On Wednesday at the McDonald's restaurant event at Alpha Tau and University Boulevard, UCF students joined more than 3,000 people across the globe to simultaneously play the board game Monopoly.

The event, which lasted from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., was an attempt to break the world record of the most amount of people to simultaneously play the popular property-trading board game. The event was organized by Hunter Public Relations, a public relations firm for Har.

A t the UCF Memory Mall on Tuesday, bystanders gathered to watch a sport in which players pummelled each other with dodgeballs, while other players ran up and down a field with a broom and a torch. The game is played with a fictional sport from the Harry Potter books that has been an unofficial team in the Southeast Conference.

Ferrara said, "It's an easy game to learn and it's a lot of fun," Ferrara said, "It's a sport that's been played for over 100 years in the U.S. and it's a lot of fun."

Like in the books, brooms can be reached at quidditchKNIGHTS.com, or the UCF Memory Mall. Organizers can be reached at quidditchKNIGHTS.com, or the UCF Memory Mall.

"It's like dodgeball, mixed with soccer, with a little bit of Quidditch," said student Garrett Forrest. "And they play it using a fictional sport from the Harry Potter books."

Forrest said, "It has been a popular sport for over 100 years in the U.S. and it's a lot of fun."

The UCF Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Union (GLBSU) kicked off its fall semester Monday with its first meeting of the year.

Students poured into their own gymnasium to hang their banners and read friendly greetings welcoming "Out Loud, Out Proud, Out Spoken Since 1976." The first meeting tended to be more structured and focused on organizing and planning upcoming events.

The GLBSU is a leading student organization on campus, with gay, lesbian and bisexual couples as well as impact for those in the GLBT community. They offer workshops on gay, lesbian and bisexual issues and needs. They work with Student Employment and Career Services to help bring awareness to students.

"It's good information to know," said Dr. Darcel Stevens and Danielle Hunter as masters of ceremonies.

They plan to take a moment in the beginning to spread "a message of solidarity" according to Stevens. The theme is DownTown, DownDown, and the event will be held on September 22. Raffles for prizes will be held during the festivities.

"DownTown" is a union of students. This year the GLBSU hopes to move to a larger venue.

"We're trying to get the new arena, but they charge too much," Osborn said.

GLBSU has been sending out e-mail and text messages for contributions to help cover the cost of leasing the arena space.

Other events by the GLBSU include their Gay & Lesbian Student Union's Florida Collegiate Pride Conference, called "Providing the Rainbow Flag for Student Rights" and the campus ALLIES program.

"SAFE is headed by GLBSU member Aaron Valentine and is a branch of GLBSU that hopes to become its own recognition within the UCF community." SAFE is considered the central activist wing of GLBSU. It holds meetings before GLBSU functions, but members are working out their own full semester schedule.

SAFE works with the Full RPM for All Families Coalition and the University Marriage Protection Act. The amendment will affect gay and lesbian as well as any individual's safety and rights.

They also work on any gay, lesbian, bisexual, and gender issues on campus, including the university's need to have gender-neutral bathrooms opened on campus for transgender students and to have gender identity and expression covered under UCF's discrimination policy.

ALLIES is a program created by the UCF Counseling Center for family, students, and staff to show support to GLBT communities.

They work on gay rights issues such as hand on opposition, homophobia and other obstacles facing the community. People who attend their advance workshop receive an ally plaque that verifies they are willing to help those in the GLBT community.

"Gay people go through the training too," Osborn said.

"It's all recycled or reused. I think they paid for the pasta," Griffith said.

Al Assets Inc., the parent company of Refresh Electronics, was founded in January 2007. Before opening the first Refresh store in Longwood in March of this year, Al did business primarily online. With this second store opening within six months of the first, the company's goal of opening five stores in five years is well underway.

Organizations do business with Al Assets Inc. to ensure that what they no longer use is responsibly recycled. Some products are also put on consignment through Al Assets Inc.

"Clients get a percent when we sell, so that's their advantage to recycling with us," Griffith said.

Many electronic devices contain hazardous materials that require special disposal. In some cases, organizations have to pay in order to properly recycle things, such as electronics, which can be hard to do.

"On average, 80 percent of a laptop is repairable," Griffith said.

"We're probably the only business that doesn't use the garbage can," store manager Neil Backman said.

The store's grand opening took place on August 24. The new store across from campus is the second of its kind. The first Refresh opened in Longwood earlier this year.

The merchandise changes every few weeks as more products are recycled. Four warehouses in Longwood stock goods for the two stores.

The merchandise at Refresh consists of electronics, office supplies and other items recycled from businesses statewide. The store stock ranges from regular computer equipment like cables, keyboards and mice to less common merchandise.

"We're probably the only business that doesn't use the garbage can," store manager Neil Backman said.

"It's really hard to be found in the area," Osborn said. "We wanted to bring FAB to the area and help clients.

"The first meeting was mostly organizing," McDaniels said. "We're probably the only student organization that creates by the UCF Counseling Center together," McDaniels said.

All participants received a free T-shirt announcing that the winner participated in the world's largest simultaneous game of Monopoly.

“It’s pretty cool,” participant Jose Rieziera said. “It hasn’t hit me yet because I haven’t seen it, but sooner or later it’s going to hit me and I’ll be like ‘Wow, I was a part of that world record.’”

Participants from Lambda Theta Alpha were a part of the Hunter Public Relations announcing the number of participants. An estimated 1,361 people played Monopoly for the here and now edition.

The College Republicans of UCF rallied together under their tent in front of the Student Union to show their support for Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., and to raise awareness about the upcoming election. The National Republican Convention is being held in St. Paul, Minn.

This summer, more than 200 of the club's members were busy making signs and creating awareness for the Republicans. They were also "picking a side," according to Harold Hedrick, the College Republicans' executive director of the College Republicans, which is a nationwide political organization. Knights for McCain is associated with the College Republicans and is working specifically to get young people to the polls to vote.

Harold Hedrick, executive director of the College Republican, and a junior business administration major, said "I tend to believe that the biggest discrepancy between the two candidates is creative freedom, encouraging the innovation and entrepreneurial spirit that will foster job creation and economic prosperity."

"McCain has an American-centered way of thinking," York said. "I tend to believe that we are the most prosperous country in the world. Obama sees the U.S. as a country in the world." Hedrick is a music major, said "I tend to believe that McCain is the best choice for president."

"McCain has an America-centered way of thinking," York said. "I believe Obama's views are too liberal. I think that's why the differences between the two candidates is creative freedom, encouraging the innovation and entrepreneurial spirit that will foster job creation and economic prosperity."

"McCain is a giant family," Hedrick said. "McCain will be the victor in November. Obama and McCain have been either tied or within one point of each other in the Gallup polls since April," he said.

"Candidates usually get a convention bump after choosing a running mate," York said. "We're excited to attend the organization convention viewing party Sept. 4, when McCain is expected to accept his party's nomination. Hedrick is confident McCain is the best choice for president."

"Biden's experience cannot be transferred to Obama like a cash payment," York said. "He does not have enough experience, one of his widely noted faults."

"McCain is an America-centered way of thinking," York said. "I tend to believe that we are the most prosperous country in the world. Obama sees the U.S. as a country in the world."

Cook impeached, might lose position

Cook said he was insulted and demanded an apology. Swallows said in his statement that he was following policy to make sure that the Eucharist was not going to be used for "devil worship." Cook did leave the Mass, but he took the wafer with him and placed it in a plastic bag.

Cook told Channel 9 that when he was grabbed while at the Mass, he demanded an apology. Swallows said in his statement that he was following policy to make sure that the Eucharist was not going to be used for "devil worship." Cook did leave the Mass, but he took the wafer with him and placed it in a plastic bag.

Cook said that he was keeping the wafer until he received an apology for being grabbed while at the Mass. He also said that it was inappropriate for SGA to fund religious organizations. The story gained national attention.

On July 6, one week after the incident, Cook returned the wafer to a priest before a Mass. Cook said that he received angry and threatening letters during the time he was holding the wafer. Despite the Eucharist being back in the hands of those that blessed it, the situation was far from over.

Cook filed charges against Catholic Campus Ministries with the Office of Student Conduct, saying that grabbing him and attempting to force him to eat something violated the written rules on hazing. The hazing charges filed against Catholic Campus Ministries were dropped on July 16, the same day that Cook's problems began.

D The vote for impeachment took place on July 20 at the weekly SGA Senate meeting. After a discussion on the implications that religion played in the matter, the Senate voted 33-2-0 to impeach Cook.

D Being impeached did not mean Cook had to leave office, but it did signal the beginning of an investigation process that would bring in witnesses and ultimately lead to a vote on whether or not Cook should be removed from his seat.

D The results from the vote were not available at press time, but are up on the Website. Pick up a copy of the Future on Wednesday for detailed information about Cook's trial.
Knights prep for South Carolina State with uncertainty surrounding offense

BRIAN MURPHY
Nov 10

This offseason must have felt different for the UCF Football team and its fans. The Knights have always been the ones to something to press, unfinished business to work towards of having to live with the question "What if?" for eight months.

Instead, UCF enters 2006 as the team that fulfilled its championship goal and a team that has to find an answer to a different question: "What now?"

I think it’s hard to get to the championship. I think it's harder to stay there," head coach George O’Leary said during an Aug. 9 press conference.

But you don’t want to be a rollercoaster-type team. Once you get there, you want to have the ability to stay there. That’s basically what our goal is as well — championships.

UCF’s first day of practice on Wednesday against South Carolina State tomorrow at 6 p.m. Even though the Bulldogs are members of the Football Championship Subdivision — formerly I-AA — they don’t present an automatic powerhouse for the Knights. They possess a very solid running game and what could be an优秀 regarding UCF's overall success this season. Here are a few things to watch:

GAME BREAKDOWN

against South Carolina State tomorrow at 6 p.m. Even though the Bulldogs are members of the Football Championship Subdivision — formerly I-AA — they don’t present an automatic powerhouse for the Knights. They possess a very solid running game and what could be an opportunity regarding UCF's overall success this season. Here are a few things to watch:

WHAT HAVE WE GOT HERE?

The Knights need to make sure that they are strengthened out before they worry about the Bulldogs. O'Leary said that his biggest concern heading into this game is the line. The Knights have a lot of people back but the same questions that are unanswered.

The running game is only as successful as the line blocking in front of it, and a late change could make this worse as well. The game is going to be a defensive war.

The passing game usually is the last part of a team to get going because of the lack of time in training. If that is the case, the Knights need to have their receivers in their hands as well. They are going to need the ability to turn around.

The defense may also be hurt by the absence of linebacker Cory Lang and the Knights will have a new kicker this year, Darren Dail. All of these issues will be under a microscope — more than others against the Bulldogs.

BULLDOGS BRING A FORD

When it comes time to prepare for South Carolina State, the attention shifts to junior running back Will Floyd. He ran for 1,389 yards and finished in 10th among FCS running backs with an average of 5.25 rushing yards per game.

Floyd was named the preseason Southern Conference Offensive Player of the Year. He scored only four touchdowns and caught one pass last season, but he has made them count for 549 yards and four touchdowns.

"We'll have to get the ball out in the open field," senior linebacker Joe Haynes, who South Carolina State is in.

"[The players] want to hit somebody else. They want to line up and play."

Shaky QB damages S.C. State's chances of pulling huge upset

South Carolina State lost Appalachian State. The Mountaineers won the comfort of playing in front of a healthy home crowd, but that wasn't the only reason they beat the Bulldogs. The Mountaineers were able to capitalize on South Carolina State's mistakes. The game was close, but the Mountaineers made the most of their opportunities. They scored three touchdowns and never trailed in the game. The Bulldogs, on the other hand, struggled to put points on the board. They had several opportunities to score, but were unable to capitalize. Overall, it was a disappointing performance for the Bulldogs. They will need to regroup and improve their performance if they want to have a chance at winning in the future.
Volleyball opens year with Ga. tournament

The message is simple for the 2008 UCF Volleyball team. "The future is here," is the mantra this team has been hearing, and that journey begins tonight.

UCF, which recorded a 9-21 record last season, will begin its new campaign on the road at the Georgia Southern Invitational in Statesboro, Ga. The Knights first match will come against Jacksonville tonight at 5 p.m.

UCF will then turn its attention to Georgia Southern at noon Saturday before facing Presbyterian at 5 p.m.

UCF will then turn its attention to Georgia Southern at noon Saturday before facing Presbyterian at 5 p.m.

The Knights will be using those games and the upcoming weeks as a measuring stick for this season, including Jenny Heppert, Stephanie Serna and Kristin Fisher.

"I think for us, if we can have something established by the second or third week of the season where we know what our rotations are, then that would be good," first-year head coach Todd Dagenais said.

"The series in Georgia kick off a swing of 10 of the next 13 matches on the road for the Knights.

Once UCF has completed the invitational, the team will travel home to take on No. 2 ranked Stanford on Tuesday, and then spend the next 12 matches away from The Venue. Dagenais will look at this experience as an opportunity to help his team bond.

"Being on the road to start, that's an interesting thing," he said. "We can be in a small group because when you are on the road, it's just you. There are no distractions and there are not a lot of family friends and phone calls and things like that. It's really you and your team."

Fans waited outside of BackBooth in downtown Orlando in the cold wind and rain to see bands such as Blood On The Dance Floor, Lunatic Candy Kreep, Iration, and Wednesday 13.

All of these bands had their own image and separate genres of music. While Blood On The Dance Floor had an upbeat, dance party theme going on, the other three bands kept it on the dark side.

“While it mentions blood and dance floors; fan Rachel Nelson said “Dance floors imply disco and blood implies a type of grittier lyric and sound. Together they make the electro fusion which is Blood On The Dance Floor.”

Pleather, platform knee-high boots, and black was to be the theme of the night, despite Blood On The Dance Floor’s colorful performance.

“We definitely stand out, but we like that,” said Dahvie Vanity, the lead singer of Blood On The Dance Floor. "The thing is, music is about creativity and originality, and if we were all sheep, it’d be such a boring world. We’re like the black sheep, but that’s cool because we want to be different.”

Vanity, 23, didn’t let the mismatched set list deter him from having fun. Their name, music and fashion sense were on the opposite side of the spectrum from the other bands.

Along with a band’s name, stage presence is everything. All of the bands that played had their own sense of presence.

“Tropical Storm Fay could not stop local music fans from going to The Social last Thursday. Fans of Orlando bands trickled into the downtown club, dripping with rain from the storm outside. A sign on the door read ‘We are still open.” The rain did not stop eager fans from attending a $7 show. The Kidney Stones opened, even though their guitar player had emergency surgery and couldn’t be there. They chanted ‘ruioy”

The Little Debbies have been a part of the Orlando music scene in different bands for the past 10 years.

Knekl bolted out A-G-Go-Go’s punk lyrics of biting wit, nihilism and social mocking in a ballad somehow similar to Knekl’s work in While We’re Young. A Go-Go’s squidly demon with special directions to you to call.

“A Go-Go cover it’s all about the ultimate sing along and making a type of go-getting sense, which is a very very punk thing to do,” guitarist Rob Tyson said.

Can't stop the punk rock

LIFE'S a bouncy punk beat, punk rock band, played loud and proud despite the lack of an audience. And yet, James "MC Chris" Ward said, "I'm about cutting out on some writing so I'm going to have some space on self. It's going to be about the United States of America."

It's really weird," Iero said. "We don't really throw up songs and re-mastered CDs of the same songs."

"We just walked around outside. Nothing's going on, it's dead," Iero said. "We're ex-luchadores from Lucha Libre with the black text on their shirts."

BackBooth's broad mix of motley music

Brandon Shaw said, "Especially for the smaller bands in Orlando, the audience is looking for something to catch their attentions and remember the band. If a band has great live presence, they have a better chance sticking out than a band that doesn't."

The lead singer, alias Spanky Love, came out with a band that doesn't exemplify the center of motley music. "Well, stage presence can sometimes be as important, if not more important, than the actual music being played." "Especial­ly if a band has great live presence, they have a better chance sticking out through the audience," said Josh Becker. "Now when the lead singer talks, you guys make some noise." "The drummer used the audience to start moshing when he hit his cowbell to which six audience members jumped in the middle of the audience and started surfing." "The drummer used the audience to start moshing when he hit his cowbell to which six audience members jumped in the middle of the audience and started surfing."

They chose the name The Little Debbie because it is cute and catchy at the same time. "We are all different abilities — I mean we all look (like we just stepped out of a band)," Becker added. "We are all different abilities — I mean we all look (like we just stepped out of a band)."
