COVER

"The Great Alachua Savana in East Florida," by William Bartram (1739-1823). A son of John Bartram, botanist of Philadelphia, William Bartram left home in March 1773 on an epic trip which took him to the coastlands of Carolina and Georgia, then south and west across the Florida peninsula, back through lower Georgia, and in 1776 into Cherokee Indian territory. The record of his writings and sketches is preserved in Travels Through North and South Carolina, Georgia, East and West Florida (Philadelphia, 1791; London, 1792; numerous facsimiles).

The original of this sketch is in the Violetta W. Delafield Collection of the papers of Benjamin Smith Barton, American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia.
