Book of the Month

"CSI meets the Canterbury Tales"

Ariana Franklin's book, Mistress of the Art of Death, is the first title in a new mystery-suspense series that takes place in medieval England. The heroine, Adelia, is summoned to England from Italy by King Henry II to solve an ongoing series of murders that left unsolved will cause major political strife for the king and a war between the townspeople.

With excellent attention to period detail, we follow the heroine through the dense web of events, evidence and conspiracies that both help and hinder her investigation.

As well as a good bit of action and adventure, Adelia's emotional growth and relationships both old and new are folded into the story. This cleverly crafted plot complete with realistic detail will immerse the reader in the life and times of this medieval heroine.

Meet Jamie Conklin, Our new Adjunct Librarian

Originally from the Show Me State, Jamie moved to Orlando in 2002 to earn her Bachelor's Degree in English from UCF. She taught computer classes at the public library, which led to an interest in libraries and eventually a Master of Library and Information Science degree from Florida State University.

After working in public libraries for six years, Jamie now looks forward to working with students, professors, and visitors at the Rosen College to meet their information needs. Besides helping others find information, Jamie likes to spend her time exploring Florida, biking, and reading about travel and nature.

Jamie first learned of all the library resources available to students while attending classes at UCF. Please drop by and let her show you some helpful tips. It just might make your life easier!
