FTU Still Mascotless

FTU was still without an official mascot this week despite a university-wide vote in which five candidates would win.
The Mascot Committee was aiming for a 53 percent turnout of students, faculty, and staff, but only 53 percent cast ballots.

This left two alternatives. The first was to throw out the entire election and try again at a later date, either with new suggestions or with the original five.
The second was to ask President Charles Milliman to decide whether or not the 53 percent vote should be validated, and the top vote getter among the five candidates—reportedly to be Knights of Pythias—named the official FTU mascot.
The Mascot Committee has decided on the second approach and said it would seek recommendations from the students.
As of Thursday, the committee had not met with Dr. Milliman.
It was also reported that there was a shortage of votes in 10 offices other than the five officially on the ballot.

Slate Takes Office After Spirited Race

Jim Stringer becomes FTU’s second SG President late Friday after an extremely close election. Richard Lancaster was chosen to be Stringer’s vice president.
Stringer won over Frank Santry by 11 votes. Nearly 50 percent of those students eligible cast ballots during the two-day election. After the ballots were first counted, late Friday, Santry’s backers asked for and received a recount. The final results did not change. Lancaster was Santry’s running mate. Allen Pryor, who lost to Lancaster by only 27 votes, was Stringer’s number two man.

Will Jones, who announced he was running for the job of University President, received 18 write-in votes.

Chica Brown is FTU’s new Spring Queen. A total of 69 ballots were cast. First runner-up was Melanie Hurst. Second runner-up was Susan Hodefich. Frances Milliman received a number of write-in votes.

Chi Beta Alpha Goes National

Sunday, May 24, 1970, was a big day for Chi Beta Alpha, FTU’s professional business fraternity. It became the first National Fraternity on the Florida Tech campus.

The day-long events began at 10:00 a.m. with registration in the Library Lobby for members of the International Fraternity of Delta Sigma Pi from Oxford, Ohio, and other Delta Sigma Pi chapters around the State of Florida. A tour of the campus was arranged from 10:30 to 11:30, followed by a luncheon at the Rine Condominium in East Orange County. From 1:00 to 4:00 p.m., there was a two-hour Ritualistic Initiation in which pledges were tested and the symbols and rituals of Delta Sigma Pi were explained. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the 60 pledges and four FTU faculty members became brothers of Delta Sigma Pi.

An Installation banquet was held at the Park Plaza Hotel at 8:00 p.m. Toastmaster was George Tredwell, District Director for Delta Sigma Pi, Chancellorial Dar Brunson gave the invocation followed by greetings from FTU President Charles N. Milliman, Dean of the College of Business Administration Dr. Charles Gilliland, gave a history of the College, and former Vice-president of Chi Beta Alpha, Bill Kope, offered the history of the founding of XBA, followed by the acceptance of the charter and charter by president of XBA John Gregory, “Highest Scholastic” and “Most Outstanding” awards were given and the evening ended with fraternal greetings by Mr. Charles L. Farmer, Executive Director of Delta Sigma Pi.

The FTU Chapter was founded April 13, 1969, by Robert McKinnoch, James Reagan, and Raymond Ricard, who felt the need for a professional fraternity on campus. May 13, 1969, elections were held for the first officers of XBA and Mr. J. Thomas Simmons (Director of FTU Personnel Services) was elected fraternity adviser. The XBA roll currently boasts 69 members.

The next officers of XBA include: James Parker, President; James Thomas, Second Vice-President; William Kope, Vice President; Richard Lancaster, Treasurer; Robert McKinnoch, Secretary; Daniel Brenman, Chancellor; and James Reagan, Historian.

FTU’s MOTH A Begins
'Time of Your Life’

By James Haney

Motha is presently producing “The Time of Your Life”, by William Saroyan. It’s about life in the “golden years” and more specifically, in “one of the cheap dives so often frequented by Dashiell Hammett.” This was during a “power to the people” drive so the play paints a picture of a cop as either being a pushy detective who beats up old blind men and has a relative in a high office or a poor slob who doesn’t really want to be a cop at all but is forced into it by necessity. (The pushy one gets killed in the end, showing how the author’s mind works.)

The action takes place in a sleazy bar called “Nick’s.” The proprietor of the establishment, who is coincidentally called Nick, is a large gentleman, who looks like he might wrestle gorillas in his off-hours, has a sweet little daughter, and never raises his voice in anger except when confronted by the pushy cop.

In general the script is hokey. The cast does a remarkable job in keeping at least a modicum of interest in what could be a very dull play. The staging, lighting, and blocking are excellent. The set is very good, and even remarkable, considering the circumstances under which the crew had to operate. The action never completely dies, even though it had several flaws. If nothing else Rom Feneke who played a dancer-comedian working in Nick’s now actually could be counted on to shuffle his feet and wave his left arm in some sort of seedy circle, or Jim Gautier, who had to play the guy getting his kicks out of playing a pin ball machine could achieve on to shake the machine, or salute it. As a whole the play has its points, and except for a piano player who can’t act and a false hammy player who the play would have been better off without, the cast fills their separate parts well.

Jim Fay plays the slightly inept philosopher who has befriended Tom, played by Rick Belcher and is evidently supposed to be a bit of a character. Both are played to the hilt and done well.

Fay’s voice has a tendency to climb to rather amazing heights sometimes but it never did too much damage to his character. Belcher was able several times to get this writer completely involved in his character. The role does not lend itself to easy involvement, so the part was played exceptionally well.

All things considered (that’s counting the mosquitoes) the play is one of the better Motha has produced. The latest talent, as it has been in the previous performances is obviously present. There has been great improvement in many of the actors since the beginning of this year. The advice is to see it and not to let this performance will not be considered a wasted evening.

Pegasus ‘To Meet August Deadline

Although the Pegasus yearbook is published in the middle of the school schedule, editor-in-chief Ron Page feels that the book will come out on time on August 1. No more yearbooks are available for purchase except for those purchased at the book fair.

‘Watch This Spot

Please watch for the new issue of ‘Watch this Spot’ ftu. Available now in the office, it is at 90 cents per copy.

Looking forward to next year’s Pegasus, Page says the yearbook will have more color and other special effects. He hopes to have a larger staff with more photographers to work with. Also needed for next year’s Pegasus are page typists, business managers, and section editors.

This year’s editors worked under a handicap because they joined the staff comparatively late in the year. Next year will see many of the same staff members as this year, but there will be new additions.

The yearbook staff plans to begin coordinating ideas for next year’s yearbook early this year. Page has expressed a desire to see next year’s Pegasus out in June or July, however, if the year’s graduation ceremonies are covered, the book may not be out until August.

The little sisters of Phi Alpha Epsilon held a Tom Jones party last Saturday night for the brothers and pledges. The party was a tremendous success and the new members were introduced to the fraternal spirit of Phi Alpha Epsilon.

Jack Kazanaus, president of the Central Florida, accepted the Phi Alpha Epsilon Alumnae Association, and the Phi Alpha Epsilon Alumnae Association of the University of South Florida SAW Alumnae Association addressed the members and pledged in attendance.

Soror Sorority congratulates Lyn Schoonegburg for getting fourth runner-up and Miss Valerie Koch, who is the pledge class sweetheart for this quarter.

The brothers would like to recognize the Psi pledge class for the spring quarter. These men have done a fine job so far. In the organization are two pledges, Walt Komunski and Dave Johnson. Social affiliates are Dennis Whitmer, Fred May, Mike Racuzzi, and Jerry Jones. The officers of the pledge class are: President, Richard Tork; Vice President, Jim Harrison; and Secretary-Treasurer Rick Schulte.

To K. honesty also recently elected officers for 1970-71. They are: President, Liz Herbert; Vice President, Judy Wilson; Treasurer, Sue Hollik; Recording Secretary, Sharon Smith; and Corresponding Secretary, Pam McClain.

A party was held at the home of Melanie Hurt Saturday night for the sisters and the pledges. The pledges received their new "Big" sisters and there was fun for all.

This marks the end of the last big week with many new memories.

A senior at Florida Technological University has been selected as one of 400 honor students from 600 U.S. colleges and universities to serve as a Washington Summer Intern.
"Roy A. Werner, Jr., has been notified by the U.S. Civil Service Commission he will spend the summer working for the White House Commission on Youth. Werner was chosen from 1,400 outstanding students who were nominated for the summer program from 600 schools. In a letter from Robert E. Hampton, Civil Service Commission chairman, he was hailed for the achievement. "The fact that your school chose to nominate you as representative of its finest students is a tribute to your ability," Hampton wrote. The political science major, who lives at 24 North Glenwood Street, Orlando, with his wife, Paula, and a teacher, said he looks forward to what should be "both a challenging and productive experience. Working for the White House Commission on Youth, dealing with the problems and issues facing our nation's youth during the next decade, should be especially interesting," Werner continued.

"I can think of nothing more meaningful for the future of this country," the 1962 Boone High School graduate exclaimed. When notified of his selection, Werner was working on active duty with the Florida National Guard as a first lieutenant. He will graduate from FTU on June 14 with the University's charter class.

The brothers of Chi Beta Alpha pose for this group picture during preparations for going national last Sunday.

close relationships between PAE and SAE alumni and procedures for reunion were discussed. One of the evening's highlights occurred when Jack Kazanaus invited the PAE brothers and pledges to an evening at the Back Door with the Central Florida SAE Alumni Association. The event will occur this Monday night.

It was also announced by Kazanaus that at the recent SAE Founders Day banquet the SAE alumni and the PAE brothers consumed 3000 cocktails. Not bad for an evening's work! After Monday night's meeting there was a social gathering at the Roman Comunardrum for the brothers and pledges.

The pledges of PAE are holding a car wash this Saturday at the Thompson building at the University of Hylands. It will feature a wash and wax for the small charge of $3.

Last Saturday afternoon Phi Alpha Epsilon accepted the challenge of Kappa Sigma Alpha and defeated them in a game of softball 7-4. Kappa Sigma Alpha had been defeated previously by PAE in regular season intramurals and Sunday's game was a rematch at Kappa Sigma Alpha's request. PAE's softball team is presently unbeaten and they have won their division thus far. They are presently engaged in finals.

Tyte Sorority held elections of officers May 19. The following Tytes were elected to office: President, Lawrence Gustafson; Vice President, Frances Bender; Secretary, Jovra LeCompte; Treasurer, Nicki Jackson; Rush Chairman, Mary Lou Rachle; Philanthropy Officer, Linda Caster; and Social Chairman, Debbie Doubler.

Tyte end of the year banquet will be held May 25. The banquet will only serve as an installation of officers but will honor some very "special" people.

Another memory was added to the Tyte collection of memories with the beach weekend at New Smyrna this past weekend. Everyone has such a good time that another one is in the planning stages.

FLU Pres. Visits FTU

The problems of urban environment and its impact on the university campus were aired at FTU Wednesday when the president of Florida's new International University in Dade County spoke to an audience of American Culture class open to the public.

Dr. Charles E. Perry, who until his appointment as first president of FIU last July was vice chairman of the State University System, was introduced by FTU President Charles N. Millikan to the 8 p.m. class.

Dr. Perry's subject was based on a first-hand knowledge of the situation FIU faces as it gears up to open 5,000 students in the fall of 1972. Presently, the FIU campus consists of temporary offices at the old Tannamci airport near Miami.

Dr. Perry has noted since taking the reins that he has hopes to make the school a "Community problem solver." He's been quoted as opposed to achieving higher education in the traditional small college town.

"How can you expect a young person to spend four years in a protected, small-town atmosphere and then step into teaching in a big city and really be wise? The problems are in the cities. You should live at which school," the youthful administrator contended.

The FTU series in Contemporary American Culture has proved to be very popular with Central Florida citizens. The weekly classes, under the direction of Dr. Stephen L. Levenson, are conducted in Room 115 of the General Classroom Building on the Florida Tech campus, with discussions with the Spring Quarter, will be conducted again starting next fall, when it will be known as the Contemporary Culture Series.

Campus Glances

Dr. Robert Arnold appeared on Channel 2's TOPIC program May 10, discussing the importance of Channel 24 Educational TV.

Mr. James Radford, who has served as the Operations Manager since September 1, 1969, has been appointed as the Director of Software Systems Specialist for the division.

FLU Concert Thrills Full House

By David Brammer

Florida Technological University's Department of Music presented a chamber music concert to a near-capacity crowd Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m. in FTU's Science Auditorium. Featured performers were Sabina Mincicelli, violin, Max Weiler, principal violin with the Florida Symphony, Arpad and Cecile Sommers, cellists with the FSO, and Dr. Leonidas Sarakibanas played harpsichord for Marcella Mincicelli. Although the audience was small, the technical skill of the harpsichordist was outstanding with the use of the instrument. The performance was well received.

The next concert, a string quartet, will be presented in the future.

Joy Takes Joy In Poetry, And In Thermodynamics

"Joy, as she likes to be called, was one of 16 students from the state to be selected for the National Science Foundation Undergraduate Research Program. It is rare for a woman to be so honored.

The program provides funds for talented students to conduct research projects outside their own institution. Joy will be going to Gainesville for 12 weeks of "hard but enjoyable work" as she describes it.

Then she will return to Tech in the Fall to complete her senior year, get her degree in Mechanical Engineering and do graduate work.

Her project involves Thermodynamics, but Joy prefers not to talk about the details of the theorem with which she will be working with 'The Thermo fluid guys at GT.'

She credits FTU professors Dr. Ronald Erb, Department of Physics for helping her win the summer opportunity.

'I want to be an Aerospace Engineer,' she says without hesitation, but she readily admits the market for her chosen profession is depressed right now.

Airstrip Plans Still Up In Air

Whether or not FTU will have its own airstrip has yet to be determined. A proposal, put forth by the Pegasus Pilots Flying Club some weeks ago, called for the building of a simple grass strip, somewhere in the northern part of the campus. The airstrip would be available not only to the Pegasus Pilots, but also to the faculty, administration, and any guest of the university.

The proposal came under the agenda of the Florida Board of Regents, at the meeting last May 1st, held here at FTU, but was moved up a future date, because of a busy school schedule.

Dr. Donald Wall, advisor to the Pilots Club, has expressed both optimism for the project, and regrets that it was not discussed at the B.O.R. meeting. As Dr. Wall put it, 'the Pegasus Pilots are still in limbo.'

Tick-Tick, Odd Even!
It's All For Science

"Tick, tick, tick, tick."

"Odd, even, even, odd. Good night, do they go that fast all the time?"

"I'm afraid so. We'll try again."

The wall in the Library Building are thin, so there were times when this strange dialogue floated down the halls of the second floor.

Students who passed Room 229 must have wondered what type of mental torture to which persons trapped in this room were being subjected. Never fear. It was just Brendon Voss with his short memory machine.

Voss doesn't look like a psychology major who plans to do graduate work at the University of West Virginia. But what does a psychology major look like anyway?

Voss is a tall, muscular fellow who prefers wearing sandals and colored T-shirts when he's doing his experiments. He speaks with a decided New York accent left over from his earlier days on Long Island. He now lives in Winter Park, inside Room 229, amid the jumble of old television equipment (it's his basement room). Voss has cleared a tiny space where he conducts his experiment. The tools of his trade include a tape recorder, a slide projector and some other equipment.

Voss's experiment involves testing a short-term memory recall of students who have seen series of numbers. He writes the numbers on a small screen in front of them.

When the usually nervous project is seated, Voss explains in a low, raspy voice that he will flash a series of two-digit numbers on the screen for a rapid succession. The subject should designate aloud if the numbers were of odd or even. The first simple problem would be just a warm-up and wouldn't count. When the real test was run, Voss warned that some spontaneous thoughts would be flashed before the numbers began, and that after the numbers concluded, the "stim" would be asked to recall, if he could, the consonants.

"It's an enjoyable little test," Voss boasted, but it was difficult to convince the student taking the test.

When the numbers began to flash, "tick, tick, tick, tick" he struggled through a few, uncertain "odd, even, odd's and spastically "Good Lord, do they all go that fast?"

"I'm afraid so," Voss said. "We'll try again."

With a few more practices, the student relaxed, and kept up with most of the flashing numbers.

During the actual test, the consonants were flashed first, then a series of numbers. Then Voss asked the subject to repeat the consonants he had just seen.

Recall of the letters usually depended on the length of time the succeeding numbers were run.

Voss explained that the test was attempting to determine the short-term retention of meaningful and non-meaningful data, whether verbalization of material was more significant than silent reading, and what the effect of time variances was on recall.

'I'm doing this as an ungraduate research project that will probably be presented in a published report," Voss said. "I believe that we have proved the theories we set out to prove.'

Some professors and students have complained that the tennis courts are difficult to play on. Yet, play continues to be heavy. This shot of empty courts is an unusual scene.

It's Very Nice, But a Small Bit

Out near the new Physical Education Building, these are beautiful new baseball field. It has been termed "one of the best in the state." Then why is it not used? The FutUre found out last week and the architects involved should be a tad red-faced. According to people who should know, the baseball field is perfectly laid out as a little league field. It is just one of the physical headaches that face PE. Other problems exist with the handball courts, the tennis courts and the sex of a proposed volleyball court (it was repeatedly laid out as a badminton court).

All is not lost with the baseball field. Plans call for some minor rearranging of the diamond. The pitcher's mound will be leveled, and the field prepared for softball.

The Baseball Club has been practicing at a nearby school, but word has it that some local business has expressed interest in donating a baseball field, or at least the funds to build one.

So you think that since the collegiate basketball season has long been over coasters can take it easy and Won't? In fact coaches work harder during the off season than during the regular season. Especially if they have a young team and happen to be搬迁 Gene (Tovey) Clark. Though FTU's last basketball game was in February, Coach Clark has not relaxed a single day. Recruiting and scheduling occupied all of his time. Oh, you say, but recruiting isn't hard work. It's not if you are lucky enough to be at an established university with an abundance of scholarships available. But FTU hasn't some of these, unless you can call one very successful season (11-3) a winning tradition. All of these factors combine to make coaching at Tuch a very frustrating and worrisome experience. But if there ever was a basketball person suited for this type of work it is Torrey Clark.

After building a nationally famous high school dynasty in Wisconsin, Clark left a secure and successful coaching position to accept the job at FTU. Here he has faced innumerous handicaps and obstacles to build a winning basketball team. His student and community can take pride in him.

The club next scheduled competition is at Gainesville tomorrow evening, as the AFTC fraternity of the University of Florida.

The FTU Golf Club suffered two defeats last week, one of the hands of the nationally ranked Rollins team. The other loss was a close match with Embry Riddle which ended 497-503. Rollins, ranked no 2 in the nation among small colleges, had five of its six members shooting in the 70's as they took the FTU linkage 496-498. Even though the spread is 4 strokes, it must be noted that the Rollins squad included several scholarship athletes and an All-American golfer. Last year, the Tars lost the NCAA championship by one stroke and are expected to challenge again this year.

Wearne LeLand took all medallion honors for FTU with a 78. Other scores for FTU were as follows: Mike Utz; 86; Drury Howard, 84; Ray Johnson, 84; Mark Wicket, 82; Bob Ashton, 83.

Even though FTU cannot offer prospective basketball players a scholarship, tough schedule of state-wide recognition, or even at home, Coach Clark is very optimistic about getting two or three excellent players for next year. Students Make Waves In LLRB Art Exhibits

By BARBARA R. PIETREK

Recently, a new art exhibit opened in the lobby of the Library building under the auspices and direction of the PTU art department and faculty members. The show, which is an unashamedly professional mounting and display nevertheless reveals that some have considerable talent in art. Among the select examples are in sculpture, drawing, and the latter of which is not a "drip" type of work but a basic in art.

Among the more noteworthy examples in the skill of drawing is Michael Llinas whose works number 2, 3, 35, 37 and 39. These are not all that Michael has displayed, but many of the more excitingly ones. For example, the large drawings which are side by side on the north wall and framed in black or white mounting board. The one in the center of the display is particularly arresting in that the artist has created a feeling of himself in the foreground and arrayed himself in a rather round manner. The stylized symbols and likenesses of the feminine presence. This is also a conversation piece for it is contemporary and keyed to today's mood with its preoccupation with the sensual and the explicit in the man-woman relationship. And it is very competent in the rendition of line, light and shade, mood which has been obviously labored over. The artist apparently spends much time in perfecting his style.

In the realm of sculpture there was one noteworthy work of art which unfortunately was displayed improperly and devoid of identification. It was on display before the Registrar's Office and is possibly worth more attention. The one which does not do it justice is a lovely hue of eggshell with soft, rounded edges which were placed within the framework of the sculpture. Also the material is just molded and judged enough to create the effect of composition can be viewed from any angle.

In the realm of sculpture and their containers. The containers are part of the display and the displays of their containers. This was one nicely balanced and for their relative size, it was to use it has been handled with taste, a little bit of multi-colored and balanced, small squares and in turn it is to a smaller round container with a wavy pattern of somewhat oval shape. The design was in the background in white and red. The pattern was then, as a matter of view for composer of view for composer from any angle.

There are also some notable examples on display. Color Crawford's ones number 4 and 5 were very similar to the other, but I liked number 5 more because of the perspective and because it was more challenging for use in watercolor. Also the tones, the whites and the display was there and indicated that there was considerable point for this area in the area of landscape depiction is a creative and professional effort. Then there was a watercolor with psychological meaning linked in it which was number 77 and is the creation of Don Johnson. The drawing of the nude woman was the glow of the fire. Immoderately, we received the drawing of the fire as having changed into our fire fighting dress. Following a fire drill the fire, we helped put it out. We put the fire out quick and left with a new emblem. XAPD.

The community had to come and start it. There were the same different fences left fires were near and the ground was not dry enough for the fires to get going only became and water stand reached 12,000 gallons of water to put out the fire.

Although each truck used its water tank and had to go through a hydrant and get filled, neither did it. "The entire time we were out there we had the fire under control and at no time did it look like it might get out of control.

The Union Park FD left at 11:00 p.m. after being thoroughly sure the fire was completely out. Before leaving they covered the ground with a blanket of water - a extra safety precaution.

A resident wishes to remain anonymous told a PTU reporter, "While hiking through the woods tonight I saw in groups of individuals swimming the lake near the area of the fire.
