We Live in the Present
By the Past, but for the Future

We all live in the past. At least, we all think that we do. When we look back, we see a world of opportunity and potential. We see a world where we could have been anything we wanted to be.

But we also live in the present. We live in the moment. We are the sum of our experiences, the decisions we have made, and the choices we have yet to make. We are who we are because of the past, but we are also who we will be in the future.

And so we must look to the future. We must imagine what we could be, what we could achieve. We must dream of what we could become. For it is in the future that we find our true potential.

But we must also remember the past. We must remember the lessons we have learned, the mistakes we have made, and the successes we have achieved. For it is in the past that we find our true strength.

So let us live in the present, but for the future.

FTU Health Cover Story

On Zoning
by HENRY POPPEN

A plan for a change in the zoning of the land bordering the campus was submitted about six months ago and is presently under consideration by the Tec-County Planning board and the Orange County Planning and Zoning Commission. As of yet, the plan has not been adopted, but it is being utilized by the Orange County Planning and Zoning Commission.

John P. Godfrey, Vice-President for Business Affairs at Florida Technological University, described the proposed plan as being this: all land extending two miles from the perimeter road, and driveways at least 10 feet wide within one mile of the perimeter road, must be subdivided into three variances which are UR-1, UR-2, and UR-3, all of which allow only residential dwellings to be constructed within the zoning classification.

The advantage of the plan would be to protect Florida Technological University from the influx of small businesses crowding around the campus, and creating at the same time a planned and controlled environment surrounding the campus that would enhance, not downgrade, the image of our new university.

Any student desiring more information about the proposed zoning ordinances are only in effect one quarter mile around the boundaries of the campus. An example of this is the University Residence which are subdivided into three variances which are UR-1, UR-2, and UR-3, all of which allow only residential dwellings to be constructed within the zoning classification.

5.6. To Present Announcements

Student Government plans to present 10 graduation announcements to each graduating senior. The announcements may be picked up during the morning of March at a stand that will be set up at the Liggett Lobby.

Any student desiring more announcements may order more at the bookstore at 25 cents each. Orders will be taken in March.

The announcements are white with black print and are folded over on themselves. Graduation will be held June 14 at 3 p.m. at the Municipal Auditorium.

CAMPUS GLANCES

President and Mrs. Millican would like to personally meet as many FTU students as possible, and so on Tuesday, February 24, 10:30 A.M., they will be in the auditorium and will be in the Student Recreation Hall to meet and talk with the students.

The University Recreation Committee will be holding a meeting at 4:00 P.M. in the President's Dining Room in the Village Center.

Picture Of The Week

"OKAY, ball. I'm the president see, and you are going into the basket." FTU President Charles Millican gives the ball a few instructions before heading it toward the basket during a special free throw contest Wednesday evening among presidents of local schools. Dr. Millican gave the new college try.
Dogs Pose Threat

There are approximately 15-20 stray dogs roaming on the FTU campus that pose a possible future threat to people at FTU. These dogs live on campus, hand-outs, and small sums. However, in construction, especially that of parking lots near the GCB, encroaches on the animals' hunting territory. Some of the dogs are beginning to starve. Not only is this a cruelty to the dogs, but some of these animals are already showing signs of viciousness toward people. If they are approached, they will snap and growl. One was seen to lunge at a student when she attempted to pet him.

So far, no dogs have actually hurt anyone but if the conditions worsen they might, especially if anyone should cross their diminishing hunting grounds. Something needs to be done for these dogs.

The animals come under the jurisdiction of the animal control office in Orange County. The proper official at FTU should see that these people are notified and the dogs picked up. A dog with a tag which would have its owner notified to pay a fine and come get him. At least they would not be left to their own devices, to starve, or increase the likelihood that someone would eventually be hurt.

Mautz's Letter to Tucker

"This will confirm and reinforce my comments to you at our meeting on 4 February with respect to the letter from Mr. Jay McGlon, Director of the Division of Personnel and Retirement, to me dated December 12 concerning perquisites for employees of the State University System. Mr. McGlon's letter was not received until the week of December 15. By that time much of the registration on the campuses was in process or had been completed, and it would have been extremely disruptive and difficult to have enforced the ruling that no employees of the State University System be permitted to take courses free of charge.

In addition to this difficulty of enforcement, I conceived that a legal problem might exist since the right to take a free course was granted in the contracts of the faculty. I have asked Mr. Rivers Bedford, General Counsel to the State Board of Education, for advice on this matter. Consequently this right could be incorporated into the employment agreements between other employees and the University System, purely because it has been viewed as a fringe benefit rather than a perquisite.

In view of the above circumstances, I hope you will find it possible to continue the perquisites for the current quarter, which terminates the latter part of March. I would also urge you to continue the perquisites for the remainder of the academic year. A contrary ruling would effect a hardship in some instances in which employees have accepted employment in reliance upon the existence of this benefit. Employment in some instances has been at a sacrifice over previous salaries or other possible employment. I would detail other instances of hardship, but hope that you will accept the statement that there are such cases.

Secondly, although no hardship would be affected in the case of some employees, a moral commitment exists in the sense that the right was one of the conditions of employment and has been for 20 years. Thirdly, the existence of this privilege has enormous symbolic value in the eyes of the faculty and other members of the University community.

I know of no discounts in the University System at the present time given to employees or faculty members. Many Universities have two or three-tier price structure. This structure has one price for students, a second price for faculty or employees, and a third price for all others. In the case of a two-tier price system, employees and students are grouped together. Example of such price structures exist in the case of merchandise sold in the bookstores, ticket to athletic events, and tickets to other events on the campuses, such as concerts and lectures. Is the term discount intended to include such price structures and to forbid them? In most instances in such a pricing system there is no State money involved in the operation of the enterprise. In the case of bookstores, they are operated as auxiliaries. Athletics at the University of Florida are operated through a corporation which is not at the present time subject to all of the controls which characterize other State operations.

The privileges extended by the Board of Regents to its employees are long-standing. These are different states in Universities throughout the nation and are part of the warp and woof of that society. I urge upon you in the consideration of these few privileges for the remainder of this year in order that we may submit to the Legislature for resolution the basic policy question. The Recognition Act which compels your decision in these matters is broad and sweeping. Inevitably the consequences will have a disruptive impact upon the Universities and consequences far beyond those which are apparent and immediate."

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

FTU is an academic institution dedicated to higher learning. From the policy of the paper, this would be hard to ascertain. I would like to cite two examples, one last fall, when several students of this organization were cited for academic achievement. Only a small percentage of those receiving honors were mentioned, nor the entire group. Another example is for the last quarter, there was no mention of those nominated for the Dean's List.

Suggest a little more emphasis on the academic side of this institution.

Sincerely Yours,

David E. Martin

(Art Editor: Note: We have received the completed Dean's List, and if we did, space would prevent us from mentioning everyone. The FuTuRe tries to regularly honor those students who have achieved at FTU; but there is always room for improvement.)

Dear Editor,

A news story in last week's FuTuRe erroneously identified me as chairman of the Faculty Senate. Dr. David Hernandez is chairman of the Faculty Senate, an official representative body of the faculty charged with advising the administration on academic matters. I am president of the FTU chapter of the American Association of University Professors. The AAUP is an independent association which sets the professional standards and represents the interests of the profession. The AAUP and the Faculty Senate joined in inviting Chancellor Mautz to address our faculty.

Sincerely,

Richard Adams
Assistant Professor of English

It's Greek To Me...

Greeks Reschedule Greek Week

by Nancy Smith

Greek Week was rescheduled by Interfraternity Council and the Panhellenic Council Tuesday at the regularly scheduled IFC meeting. Three Panhellenic representatives attended the meeting and were informed of a plan made up by the IFC Greek Week committee.

The plans include a 3-day Greek Week with Olympic Games, a general meeting of Greeks with a national Greek organization speaker, workshops for all aspects of fraternity and sorority life and finally a Greek party.

Panhellenic representatives are now in the process of presenting the plans to their sororities and making additions and corrections.

Fidelis Sorority sisters and pledges had a combination car wash last Sunday. The girls are presently working on a series of money raising projects to finance their service projects.

Tonight is Hell Night for the Fidelis pledges. Who knows what will happen then??

FTU is the only way to travel in a busy, busy university world when seconds count. And, besides, it's really a lot of fun. Bimmer sliders rate the railing outside the Library Building as a top notch rush.

On Sunday the brothers and little sisters are having a volleyball picnic outing. This is the day while NAA second volleyball team will get a chance to play.

Chi Beta Alpha and Phi Kappa Psi are both hosting Winter Formal parties this weekend. The Chi Beta Alpha Winter Formal will be Saturday, February 7, at 8:30 p.m. in the占用 auditorium featuring Don Jones, star quarterback of the Orlando Panthers, who discussed both the bright and problems of professional sports. The evening's activities were an informal dance and party at the Pine Hills American Legion Hall, again in honor of the new rush.

It is a physical impossibility for one person to attend all of the meetings, events, and activities at Florida Tech University (FTU), Superlatives. This not only includes office work, such as writing letters for ads and staff meetings once a week, but also going from one meeting or another. Ron rarely misses a class, and last but not least, he is a freshman business management major with enough energy handed down to him for a dozen students. He puts in a minimum of 50 hours a week as editor-in-chief of FTU's first yearbook, The Peagman. This not only includes office work, such as writing letters for ads and staff meetings once a week, but also going around setting up ad shots with the photographer, and trying to set up times when the university heads can have their yearbook pictures taken. He is often seen racing down the sidewalk to one meeting or another. Ron admires the yearbook takes a big portion of his week, but he is determined it will be a first-rate one, despite problems he encountered earlier with a confusion about biddings and a too-small staff that at one time consisted of only him.

Despite the work this requires, Ron rarely misses a class, and last quarter came out with a 3.0 average. He also came out of high school with a 3.5 average, and studies 15 hours a week in order to keep from slipping. He gave the most interesting class he ever had as earth sciences in high school, but his favorite here is accounting. When asked what he wanted after college, Ron laughed and said, "Not much. Just an office in downtown New York, a penthouse, and to be a stockbroker."

Ron has always led a busy life. He is the son of a retired service career man, born in Guam. After that he lived in Washington, D.C., Cambridge, Maryland, Jacksonville, Londonderry, Ireland, San Francisco, and Key West. For the last three years the family which includes three sisters and no brothers (poor Ron) has lived in Altamonte Springs. Ron said, "Lynn's Hardware is my favorite store." Ron has been a member of the Student Council, tennis, chess, and basketball. He is involved in the school newspaper. Ron is an active member of the Student Council, tennis, and basketball. He is involved in the school newspaper. Ron is an active member of the Student Council, tennis, and basketball. He is involved in the school newspaper.

The activities numerous Ron was involved in his high school included the French Club, Paramedic Club, track manager, yearbook staff, including being its business manager as a senior, Beta Club, and its president as a senior, the Student Council, sophomore class president, and he also served on the prom committee. And but but not least, he was voted "Most Dependable" in the Senior Superlatives.

Kinetic Art - Part III - Finis

The last part in the Kinetic Art series opens with an unusual treatment of a subject through a stage play. The color is muted, dull, humdrum, and the attempting of the hues of Autumn.

The setting in the Palace of Venalitas, a beautifully preserved opulent, and solemn reminder of the reign of Louis, the 'Sun King'. Grandeur is the theme here, a reminder of the past when life was gay, when the arts and nature were intertwined together to create living art that brought pleasure and knowledge, and appreciation to being an integral part of daily life.

In France where the Palace is situated there prevails an overall climate. This climate has not only affected, but actually contributed to the atmosphere of the film. Quiet urban glades and sumptuous open gardens are all seemingly bathed in a moist, partially sunny glow regardless of where they may be situated. From the fountain which shot up crescendoes of dancing, to the balcony which controlled the drizzling from above, the film was a study in light and time within.

In the end, the Pakar takes the stage and begins his performance, a silent one, to complete the film. In this way, the audience is left to ponder the meaning of the Kinetic Art show which was left unspoken. The film ends with the Pakar sliding down the balcony, his hands up, to the sound of clapping from the audience. The Pakar then descends down the stairs, looking proudly at the audience, and then turns to the camera and smiles. His smile is one of triumph and victory over his opponents, and the audience.

Dear Narcissa,

I am madly in love with a guy who is under the impression that he hasn't octopi. He is all over me at once. I think that he is trying to pick my pocket. Could he possibly be a leprechaun? Should I try to get him to counsel a psychiatrist? Don't tell me to forget him, because I have really lost my head over him.

Yours truly,

Marie Antoinette

Dear Medusa,

You find out for sure, hung in there. No matter what, go ahead and get married. News like that you should keep in the family.

Confidential to Someone's Mama:

Your daughter is indeed a registered student at FTU, just as you suspected. The prodigal is taking 15 hours, vitamins, long walks and cold showers. You may not hear from this kid for awhile, but you are highly spoken of and well remembered.

NARCISSA KNOWS what you students have been up to—nothing. Narcissa even over the literary race at FTU, considering the light amount of mail. It has been suggested to Narcissa that FTU students are normal people who don't need her services. To which she replied, "5%4+, nobody's that well adjusted."

She has been using the problems of her friends, but strangely enough, they are few in number. Narcissa welcomes all of the leisure time which she uses to despise herself in riotous living in Bithio, where she maintains a public nuisance. Anyone interested in keeping the old but off the streets may write to her at FTU, Box 26,267.

The tenacious Tya's have compiled a 4-0 chart thus far after defeating the Better Halves 14-6 last week. Following behind are the Diplomats at 3-1, the Better Halves at 2-1-1, and Gabriel's Girls with the 2-3 ledger. Bringing up the rear are the Toffees at 1-3 with their first win coming over the Little Sisters, who are 0-4-1, last week.

It must be noted that the majority of the decisions were made by way of forfeit with three of the five games scheduled last week being decided via the give-away route.

The leader in each division were TKE I (6-0) in the fraternity league, the Roadrunners (5-0) in the independent Black division, and the Psychology Faculty (6-0) in the Independent Gold League. "We've still in need of a few more boys but this is certainly a good beginning." Right now we're just practicing twice a week with the possibility of competing in a upcoming meet next month," related Ellis.
