COVER

Lincoln Road was planned by Carl Fisher, one of the major developers of Miami Beach, to be the Fifth Avenue of the South, an avenue of luxury shops catering to the needs and desires of the wealthy. It was named for Abraham Lincoln, Mr. Fisher's great American history hero. At the foot of Lincoln Road facing the ocean stood "The Shadows," the Fisher's palatial home, and the beachfront mansion of John Hanan, the Boston shoe manufacturer.

This view of Lincoln Road, taken some time during the 1930s, is from a postcard in the collection of William M. Goza, Madison, Florida.
