COVER

By early 1862 the coastline of Florida was virtually undefended. Simultaneously, Federal forces were moving toward the port city of Fernandina. By mid-March the Florida coastline from St. Augustine north was under northern control. The cover picture is from a sketch by the periodical's artist, "Mr. W.-. Crane," which appeared in Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, August 16, 1862. It bears the caption: "National Troops Marching Through Second Street in New Fernandina, Florida."
