UCF student who took a Eucharist from a Catholic Campus Mass is impeached

JEFFREY RILEY

Student Government Association Senator Webster Cook was impeached during the SGA meeting on Thursday evening. The vote count was 33-2-0.

Being impeached doesn't mean he will be removed from office. The vote signals the start of a trial to remove Cook from his elected position.

According to a press release written by Dustin Robinson, general counsel and public relations chairman for SGA, this will have no effect on Cook's status as a student. "The Student Government Association does not have the ability to expel Webster Cook, this is a power given solely to the Student Conduct Board," Robinson wrote.

Cook was not present at the meeting where he was impeached.

At the beginning of the meeting, Speaker Brian Peterson gave a report on the matter for Student Senators. "Let me begin by addressing an issue that's recently impacted the campus and cast a negative light on our efforts within the Student Government," Peterson added.

"The Student Government Association is an isolated event and one that interfered with our true purpose. The goal of the SGA is to isolate event and one that interfered with our true purpose."

The meeting was a normal Senate session, so after the opening statements by Peterson, other topics were discussed. Before moving on to the impeachment action, the senators were given 10 minutes to read over the affidavit itself, which contained quotes and statements from members of Catholic Campus Ministry who were present at the Mass when Cook was involved.

After only a few minutes of debate on the topic, the vote took place, and Cook was impeached. Webster Cook, along with a friend, went to a Catholic Campus Mass on June 29. During the Mass, Cook had an altercation with various members of the organization after he pocketed a Eucharist, which is against Catholic tradition.

Cook ended up leaving the Mass with the Eucharist. He was not present at the SGA meeting.

Athlete died of sickle cell trait

Plancher collapsed while working out

UCF Football player Brock Plancher was arrested in his medical condition. Sickle-cell trait put him at risk for sudden death during strenuous physical activity, according to a statement released Thursday by the Office of the Medical Examiner for Orange and Osceola counties.

Plancher collapsed during a March 38 conditioning workout that was supervised by UCF coaches and staff. Plancher was taken to a nearby hospital and died less than an hour later.

The Medical Examiner's Office stated after examination of Plancher's body and review of numerous other traits that Plancher's death was the result of "the potential for excessive physiologic abnormality associated with sickle cell trait."

The sickle-cell trait can hamper an athlete's ability to carry oxygen and has been cited as the cause of sudden death of athletes after strenuous

The Student Government Association Senate passed two resolutions to honor the memories of graduate student Nicole Gonzales and alumnum Son Thomas Delan at the July 17 meeting. "We will not forget the students who passed, and we will honor the memory of these two students," said a member of the student senate amid a debate.

A resolution would create an official legislative action that recognizes Gonzales' contributions to UCF. Delan's life and career operated on the campus.

Senate President Brian Peterson stepped down to speak on the issue. "This is not a political decision," Peterson said.

The 40th Student Senate passed the two resolutions unanimously and both had a 35-0 vote. Resolution 40-2 will honor the memory of Delan.

Kamlesh Agrawal, 30, is charged with murdering his cousin, Deepa Agarwal, on July 12, 1999. Agrawal was also a UCF student.

According to the Orange County Sheriff's Office, Agrawal was arrested in Mumbai, India, in 2000, and has been resisting extradition to the country since.

Deepa Agarwal's body was found in a sealed moving box in the closet of her and Agrawal's shared apartment at Mission Bay apartments on University Boulevard. The body was found on July 30, 1999.

According to investigators, Agrawal became the prime suspect after he sold his car and other items soon after the murder to an associate and bought a

Authorities continue to look for 2-year-old girl missing in Orlando
ORLANDO — Authorities are working on dozens of tips in their search for a 2-year-old Central Florida girl.

Orange County Sheriff’s officials say Caylee Marie Anthony mysteriously vanished more than a month ago. Her 25-year-old mother, Casey Marie Anthony, was arrested for the child’s disappearance and is in jail on police work to record the disappearance.

Shake said with child neglect and criminal obstruction.

Officials say the woman took to detectives at her home Saturday, but didn’t drop off her daughter at a day care last month as she promised.

She denies her guilt.

On Friday, authorities used cadaver dogs to search the back yard of a house belonging to the woman’s parents.

Man allegedly tried to break into Hollywood High
Hollywood — Authorities say the body of an unidentified man was found Saturday evening after employees noticed a foul smell and what appeared to be blood dripping on the floor in the kitchen. The man’s body was found in a vent on the roof, they said in the woman’s back yard.

Is it not yet known how he died or whether he was visiting the business.

Red algae blooms along 12 miles of coast near Fort Myers
PORT MYERS — Red algae is expected to continue along the Southwest coast of Florida.

The algal mass is blooming along 12 miles of shoreline between Fort Myers and the north end of Bonita Beach. It’s being named a red tide and churning Gulf of Mexico waters.

Although harmless to humans, the algae can present a bad smell. Business owners in the area say it has kept visitors away or forced them to cut vacation plans.

But one resident says she won’t let it ruin her summer plans. John Conley drives to the beach every day with a few friends. The 88-year-old says he enjoys the smell, but it doesn’t bother him.

In 2000, red drift algae washed ashore during Tropical Storm Alberto and blanketed most of Fort Myers Beach.

UCF Grad shares his Gatorland journey at History Center’s Brown Bag Lunch and Learn

JONATHAN HINDESSEE

“It’s never fun catching aliens,” Gatorland’s show coordinator Randy Denbrough said, referring to the difficulty of capturing the 3-year-old alligator he was presenting to group of grade school children inside the lobby of the Orange County Regional History Center on July 12, inside of Denbrough’s spectacular 10-month-old baby alligator.

For the July installment of the History Center’s Brown Bag Lunch and Learn program, Mark McHugh, the president and CEO of the Orlando amusement park Gatorland and UCF grad, was invited to the History Center to discuss both the history and future of the 59-year-old world-renowned destination.

McHugh spoke inside the History Center’s Brown Bag Lunch and Learn room, where, with the help of a slide show, he discussed the history and origins of Gatorland.

Owen G. Godwin Sr. founded Gatorland in 1949 and originally named it the Alligator Farm Wildlife Institute.

“It’s as an attraction and a part of the community, we’ve been deeply involved with the community, we’ve been here for about 60 years and a lot of people that grow up here, in Orlando grew up going to Gatorland,” McHugh said.

Through his history, Gatorland acted as a destination for those who were not only interested in alligators and crocodiles, but other exotic animals such as snakes and turtles. Gatorland also acted as a pet farm up until 1998 when the park decided to become more of a conservation-oriented organization.

Two years ago, the Historic Central Florida landmark nearly closed down forever. In 2000, a fire, which was started by a heating element that was used for pythons, had an electronic malfunction. The fire was responsible for destroying the majority of Gatorland’s buildings.

Although the only injured facility from the fire where the two pythons in the area where the first started and a gator, the financial and emotional drain of the fire was devastating.

During the lecture, McHugh attempted to address those at his talk and to explain “They could listen to boy story where you did a collection of fire came together to destroy the damaged remains of the wing of the park that stood at Gatorland.”

But one resident says she won’t let it ruin her beach vacation plans short.

We are an integral part of the community,” McHugh said.

Before he became the CEO and President of Gatorland, McHugh was a 19-year-old vet of the Sea World amusement park, which is where he met his wife, Diane, whose grandfather, Edward R. McHugh, attended the University of Central Florida and is involved in marine biology and in 1998, while involved with Gatorland, McHugh also earned an MBA from the University of South Florida.

The presentation was a part of the History Center’s Brown Bag Lunch and Learn program, in which speakers discuss pivotal moments in Central Florida history.

“The Brown Bag Lunch and Learn series is a number of programs that we have here and we have every other month,” said Paul Woglesworth, the History Center’s curator of education.

“Because we are located downtown, and there are many businesses downtown, there are so many people looking for a different way to do lunch, we thought that this might be a good way of engaging the downtown community.”

Previous Brown Bag Lunch and Learn programs at the History Center included Diana Sutphin discussing political cartooning and the story of the sinking of the USS Indianapolis.

The next Brown Bag Lunch will be held on August 8 and will feature yet another UCF Influencer. Professor Richard Michael Lapchick will be at the center to discuss the issue of diversity at the Olympics.

The Orange County Regional History Center is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The general admission is $5.

The History Center can be reached either at 407-838-6000 or at their Web site, www.historicflorida.org.

UCF awarded grant to support Autism program

JENNA NEW

Autism Speaks, a nonprofit organization dedicated to raising money for research and increasing awareness of autism, has awarded UCF's CARD and the Real Experience in Autism Classrooms a grant for autism research. With this new program, Real Experience in Autism Classrooms Helps, UCF CARD and the new program are part of a statewide support system for autism and related disabilities that provides assistance to families, schools, community agencies and any other places where autistic individuals may spend their time, said Teresa Daly, director and project leader for UCF CARD.

The UCF program, designed after the University of South Florida's Partnership for Effective Programs for the students with Autism, will begin this fall with a placement of 50 to 100 UCF students working closely with teachers in 20 local classrooms. According to UCF's PEPSA Web site, USF's original program was designed to provide critical training for teachers and guiding training students for those who want to provide a high quality education for their students with autism and related spectrum disorders. Daly said UCF's CARD plans to do the same with their new program, C.A.R.D. for Community Autism Research.

UCF's CARD and the new program will work closely with teachers in 10 to 20 local classrooms. According to UCF's PEPSA Web site, USF's original program was designed to provide critical training for teachers and guiding training students for those who want to provide a high quality education for their students with autism and related spectrum disorders. Daly said UCF's CARD plans to do the same with their new program, C.A.R.D. for Community Autism Research.

The $20,000 grant will be used to help provide the Real Experience program, match UCF students with local teachers, fund traveling for CARD representatives to go to the assigned schools and check on UCF students, as well as for data collection and follow-up studies, Daly said.

"Grant money will also be used to provide UCF students with additional training to answer further questions about autism," Daly said. "Only 30 of 40 grants were given out by Autism Speaks for the program category this year. The grant is for one year, but Daly says she hopes to continue the program as long as the grant cycle ends July 2009 and plans to encourage other universities to do so as well.

Autism is a neurological disorder that typically lasts throughout an individual's lifetime. One in every 138 individuals is diagnosed with autism and the disorder is expected to become more common as more people are diagnosed in the future. Autism affects all racial, ethnic and social groups by impairing a person's ability to communicate and relate to others. Individuals with the disorder may also exhibit severe behaviors such as aggression, self-injury or withdrawn behavior, according to UCF's CARD Web site, www.ucfcard.org.

The cause of the disorder is not yet known, but according to UCF's CARD Web site, parents and experimenters in a child's life are not responsible.

U.S. Army in Iraq hosts party to celebrate Colombian hostages

MIAMI — The U.S. Army is honoring the Colombian government for its role in rescuing hostages held by terrorist groups in a ceremony in Miami.

Sunday is the Colombian Independence Festival.

The ceremony will involve the stage holding a box of gold that was previously flown on Capitol Hill. Both the Colombian and American flags will be raised during their anthems.

U.S. Congressman Lincoln Diaz-Balart will be present with a flag, which will then go to the Colombian Council in Miami.

an 11-year-old boy died Saturday after being left in a car in a West Palm Beach parking lot while his mother was shopping.

The Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office said Saturday that 29-year-old Mirland Baptiste mistook the boy for the baby in the car. She dropped off her baby at a relative's house Saturday before going into the store.

She was supposed to get married at the bakery on Sunday. Instead, the family mourned the boy's death at the hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Officials say the boy may have been in the car for more than two hours. Temperatures outside reached 90 degrees.

Barack Obama visits Afghanistan for first time

FISNIK ABRASHI / Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Democratic presidential candidate Barack Obama has made his first surprise visit to Afghanistan in its capital, with his Western-backed troops and sought to assure the war on terror "with vigor." if elected, an Afghan official said.

On the second day of an international tour designed to burnish his foreign policy credentials, Illinois Sen. Barack Obama and a pair of U.S. allies held two hours of meetings with Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf at his palace in the eastern city of Rawalpindi.

Obama has cited Musharraf as doing more to build confidence in his government, which remains weak after the ouster of the Taliban in 2001.

He made a public comment after the meeting, but said in a written statement that his main purpose was to thank the troops, thank them for "their extraordinary service," and say the United States is proud of them.

Obama said he and his colleagues are talking to military and diplomatic leaders, and Musharraf’s aides about whether the U.S. has the right strategy and resources to defeat the Taliban and al-Qaida.

"Our message to the Afghan government is this: We want a strong partnership based on trust for more...more resources from the United States and NATO, and more action from the Afghan government to improve the lives of the Afghan people," Obama said.

Obama also expressed confidence in his country’s future as "precarious" and said they had "not gotten to the ground," he said, in footage filmed in Pakistan.

While officially part of a congressional delegation on a fact-finding tour that is expected to take him to Iraq, Obama traveled to Afghanistan amid security concerns. He has said that his trip is focused on “the central focus in our battle against terrorism.”

Obama said he was "very pleased" and "very proud" of the Afghan government and its progress, saying it had “not gotten to the ground” and was still "very much" at the center of the conflict.

The situation is precarious and urgent here in Afghanistan, Obama said.

He said the United States and NATO need more resources to defeat the Taliban and al-Qaida.

WASHINGTON - The political life of a gas tax holiday died a quick death in Congress, losing in a vote that federal fuel taxes remain at current levels and that federal gas tax revenues will have to go up if they go anywhere.

Despite calls from the presidential campaign trail for a Memorial Day-to-Labor Day gas tax holiday, McCain and former Democratic candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton called for a 90-day suspension of the federal fuel tax. McCain considered the tax a windfall profit tax on oil companies, an idea that Republican candidates rejected. McCain said the money could come out of the General Treasury Fund, in effect adding to the federal deficit, and is still getting mileage from the idea.

The chief executive, other economists don’t think high gas prices or gas taxes will do much — “But the American people don’t think that way, they want to do something,” gases the Democratic candidate.

Democratic nominees, opposed the idea, especially the beginning and the White House has since been lobbying the 42-year-old Highway Trust Fund for a 90-day suspension. Is there a chance that the fund tax might be extended for a year when it is time to replenish the road trust fund next year; Republican candidates objected to that too.

Condemns should first reduce spending, get projects, known as earmarks, argued Sen. Jim DeMint, R-S.C. “I’m not going to let the Senate spend all this money when nobody is looking, especially when we refuse to stop wasting billions of taxpayer dollars on earmarks.”

Obstructs, D-Sen., said his committee is working on a revenue bill. He estimated it would raise between $44 to $55 billion over six years to address safety and congestion issues with highways, bridges, and transi-systems.

“Will let all kinds of the talk,” Obstructs said, but the gas tax “to the consumer. Nothing else will work without the underpinning of the higher user fees tax.”

At the very least, the gas tax should be indexed to construction cost inflation, DeMint said.

The nonpartisan National Surface Transportation Policy and Revenue Study Commission concluded in a report this year that the U.S. needs to spend $225 billion annually over the next 20 years to create a highway and transit system capable of sustaining economic growth. Current spending, at federal and state, local levels, is about $250 billion a year.

Memorial Day-to-Labor Day, a time when laborers come into the red doomed the idea. Depriving the 52-year-old Democratic nominee, how many jobs and how much trust money could the gas tax issue, when the concept was introduced to the audience during the ordeal came to an end.

DeFazio presented the impeachment affidavit to Senate. On July 16, the Legislative, is unknown at this time of the story in front of everyone. It ranged from $30 million and $500 billion a year starting Oct. 1993, the association says.

Overseas, a 10-cent-a-gallon rise and indexing the tax to inflation with construction costs soaring because of competition for building materials from China and other developing nations, the tax rise would have to be about 21 cents a gallon to achieve the same purchasing power as the increase the Pennsylvania Legislature voted in on July 1993, the association says.

Instead, many miles they drive. It has an advisory panel. This means that the gas tax “is the cornerstone of the Gas Tax. Weathord has been offering rare advice to understanding the legal aspects of everything that has happened with Cook. Weathord would not comment about the way the impeachment vote went, especially with the closeness the situation has no religious.

“I foresee it going this way,” Weathord said. “It appears as if there are outside motivators.

On the other side of the issue, during Weathord, a political science major and member of the Pennsylvania 1993, the association says. Among other revenue-generating possibilities, the commission recommended gradually increasing the current federal fuel taxes to 40 cents a gallon.

After four years with the Knights, the baseball center fielder agreed to a free-agent contract with the Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim Tuesday. Auray could not be reached for a quote, but he is expected to sign a deal by Wednesday. Auray's agent is still negotiating with team officials. Auray is a local favorite after playing with the UCF baseball team for three seasons. Auray was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim in the 31st round of the 2008 MLB draft and signed with the team on July 11.

BACK-TO-BACK?

For the second time in three seasons, the UCF Football Team has been picked by the 13 head coaches of Conference USA to repeat as East Division champions.

UCF received 67 of a possible 72 points in the preseason coaches' poll, which was released Wednesday. Tulsa was an unanimous pick to win the West, but UCF holds true, the Knights and Golden Hurricane will battle for the C-USA Championship on Dec. 6 for the third time in four seasons.

"It's nice to see that other people think highly of you, but I think one thing we focus on is our own expectations for ourselves," senior safety Shaw-Ray Bashall said. "Expectations for our team are always high, and we expect to win the conference every year."

Two Knights made the coaches' All-CUSA Team, senior punt returner Joe Burnett and offensive lineman Pat Brown. Burnett was named the league's special teams player of the year. He rushed 28th in the nation and second in C-USA with a 10.68 yards per return total last season. He leads all active punt returners in the NCAA Football Bowl Subdivision with 950 career punt return yards. Burnett was also named UCA's Special Teams Player of the Year prior to the 2007 season.

"That's an honor," Burnett said. "That's something I've been working on and I proved that I am the guy that they picked, that chosen one to be." But Burnett has more than one job. He has also been one of the Knights' two starting cornerbacks for the past two seasons. He has 12 career interceptions, the second-most in C-USA history. So does Burnett consider himself more of a returner or cornerback?

"It was a tough gamble, but I definitely remember the day that the Knights and Golden Hurricane will battle for the C-USA Championship on Dec. 6 for the third time in four seasons."

If the Conference USA coaches poll holds true, the Knights and Golden Hurricane will meet for the second time in a year in the conference championship game. The Knights won last year's meeting, 36-28, in the conference title game.

Two Knights were selected as members of the preseason All-CUSA Team. Senior quarterback Nick Novak was a unanimous pick to the East Division. Novak is one of only five players in the nation's top 10 in scoring. Former UCF punter David Brown was also named to the conference's first team.

Senior punt returner Joe Burnett was the preseason pick for C-USA Special Teams Player of the Year in 2008. The game the coaches picked him for had a lot of big plays, but Burnett decided to return for a third season with the Knights.

George O'Leary said Thursday that the biggest voids to fill for Tulsa will be the loss of its own record-setting player, Former North Carolina State at Tallahassee during the 2008 season, reaching the NCAA Tournament.

Auer joins former teammate Mitch Fouch, another Robert Lurie and Bailey signed minor league deals earlier this summer. This week, Cashman said that he didn't want to hire a person who was a top assistant coach and would work hard, but also help the program to grow.

The Knights' fourth season in Conference USA will be a learning experience. Auer said in a press release that the team is preparing for the interviews, but also helping to develop the program.

The Knights went 12-9 in the 2008 season, reaching the semis of the Conference USA Championship on April 19. Cashman and Zieziula will try to help the Knights further improve in C-USA when the Knights' 2009 season begins in January.

Technology presents new artist possibilities

This is the Digital Age. Undoubtedly, we live in an age where information and entertainment are the foundation of our existence. With the advancement in technology, the way we interact with music has changed significantly. Artists now have the ability to reach mass audiences at nearly zero cost. It has been said that the cost of the digital age is very low. It is much easier and cheaper to produce music, and the ability to distribute it has never been greater.

With technology becoming more accessible, more people are willing to give their music away for free. It is a matter of convenience for them to post it online. These days, many artists are posting their music online for free, as it is a way to gain exposure and reach a wider audience.

According to the Student Newspaper at UCSC, there are some professors who believe that it could be the future of music. They see it as a way to expose new talent and give them a platform to showcase their music. However, there are those who believe that it is unconstitutional to banrecordings without the copyright holder’s permission. It is a complex issue, and it is up to the courts to decide on the matter.

There is a time and a place for everything, and in the music industry, it is no different. It is important to strike a balance between the rights of the copyright holder and the right of the artist to make their music available to the public. It is a delicate balance, and it will take time to find the right solution.

Gl Bill deserves undisputed attention

On June 30, President Barack Obama signed a new GI Bill into law, which will benefit all veterans by expanding access to education and training. The GI Bill benefits are available to all veterans, regardless of whether they served in the military or not. The GI Bill provides education benefits for eligible veterans, including tuition assistance, stipends, and housing allowances.

The GI Bill is designed to help veterans continue their education and develop new skills that will enable them to succeed in civilian life. The GI Bill is available to veterans who served on active duty and are eligible for unemployment compensation.
