out from other car clubs.

“I think we are unique because we aren’t car specific,” Gabrin said. “We have a broad collection of cars, which makes things interesting because we have the same amount of people that love the same amount of cars. The neat thing about the meetings. The meetings for UCF’s Knight Cruisers are held at the Orlando Speed World in Kissimmee for racing or a local car show. We normally meet at a gas station near a race track as a group together or we just go to a race track and a while,” Hemmery said.

Hemmery’s most memorable event of the club was the car show they hosted last year. He hopes to continue the show every year in order to raise money and to create a tradition.

“We had our last car show at Alafaya Town Center,” Hemmery said. “We had about one thousand people show up and a bunch of sponsors come out like Florida Ski and Blacktop Performance, and FireHGdawn...It was a pretty successful show and we had a good time doing it.”

The club hopes that the car show will get their name out and attract others to UCF and help them achieve their goal of expanding the club membership.

“There are currently unique cars coming up to the garage, and Gabrin. We have a car every week and try to make the bigger shows with a wider attendance of people coming up weekly.”

While asking friends posted on campus about the club, UCF junior Gabrin’s Garrett joined in 2007.

“For me, the most fun in the car club is getting to know a variety of people,” Garrett said. “On a campus as large as UCF, you can easily become a number, so meeting people with similar interests is always nice.”

Melina.

“Everyone’s welcome,” Melina said. “This past week to week at Garage D a couple of people showed up and we have a Web site, UCF. It is a great way to connect with others that love cars.”

Gabrin, however, is more interested in making and driving unique cars.

“We constantly have new cars coming up to the garage, and Gabrin. We have a car every week and try to make the bigger shows with a wider attendance of people coming up weekly.”

Tortorella was fired Tuesday as coach of the Lightning for the fifth time in six seasons under owner Jeff Vinik, who took over as the owner of the franchise in January 2001, and helped transform it into a championship contender in only three years.

"It's a very difficult time for our organization, and especially glad to be back home," Vinik said. "As a team and as a franchise, we are very, very difficult for anyone to do, but certainly afford a coach that's that caliber, the general manager and I have agreed." Vinik said.

"This was a difficult decision for four players to do, but we know what we're doing." Vinik said.

UCF Track and Field head coach Caryl Smith Gilbert was not happy with results.

"I'm disappointed because I know that Diane worked very hard this year," Gilbert said. "She's been a stellar athlete and a great person. She's given up a lot for the team."

Thomas provided a solid foundation and school-record leap of 14.45 in her first attempt, topping previous season previous jump of 14.43, which she accomplished at the Penn Relays on April 29.

Gilbert said that Thomas was in the top five as the triple jump event began to wind down at the East Regional. "She's been a stellar athlete," Gilbert said. "She's been a stellar athlete.

"She's worked incredibly hard this year," Gilbert said. "I know that Dione worked incredibly hard this year.

"She's been a stellar athlete."

"Her best jump happened to come at the regional meet," Gilbert said. "So, she might have beaten them heads-up, but they got out in over her because their jump was further than hers, earlier in the year.

"That's a great accomplishment for Diane and for UCF, and it adds to our collection of honors that we've been collecting this year," Gilbert said. "Next year, we should have a lot more of those, and we're going to work hard over the summer. You're going to see a whole new team next year."

Gilbert said that she always sets a high standard for her team because she believes whatever expectation a coach sets for their student-athletes will be exceeded, and the expectation for the Knights next year is certainly a lofty one.

"Our goal was to breakevery school record," Gilbert said.

"It's no one person," Muhl said. "It's definitely a team effort."

"UCF is hoping it can get a strong team effort this week-end and live up to the No. 5 ranking, with its ultimate goal being a championship ranking, with its ultimate goal being a championship ranking."

"It's not about me at all," Gilbert said. "My purpose is to mold and shape them into the direction they want to go in. But it also makes me very happy that they're happy. It makes me more motivated to get them into the top three."

"The task of making the Olympic team will be great," Gilbert said. "If she is able to do it, though, it will truly be amazing for her.

"If she makes that Olympic team, that's probably one of the most prestigious positions in sport," she said.

Sex and the City: The Movie

Starting Sarah Jessica Parker, Kim Cattrall, Sarah Jenson, Kristin Davis and Cynthia Nixon, Sex and the City follows the romantic and sexual adventures of friends in the 20-something age-group.

The movie was much-anticipated, especially by the female audience, who I was [at Southern College Preparatory School].

I was excited. When I got a ticket to the premiere in New York, I was elated.

On the day of the premiere, after sightseeing in Manhattan and pampering on the Upper East Side, I dressed for the big night. I wore a short, black and silver Tracy Reese brock with floral lace. Since Manolo Blahnik are a little out of my price range, I chose black and tiny BCBG Max Azria heels I also loaded a black crystal and varsity bracelet and clutch from Swarovski, to add a little bling to my ensemble.

After a bit of traffic, rain and parking through a plethora of security checkpoints, we made our way into Radio City Music Hall. It was bustling with girls dressed in bold, toe­ designer clothing — Prada dresses and Louboutin shoes in the eyes could see. Celebrities strolled in from a separate entrance, since they got to walk the pink carpet, unlike us lesser mortals.

Donald and besides brushing past Jones, Kristin Davis (Charlotte York) and Sarah Jessica Parker (Carrie Bradshaw). I also spotted a lot of designers and fashion editors, unassuming Ashley Olsen, the host Darcel Stevens, the host of the drag show, the MC of the drag show, and the record store was a hub for music lovers and fashionistas, even at a time when online downloading continues to clip profits margins in the recording business.

"I'm into classic rock and old soul," Justin Cropper said, "I usually just come, look around and see if they have anything new that I need to take with me."

Barack Obama, please read this advice column

I highly doubt that the newly crowned presidential nominee, Barack Obama, will read this newspaper. Few people have read this newspaper. Even less likely is the city council where he once held office (or even, turn to the back of the paper and read that column). But if he does, I have a message for him.

As a fellow resident, he needs to know that the last 8 years of his life have not been in vain. Far from it. While he was growing up in a non-Latin environment, I was let know about boating vocabulary (I am no expert, but it would probably be more helpful if he understands the idea of planning to win the vote on a specific day). He and I were both raised in the same city, and I can assure him that his success comes in large part from the fact that he has never lost sight of the fact that he is an American. And as an American, he has a responsibility to all of us.

Half-vote, or full vote, at the nomination process and elections must be considered. What if this state were to stay in the Democratic party? If so, then we need to understand our state's voting rights. That is the question is, who will track the votes? What if the state were to be recognized as the democrat of either Michigan or Florida, and agreed to follow the Democratic convention, but each will carry with it the cost of preserving the victory. But if the state were to stay in the Republican party, it would “with all due deference to Florida and Ohio 9 delegates and Obama 95” as the national committee does not allow half-votes. The national committee suggests that nearly half of all states are contested by the two democratic candidates, the votes would not count.

The democratic party has agreed to half-vote, while the Republican party has agreed to a compromise proposal.
