COVER

Florida's east coast beaches had become famous by the beginning of the twentieth century for swimming and sunning. Daytona Beach was a favorite resort for wealthy northerners, particularly after Henry Flagler purchased a large hotel at nearby Ormond.

Because of the hard-packed sand the beach was also used for automobile races, and the first world's record was broken on the beach in 1903. This scene of Daytona Beach in 1904 is from a photograph in Pictorial History of Florida by Richard J. Bowe.
