COVER

Construction of Fort Zachary Taylor began in Key West in 1845 and it was completed in 1866. The original plans were drawn by Colonel Joseph Totten. A violent hurricane in 1846 destroyed most of the fort's temporary work buildings and supplies, but construction was quickly resumed. Craftsmen for the brick work were imported from Germany and Ireland. Laborers were local slaves whose owners were paid $1.00 a day for their services.

This is a view of the fort as drawn by a member of the garrison. It appeared in Harpers Weekly, March 2, 1861. Between 1898 and 1905, deciding that the fortress would be less vulnerable if not so tall, the structure was deliberately torn down to one story. Fort Taylor has now been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.
