

Transcript

Christina Torres:

Hi there, and welcome to our short wrap up episode for the Fall 2022 Season of Futures in Languages, a podcast showcasing stories from UCF's Modern Languages and Literatures Department alumni. I'm your host, Christina Torres, and on behalf of the Modern Languages Alumni Engagement Committee, I'd like to say thank you for listening to the Alumni Stories in the Fall 2022 season. I hope you'll join me for more alumni stories in our spring 2023 season. Sound recording and editing for this podcast is brought to you by yours truly. This season I'll add a special thank you to Anne Prucha for her assistance with Alumni Recruitment. As usual, I'd like to give the shout out to Da Video Guy for our intro and outro music, folk guitar music track, downloaded from freesound.org. Finally, I'd like to give our biggest thank you to our alumni guests for joining me on Zoom to share their stories.

Isabella Castro, Abby Reynolds for Virginia Perwin, Anne Prucha, Karen Ochoa, Courtney Jorgenson, and Taylor Matthew Ashley, thanks for being part of our third season. Tune in again in January, 2023 to hear more alumni stories from the Modern Languages department. If you have a question about language learning or opportunities that can come from language learning, please send us a message at modernlanguages@ucf.edu with the subject title Questions For Alumni. Who knows, you might hear your question answered by a guest in a Future podcast. Here's wishing all of our listeners a safe and happy winter holiday season. For more information about all our language programs in the Modern Languages Department, please visit our website at cah.ucf.edu/languages.