Don't let this happen to you! FTU commuter students are forced to travel some of the worst roads in the county. Until something is done about conditions, TAKE IT EASY. Hall Road and Alafaya Trail turn to glass in the rain. Slow down! If not for your sake, for everyone else's. Get to class late one day if necessary, but get there!

FTU Student Dies In Wreck

Early morning drivers making it down Hall Road toward FTU last Tuesday probably didn't notice the bits of glass and metal scattered across the road at the point where it makes one of many hairpin turns. They were probably too intent in getting to class on time to notice.

The afternoon before, an 18-year-old FTU freshman, Karl Clayton Van Meter, 2203 E. Concord, Orlando, was heading north on the bending road. Hall Road was slippery from the rain. It is treacherous at best. Witnesses said that Karl Van Meter was traveling fast in his small car when he failed to negotiate the turn and was struck by a truck coming from the opposite direction.

The youth was killed instantly. News of the tragedy swept the campus. Representatives from the administration met with the parents of the boy in the evening.

Karl was the son of Lt. and Mrs. C. H. Van Meter. Lt. Van Meter is head of the Orlando Police Dept.'s Vice Control Unit. He is vitally concerned with the youth of the community and their problems.

He was scheduled to speak to a sociology class at FTU later this month.

Young Van Meter was the first student fatality since FTU opened.
The Student Government of FTU has been allotted $30,000.00 for its operating budget for the '69-'70 year. In its operating expenditure budget, it allocates specific uses for over $17,000.00 of that money. Among other things, the salaries of the President and Vice President have been raised to allow them to hold their positions and not to have to work other jobs to knock enough money into their accounts. (Partial salaries listed as "Executive Operating Expenses" amount to $2,566.00. Also, funds have been set aside to pay two extra secretaries to do the work which is more than the two elected secretaries can handle. This figure is over $2,000.00.

These are just points as $0,000.00 for travel expenses. (That's a lot of traveling!) And, since the Three Dog Night Concert tickets were not bought early, the bank had been original plans. The planned is the Christmas Parade Float, at a cost of $500.00. At last the correct tickets were finally arrived, and arrived, and given in order to give FTU a radio station. The original request was for over $500.00 to be spent on radio, and the Christmas Parade Float sports activities live into the dorms. The only other organization to be received this year is in Miami, which requested $2,150.00 and received $2,050.00.

The budget, as approved, is being reprinted below (in a smaller typeface) for the "Executive Operating Expenses.

The salaries do not present that SFU has a problem since it has over $30,000.00 and only around $2,000.00 worth of good money in its reservoir for student scholarships. In fact, it would suggest that the only project of the greatest amount of financial support. If this is the case, it seems that SFU has too much money and not enough ideas.

The salaries are not unreasonable. If the "Executive" can and will move more to SFU and to T-T will happen. In this time, in Miami, which requested $2,150.00 and received $2,050.00.

Budgele except for the following.

The new senate is now official. Maybe some new blood can get through the (a) how to use the facilities for the benefit of the students at a whole. $30,000.00 is a lot of money with which a lot of good can be done. Let's see some of it...

No UFOs: Clarke

Comments of Arthur C. Clarke during the question-answer period, an interview with the FutUre, and the reception which followed his talk:

"I started writing (science fiction) while I was in school. I just liked science and science fiction and when I discovered the magazines in the 30's, I decided to write the stuff."

"I've met a few (astronauts and cosmonauts) and I am very friendly with some of them, like Leonov. I sent him a 'Wish you were here' card at the Apollo 11 launch. I gave him a copy of my zero gravity instructions from 1961."

"I hope we will miss a 'Braun new world.'"

"I don't know any science fiction writer who believes in them (UFOS) because they're intelligent people. They're trained in the subject, they know that UFOs are science fiction. "Science fiction is partly responsible for people's belief in UFOs and because they want to believe. It's become a religion, that's why you can never dispose of it in the minds of people who believe in it."

"The basic cost of sending a man to the moon is $10.60."

"Anything one can imagine, anything which is possible, will probably be done within a couple hundred years if, it can be done at all."

"The moment the astronaut walked on the moon was 'the greatest moment of my life. It's a moment beyond emotion in a sense, sort of frozen in time."

Mr. Clarke has held a piece of moon rock. "It's very exciting."

When asked what he thought about the possibility of maintaining humans like they did in "Fantastic Voyage", he replied: "Fantastic!"

"What would happen if the government cat space expenditures? Mr. Clarke said: 'We simply have to learn Russian, that's all.' He didn't think social and psychological behavior could be predicted in advance. "There are too many random variables. Who can predict the life of Harvey Oswald?"

A single individual, a single act can totally change the pattern of society."

And from Mr. Clarke's speech, "If we lose it (the space mission), catastrophe, the world of 2001 will be much like ours with its problems and evils and vices enlarged, perhaps beyond endurance. But if we win, we may well mark the great divide between barbarism and civilization."

CYNTHIA GALBREATH, an employee in the registrar's office, is modeling the latest thing in FTU computer wear. It's sort of a see-through outfit, not much form, but a crazy label.

TECH TALK

After being bothered for 30 minutes by the theme from "2001: A Space Odyssey", the audience expected to be greeted by the moon itself. To add insult to injury, Mr. Clarke even refused to discuss the movie. That's really what everyone came for anyway.

Walt Komanski, Student Government president, stole the early moments of Mr. Clarke's show last Wednesday as he marched down the aisle and onto the stage carrying a 30" x 30" red and yellow pillow for a seat.

Dateline: Orlando 2001

By Dee D. Decker

Dr. J. Do arose at seven, dressed, hopped on the conveyor belt, arrived at the kitchen, and selected breakfast from the automat. Water poured into the dried egg, into the ham, into the instant coffee, into the powdered cereal, and within 10 minutes, the reconstituted breakfast emerged fully cooked.

After breakfast, a tradition intelligence console, tuned in morphing, scanned the articles he wanted, then proceeded to glance over the headlines of the New York Time (London Times, Sidney Morning Herald, Pravda, and the Inquirer).

At ten Dr. Jonas buzzed him from South Africa. It was time for the operation. Using remote controlled bands, Dr. Do successfully transplanted two hearts and a cerebellum, the waves traveling to the thousands of miles to a communications satellite and back down to the human brain.

He then settled down to watch worldwide TV. Hippos were being rounded up in Africa and answered was watching galaxies in the Atlantic for the huge food market awaiting them. The latest methods of obtaining food from coal, oil, limes, and by microbial organisms were also being shown.

The news said that Orlando was populated by its inhabitants moving into rural areas. A project to fly to the moon for a week in July was planned by the area chapter of the National Space Society.

Turning to E.T.V.V., he watched a seventh grade science exhibit showing analytic geometry and a huge computer instructing a ninth grade class of 250 students in aerodynamic and nuclear physics.

The big news of the day was the landing of the first commercial spaceship on the moon. The ship, the "Discovery," landed at a base at base seven and unloaded its crew of 16 and the 176 passengers. Among the passengers were science fiction authors Ray Bradbury, Frank Edwards, and Arthur C. Clarke, who in the 1960's wrote "2001: A Space Odyssey."

The doctor switched the console off, selected dinner, strapped as the sign read, "Sorry, filet mignon out of 15", and had to settle for hippo steak and creamed algae against the huge foods for those who wanted to live off 20. Later, he rode to bed and slowly read himself to睡觉, with Ed, Andrews, best selling novel, "2222: An Universal Epic."

What Will Replace The FTU Citronaut?

Meet Vincent The Vulture

Student Government made a firm decision Tuesday evening on the FTU mascot. It would participate on a committee which would get suggestions for a mascot and recommend the names to an advisory group which would cut the number of suggestions down and submit the final names to the student body for a vote.

That's what SG firmly decided. And still the Citronaut remains.

How about the camel for a mascot? The definition of a camel is a horse that was designed by a committee.

At this point, the FuTUre decided to give the university some direction, a purpose, a reason to hope, by announcing the suggested mascot to the student body, faculty and the administration.

The FuTUre, in a sincere effort to give the university some direction, has decided to step in and announce that it has a suggested mascot to place before the students, faculty and the administration.

The FuTUre, working without the aid of a committee, wracked its small, collective brain to find a mascot that would capture the imagination of the student body, create state and national interest with its uniqueness, and be a rallying cry for all sports teams.

"Reach for the Stars," That is our creed. So, the mascot should be something that comes close to the stars.

A powerful, high-flying bird. FTU is a virtuous school. The bird must not be one that preys on smaller defenseless creatures of the sky. The FTU mascot should be brave, but not a killer. It should be a clean bird.

It should also have the colors representative of the university, predominantly black with a touch of gold.

It should be an unusual bird, because FTU stresses the individual.

Many schools have eagles, hawks, falcons and the like as mascots. Taking the criteria, the FuTUre considered running it through the computer. No use. The machine kept cranking out a Citronaut with wings.

Then a non-student (the shame of it all) came forward with an answer. She was a regular Florence Nightingale.

Nurse Judy Hines, the night nurse at the health center, brought in a suggested mascot. Her ideas were illustrated by her husband, Gene. She showed it to SG. There were some polite smiles, and few snickers. Discouraged, she asked the FuTUre for its opinion.

We now present it to the FTU family, asking the entire family to give serious and reflective consideration to it.

That's right, a vulture.

Don't laugh. Don't hiss. Think about it.

The vulture is one of the most maligned yet noble birds in the world. He is usually featured in grade "B" movies as part of a circling bunch of nasties, ready to pounce on what is left of a poor prospector crawling across the desert.

But the vulture doesn't kill as a hawk kills, mercilessly. He keeps the land clean. He is one of nature's pollution fighters.

He is one of the largest and strongest birds aloft with a wing span of seven to 10 feet.

As a mascot, Vincent would strike fear in the hearts of the opposing team. Can you imagine the demoralizing effect on an enemy basketball team that stared across the court at the dead tree limb on which Vincent was perched, staring back at them? Nothing can stare like a vulture.

Or, when the university gets a football team, there would be a vulture, trained to circle high over the opposing team in its huddle. It would be as good as another touchdown for the FTU Vultures.

It may be the touch of the bizarre that gives Vincent his charm, but whatever it is, there's no doubt in the minds of those who know him that Vincent the Vulture has charisma.

So we ask you, why not Vincent? If FTUers have better suggestions, they have been keeping those suggestions well hidden.

My Confession
By Van Ormer

I am but a new student at FTU. Why

I decided to do something to morning I arose and donned my cap, caught one-a-pole, and my down that my deer dad had bought for me in 1909.

Fortifying myself with oyster and the seabird, I sailed forth into the arm, armed only with cigarettes, lighter, binoculars, and a hunting license card. Jumping

the bunk, a swell

Frenchman, I lit out to explore the tropical rain-forests of PTU, perchance to catch a glimpse the illusive swing-watching nuthatch.

the area of Lee, I found a trail house. I was there

I determined to make

As I disembarked from the bike, a dog, a huge black beast running couping and slipping at the mouth. I spied out like a shark, my head clearly shown. By my way. I noticed a visibly white "poised" sign. Since I didn't want to get busted for trespassing, I decided to keep all my... surveillance. From property. I struck the bike at the road and set out on foot through the woods. The brush was thick, the bugs were ravenous, but, undaunted, I

Then I

discovered that I was wading up to my knees. My mother was to be furious about those shoes.

I knew though that at all costs I had to keep those binoculars and cigarettes dry.

Then came the lake and there I discoverd a little fishing pole.

I inquired as to the inhabitants of yonder house and the response was, "a mean old lady with a .22 who shoots to kill." I then took great care, not wishing to have the old lady draw a bead on me. At several different positions I found it convenient to employ the binoculars, supposing my position to be out of range of the .22.

I determined that there was indeed an old lady in residence—she had her drawers strung out on the line.

My curiosity was at this point overcome by hunger pangs, so I quitted the scene.

Jack O'Rourke, Director of Placement Services, was recently appointed chairman of the Student Eligibility Committee, by B. Gwen

Sarchet, Dean of Women. Mrs. Pat

Fawsett and Mr. Henry Hill will serve as committee members. This is the committee to which students make an appeal if they want to hold a position of leadership and do not qualify according to the rules of eligibility.

The committee is designed to take care of cases that would be treated unfairly with the existing rules. An example would be a student that was on academic probation because he came from an unaccredited high school. It is possible that his grades and test scores would be high.

However, if the student does not hold a 2.0 average because he has been working long hours, etc., this does not usually receive favorable recommendations from the committee.

All students wishing to make an appeal to this committee should now direct their letters to O'Rourke.

a word about not wearing

In the meantime, however, be denied, the penalties for marijuana use should be made consistent with its known dangers—lack of value to the individual and society.

The psychological damage done by marijuana to the individual is immeasurable; the damage inflicted by the punishment meted out for using it, Dr. Yolts asserted. Another psychiatrist, testifying on still another drug bill before the House Judiciary Committee, said marijuana use was as bad as heroin.

"There are those who say that at least some criminal penalties should be made against marijuana use based on the grounds that the drug leads, for example, to psychological dependence or sufferance. I share their concern, but it should be remembered that psychological dependence and unproductiveness are conditions not in themselves subject to criminal sanctions. I think it is dangerous to use the criminal law indirectly to control behavior which is not otherwise illegal."

What Dr. Yolts, Brozman, and most others of the medical and psychological professions are asking for is to clear away the legislative ballyhoo so that the real dangers of marijuana—and any other drug—can be looked at for what they are, and appropriate action taken to regulate them.

If there are real dangers, these people are saying, if someone will stop the hysterical screaming long enough to tell people what they are, even young people will—what is essentially young people—will do what is best and best for their own lives with that information, as they did with Pain.

Lake Clair Project
Financially Dammed

By Dee D. Decker
The Lake Clair project, a joint student, physical plant entrepreneur, is already gaining momentum this year after becoming bogged down last spring and summer. The project originated by the students was to establish a student government. So far, student government has to be made possible. Although there is no new funds for the project, $20,000 went back into the general fund at the end of the school year, and new SFU funding has not been removed from the project.

"The reasons are low costs around the lake and in the Union. This is not to say that Lake Clair and the student government are not working," Engler said.

Another hold up was the lack of landscape architecture to supervise the project. A new architect, Mr. Jim Schreuder, is now a member of the Student Government. He was to have a meeting with students, faculty and the administration until the fall. He was told, "But you can help them, too," Engler said.

"It is now in the hands of the students, faculty and the administration until the fall. It is now in the hands of the students, faculty and the administration."

Several weeks ago, the SFU reported that the university's contracted lawn service was not meeting with wide approval.

Linen delivered by Pan American Linen Service was torn, stained and sometimes even covered with 30 days' worth of dirt. "Hard everywhere was the cleanliness-conscious student health service."

Engler said, "It was a little too much, but it is a little too much."

The problem is now in the hands of the students, faculty and the administration."

A new organization has been formed at FTU for black students, called the Black Student Union (BSU).

In an interview, Dan Slater, president of BSU, gave Union's goals as "providing an organization that black students can identify with," staked black pride and unity. It will also try to improve communications between students, faculty and the administration until the fall. BSU also hopes to sponsor and raise projects to help establish a scholarship for black students, and establish a policy of memorial activities for all known Americans.

Moreover, must be students at FTU, and officers should have a 2.0 average. According to Slater, 16 of the estimated 25 black students at FTU are members.

The current officers are Dan Slater, president; Roland Williams, student president; Chris. Wiggins, corresponding secretary; Walter. Farm, treasurer and Henry Davis, financial secretary. The next meeting is tentatively scheduled for October 31, in the Village Center.

Horn compared the organization with a fraternity or sorority. Two projects have been discussed for possible action by BSU: tutoring for black students, and an "open house" for black high school students who would like to look around FTU as a possible college choice.

Placement Center Registration, which is required if seniors want to be interviewed by representatives of business firms will be open to all students. Seniors may register on the 2nd floor, from 9.30 to 9.12 a.m. for students and from 1.4 to 2 p.m. Information sheets and registration forms can be picked up now in Room 101 in the Library. Don't forget, seniors, if you want to be on the interview list, your MUST register.

Lake Clair Project
Financially Dammed

By Dee D. Decker
The Lake Clair project, a joint student, physical plant entrepreneur, is already gaining momentum this year after becoming bogged down last spring and summer. The project originated by the students was to establish a student government. So far, student government has to be made possible. Although there is no new funds for the project, $20,000 went back into the general fund at the end of the school year, and new SFU funding has not been removed from the project.

"The reasons are low costs around the lake and in the Union. This is not to say that Lake Clair and the student government are not working," Engler said.

Another hold up was the lack of landscape architecture to supervise the project. A new architect, Mr. Jim Schreuder, is now a member of the Student Government. He was to have a meeting with students, faculty and the administration until the fall. He was told, "But you can help them, too," Engler said.

Chi Beta Alpha Business Fraternity defeated the Civitans, 9-0, in the kick-off of the Independent League of Intramural football. Long gains and possible scoring were halted numerous times due to penalties.

XBA’s first score came on an 8-yard pass play from Dan Hough. Hough again found Charlie Alderman alone in the end zone for the 9-0 lead. In the second half when due to penalties, Lonnie Lacy who came down with a great deal of blocking the Tau yard drive was a 35-yard pass to Brenneman to Richard Heard. Hough skirted his right end for the second tally. Later a penalty moved Tau to the Phi Alpha 2 yard line and from there, Randy Powell connected with Steve Richards for Tau’s lone TD.

In the final minutes, the two teams exchanged punts and penalties until Rudi Jessee proved himself the decisive factor of the game. PAE’s defensive, AE’s first score came early in the first quarter on a Jim Hough pass which John Roberts took. John Roberts took about midfield and went the distance for the first score. Minutes later a personal foul moved PAE to the Tau 10-yard line where Jim Hough skirted his right end for the second tally. Once again, the pass for extra point failed and Phi Alpha led 12-0.

PAE’s first score came early in the second half when defensive end Jim Block scored a safety on Civilian quarterback Dan Mahora for two points.

Student Praises Co-op

by DENNIS HUNTLEY

What is the Co-op program? This is a question that I myself was concerned with at one time. Now I know.

The Co-op program is an opportunity knocking. I have been involved in the Co-op program here at FTU from its beginning and have enjoyed every minute of it.

Through my first two years of college I was faced with the problem of choosing a major and a career and trying to live on a very small budget. Well, the Co-op program has been the solution to my problems and it very possibly can be for you. By alternating a “work quarter” with a “school quarter” you can work in a field closely related to your interest and obtain a great deal of experience.

I particularly chose mathematics as my major and through the Co-op program was placed in the computer lab at the Naval Training Device Center in Orlando. I worked with mathematicians, engineers, and programmers. This gave me the opportunity to see how math is used in these fields and through this I was able to choose an area more suitable to my interests.

Financially, the Co-op program is very beneficial. As well as many of my fellow Co-ops worked for a salary of more than $5,000 per year which boils down to over $1,000 per working quarter. There was certainly no problem paying tuition for this school quarter.

These benefits I have mentioned to you are considerable, but there are more opportunities and benefits to be considered. The Co-op program in this country is growing every minute. It has been around for several years and is well known all over the world. These people who hire you understand the program and they understand the idea that you are trying to help yourself by helping you with this in mind. And when you complete the Co-op program these people will be there to either set as references or in many instances offer you a position.

There is a lighter side to the Co-op program. There are a few people which make up a unique group and they realize it. Those were fifteen Co-ops from other universities working at the Naval Training Device Center this summer and through the social events that we set up throughout the summer. We went to a beach party and a cookout and even went horseback riding.

Through the Co-op program I have become more interested in my schooling and my future. It has given me this opportunity and I am grateful for it. Presently I'm back here on campus and next quarter I'll be back at the Naval Training Device Center. What I learn in this quarter can be put to use next quarter at work and what I experience I get then will be useful when I return to school. If a person has any initiative at all there is only one way to go and that is Co-op.

No VIP Streets, Committee Says

Streets and walkways at FTU will not be named after famous contemporary personalities in order to avoid any political problems in the future.

This decision was made at the second meeting of the University Streets Committee last Monday night.

The committee also discussed several ideas which had been presented to it but reached no concrete decisions. The general consensus of the meeting unofficially was that the students did not want any more names of stars or constellations, but there was a lot of other moves taken in this direction.

One innovative concept discussed was the possible naming of each pie-shaped sector of the university so the location of any building could be better understood. A newcomer was unfamiliar with the campus.

This was also suggested because the main roads on campus are complete circles, that is they have no beginning and no end but draw a circumference around the campus. One of these roads is expected to be several miles long. In this situation, to say that something was located on so many roads would give no exact position at all, but to say it was in a specific sector would facilitate locating.

Since the campus is not facing any direction and almost none of the buildings or roads will be facing anything to use geographical directions would be useless.

Any student who has any ideas about a system should contact Mr. Bernard L. Foy, Assistant Director for Readers Services.

Flu Vaccine is still being given in the Student Health Center. This one shot could keep many FTU students from suffering greatly this year, and the best part of all is that it's free.
Library book order requests have been snowballing into the FTU Technical Services Department at the breathtaking rate of 100 per day, according to Arthur L. Ketchersid, director. The deluge was generated in July when incoming faculty members began numbering the requisitions, 4,000 have rolled in. Incoming books have all stacked on the floor under the Main Library. Many book issues of periodicals have found a temporary home under the floor, but they are the ascension of new space which can be converted to library use. Therefore, in order to satisfy the demand for new books, library construction has been completed and occupied by university purposes. However, the exchange will be the signal for the change-over in such author-title combinations as Utterback. The multitude of volumes comprises the Library of Congress catalog which is located at the foot of a short flight of stairs leading from the main lobby, covers a large section of wall in the Technical Services Department. These index books provide classifications for books per cost of FTU library books. This catalog is so important a second set is located upstairs in the library. When an incoming book is not listed somewhere in these volumes, a librarian must use previous time analyzing the book. This existing task becomes an even greater challenge when the librarian is charged with proper classification of a work with a computer prepared microfiche service. It keeps up as current as the cards which the Library of Congress has printed, and it eliminates the need for typing worksheets which are input to the computer," Col. Lineham explained.

Reflecting on the monumental tasks accomplished during the one- and one-half years immediately preceding the start of 1966-69 classes, Ketchersid mused, "We could easily have used two additional years of personnel."

Nevertheless, about 50,000 volumes flowed into the library and onto the book shelves in time to serve the 1,500 students when the university doors opened in 1968.

FTU Monkey Business

By DARIO H. ANGEL

The Physical Education Department of the College of Education recently received a supply of twelve rhino monkeys. The animals are not alive, however. They were shipped to FTU dead and preserved for the purpose of allowing students of Physical Education to further understand the functioning of the human body.

They were shipped whole from New York, but as the course progresses, the students will have the opportunity to dissect and study this anatomical part individually. The dissection of these animals will also be helpful in illustrating the functions of the visceral organs and muscular structure. However, they will not be dissected entirely as they will also be used during succeeding quarters.

The advantage of using rhino monkeys for this purpose is the fact that they are an animal that most easily resembles the human body in skeletal and muscular structure. The study, presently taught by Dr. Frank D. Rohrer, Physical Education professor, is "...a course concerning the application of anatomy to human movement."

Rhino monkeys come originally from India which is in fact, the only country in the world where they are found in a wild state. They are lean and very agile and weigh around fifteen pounds. Being of a lower order than the chimpanzee, they are vicious animals and consequently do not make good pets.

India places great moral emphasis on the proper use and treatment of these animals, and demands reassurance that they will not be mistreated and that their use be only for the cause of responsible research. They are presently used extensively in medical and biological research.

NOVEMBER 4th

CONTINUE THE EDUCATION BUILDING AMENDMENT

THE SITUATION IS CRITICAL

Florida college enrollment will double within the next five years. Already crowded facilities must be expanded to make room for future enrollment. Vocational-Technical Centers must be completed and expanded to train personnel for the jobs being created by the tremendous expansion of business and industry. Junior colleges now meeting in temporary headquarters (25% of the enrollment) must be established in adequate permanent buildings. Universities must be expanded on existing sites. New universities and medical centers are also needed to meet future demands. Unless something is done there will not be adequate educational facilities when we need them the most.

YOU CAN HELP

In 1963, Florida voters approved the Education Building Amendment, by an overwhelming two to one margin.

Under this program, proceeds of revenues derived from the utilities gross receipts tax were earmarked for a 50 year period, beginning January 1, 1964, for retirement of the bonds.

But under the new Constitution, this bonding authority expired on June 30, 1969. Therefore, the legislature placed on the general election ballot, for November 4, 1969, a proposed amendment which would continue this bonding authority.

Unless the Education Building Amendment is continued, the amount of funds to be provided for construction will be at a standstill.

If the people of Florida approve this amendment, it will make immediately available approximately $35,000,000 a year to build the vocational technical centers, junior colleges, and universities Florida desperately needs by 1975.

AND WITHOUT NEW TAXES

This is a bond program, which means that the public will not have to bear an additional tax burden. This program is working effectively now, but it needs to be renewed. As a program, it will utilize the utilities gross receipts tax to guarantee financing of this Building Amendment.

AND EVERYONE WILL BENEFIT

Passage of the Education Building Amendment of 1969 will provide a means for young people and adults, with varying educational backgrounds and needs, to prepare themselves for greater earning power and increased community service.

SPREAD THE WORD

Whether or not you are a registered voter you can do something. If you are an eligible voter, we urge you to vote "YES" on November 4, 1969. If not, you can still act by stressing the importance of this amendment to your parents and friends urging them to vote "yes" for the continuance of the Educational Building Amendment.
