WENDI (When Entering New Directions) in Cocoa's Brevard Community College was being able to find a nice niche for me to become involved in. A course from the seaside to the mountains, here and there, was the philosophy, of course, but the steady supply of celebrities certainly didn't hinder matters. Owner Lee Rose's restaurant opened in late May and we will all have plenty of opportunity to see it before it comes down at the beginning of August.

Orlando's Historic Restaurants

The most modern was Lee's Lakeside, founded in 1980 and lasting until just last year. Its extraordinary location on Lake Eola helped to make it a premiere restaurant, setting the stage for several similar restaurants that followed. The most popular was Foster's Bromeliad, founded in 1938 and lasting until 1982. Foster's was known for its exotic plant life. While Foster's bromeliads can still be appreciated throughout the area as well as in the UCF Libraries' Philosophy Collection, the restaurant itself is gone. Foster's was the first of its kind. The building in which the restaurant resided, at the corner of Magnolia and Bumby, became home to the University of Central Florida. Not long ago, the UCF Libraries lost a friend when John Stilwell passed away. Most of us who knew Mr. Stilwell met him in conjunction with the Lois Holt Foundation, but he was a friend to us all. He was the President of the UCF Historian's Kiwanis Club, and best of all, acted as the President of the Friends of the Library.

As Stilwell's widow, she left us with a legacy of enduring and energetic kindness; he was as much a champion for the American Cancer Society, Chairman of the Orange County Health Planning Council (a particularly difficult and prestigious license), beginning a second career in the insurance industry.

The Hotel Fort Falls, established in 1872 and closed permanently in 1895. The Bumby House was established in 1893 and 1905 respectively.
