Dr. Louis C. Murray, Orlando physician and former Board of Regents member, recently was reported as saying he thought a first-year, basic medical instruction program should be instituted at FTU "by fall of 1974." This week Murray elaborated on the quote, declaring that although FTU will probably get such a program, it "will probably take about three years to establish at FTU. About all we can hope for by the fall of 1974 is authorization and funds to plan such a program.

Murray's sentiments were echoed by Dr. Robert J. Laird, assistant dean and pre-professional coordinator of the College of Natural Sciences. Laird said, "It would be impossible to set up such a program at FTU by the fall of 1974. We don't have the space or the equipment, and we have not even requested the program yet for FTU."

Basically, under the program pre-med students would acquire their first year of medical science education at qualified universities instead of medical schools, thus easing the pinch on medical schools and sifting the need to build new ones.

FTU would be the second university in the state to offer the program. It was instituted two years ago at Florida State University, and according to Murray, is working out "quite well."

At FTU, the medical student would spend his first year here, his second and third years at the University of Florida, University of South Florida or Miami, and return to FTU for his fourth year of medical instruction. In the two years at FTU he would gain practical experience by working in Orlando-area hospitals.

Currently, the University of Florida accepts only 64 of approximately 800 applicants for the first year of medical studies. The situation is comparable at Miami and South Florida. All three schools are capable of training many more students in the final phases of medical instruction, but in the basic sciences and preparation to clinical training, their resources are limited.

About 225 doctors are turned out in Florida yearly. Under Murray's program, this figure could be easily increased to 500. When asked about the need for that many additional doctors, Murray replied, "There is not a doctor shortage as such in Florida, but there is a shortage of Florida-educated doctors, and there is uneven distribution of doctors, both in areas of practice and of geographical location."
The group, which calls itself CEPTIA, insists that its members won't eat anything but toilet paper out of a toilet. While your group has been under the sun, I'm sure there is one organization called Nik-0-Lok Corp. of Orlando that charges to use pay toilets are sexist, explaining that women always have to pay to use the toilet, while our members are free to go into a school or use a public restroom for free. The group will be called the John in the Bowl. It kind of puts the giant in the washting machine to shame. I'm sure a giant can get a lot more reaction coming out of a John in stead of a toilet. It's a war of economic class versus the poor house; a war of pocketbook versus the poor house; a war of the rich versus the poor. There have been no reports of food shortages, but I've heard that people are just eating better food. Some have reported that they are just eating more food. But in any case, I'm sure that the average person has a lot to be thankful for. I'm sure a giant can get a lot more reaction coming our of a John in stead of a toilet. It's a war of pocketbook versus the poor house; a war of the rich versus the poor. There have been no reports of food shortages, but I've heard that people are just eating better food. Some have reported that they are just eating more food. But in any case, I'm sure that the average person has a lot to be thankful for.

In a war of this magnitude we can't afford a community of sunshine organizers—we can't even afford a pound of hamburger—so wake up, Central Florida! The war is here, not over yet.

Yellow Thoughts
By William Lee Hidden

Today there seems to be groups and organizations for every cause under the sun. I'm sure there is one organization called Organization for the Preservation of the American Landscape that has formed somewhere in the Dorn Islands off Latin America. With great groups doing so much for their cause like Icelandic Veterans, Indian Rights Association, or a Citizen's Organization for a Slave State, it seems as if we are not doing anything to make these groups feel welcome. I am sure that the people of Chicago have been formed to "wipe Chicago clean of all pay toilets."

The group, which calls itself CEPTIA, insists that pay toilets are both immoral and unfair. CEPTIA feels it is degrading for someone to have to come up with a dime simply to use the toilet (and read the graffiti). "Sometimes they even cost as much as a quarter," a CEPTIA spokesman said in an interview for "Futurian Estate," an underground newspaper out of Detroit. "Hm, those must come complete with illustrations."

CEPTIA also charges that the pay toilet is a monopoly owned by N.6. Lock Corp. of Indianapolis, AAIUH1, but here is the dilemma that will put all of Women's Lib in upper arms. CEPTIA also charges that pay toilets are sexist, explaining that women always have to pay to use the toilet, while virgins are free to go in. CEPTIA has recently adopted its own insignia—a clenched fist holding a chain and padlock, protruding out of oyd glasses used as a toilet bowl. It is the first time in the history of Chicago that a club has been formed to promote something as unimportant as a padlock on the padlock of a toilet. I am sure a giant can get a lot more reaction coming out of a John instead of a kitchen. A newspaper is also expected soon for CEPTIA members. It will be called the "Futurian Toilet Paper."

Unfortunately, CEPTIA has had little success in taking their cause before state and local officials. But what do you expect if you spend all your time watching a giant in toilet? I'd like to watch this but Fat feels like to go on. Besides, I just have to go. Hey, buddy, can you spare me a dime?
The first officially approved master's program in computer science in the state is due to be introduced at FTU in fall.

The program is uniquely defined in that FTU does not have a computer, but depends upon a computer at the University of South Florida in Tampa for administrative and student work.

According to Bernard Osto, dean of the College of Natural Sciences, the new degree will answer a long recognized need for advanced study in what has proven to be a rapidly expanding profession.

Dr. Arthur Dutton, mathematics department chairman, said, "The program will basically emphasize four areas: applied software, computer organization, information systems and numerical mathematics."

The master program will be much the same as other graduate programs at FTU. It will consist of 45 hours of academic work and require an optional thesis and a written final examination.

Dutton said that since much of the program is still being developed he could only conjecture at the beginning enrollment the program.

He said he thought it might consist of 20-30 students the first year, growing to about 50 students in four or five years.

Dr. Charles Lindahl, associate professor, said he thought that the program would start with about 10 students and expand to about 65 students in five years.

The program was officially approved by the Board of Regents last month and could possibly start this summer with one or two courses. Dutton said that the real program however will begin in the fall.

Lindahl said the program would concentrate on the applied, rather than the theoretical, aspects of computer technology.

The demand for such a program came from employees of Martin-Marietta Corp., the Naval Training Center Base and from undergraduate students at FTU, said Lindahl.

Although the core of the worthy show will be the half-hour news program "Symposia" prepared by the Pegasus News Network, Smith has indicated that he is "looking for anything that will be interesting to watch, within legal limitations" to fill the remaining hour and a half.

Ideas or suggestions may be left in Smith's envelope tacked to the TV studio door. Members will be picked up Monday and Tuesday evenings. Smith will also be in the studio Thursday and Fridays.

Weekly broadcasts are aired Thursday at 11 a.m. and may be viewed from monitors in the Library and Administration Building lobbies and the VC lounge.

University Television Wants Creative Help

Do you feel creative, imaginative or innovative? Do you have a script, a film or just an idea you'd like to see on television? If so, then maybe University Television is looking for you. University Television, the student-oriented, campus television network is in search of program material for the two hour Thursday broadcasts which debut this week.

"The emphasis is on the student" said Lee Ward, the station's new advisor. "We need writers, speakers, people to shoot film, do research, people who can type a continuity log or work on publicity. Experience is preferred but not necessary."

Organizing the project is station manager Dave Smith. In addition to being an FTU student, Smith is also weekend assistant at Channel 9.

Tanzi Leaves FTU To Work With BOR

FTU's coordinator for graduate affairs will spend the next two years working for the Board of Regents.

Dr. Lawrence A. Tanzi will begin a two year leave of absence from FTU on June 15, 1973. He will work in the chancellor's office of the Tallahassee directing director of humanities and fine arts. His job will consist of reviewing graduate and undergraduate programs for the state university system.

Tanzi is scheduled to return to FTU August 30, 1975.

THE STUDENT Advisory Judicial Board is currently working on an amendment to the Student Government Constitution.

This amendment would provide a higher judicial board for the purpose of insuring continuity within the judicial system. In addition, the board has been attempting to obtain more cases, more student input and a better student understanding of the board.

If passed, the amendment would allow the resulting "Judicial Council" to regulate legislation in each of the judicial boards. The Student Advisory Judicial Board would also have veto power over sections of the amendment except the academic one, which the Board will work on next.

One of the major problems in organizing the new judicial system lies in correctly wording of the amendment, so that individuals' rights are protected, yet in a diction simple enough so that future board members will not misinterpret the amendment.

TIDE BOARD handles general university violations which do not come under the jurisdiction of any of the other four boards. These other boards are the Women's Residence Association Judicial Board, Men's Residence Association Judicial Board, Interfraternity Council Judicial Board and Panhellenic Council Judicial Board.

If a student elects to have his case presented before a board, his dean decides which board will hear the case.

Parliamentarian's administrative hearings and the judicial board's hearings are completely separate. All hearings are closed unless the student asks that he be spread to the public.

The judicial system is structured so that many cases do not reach boards where student input is available, according to Jerry Frey, chairman of the board.

Frey explained that often the dean's administrative hearing granted the student the rights in student acceptance of the punishment suggested. Rarely, however, was the dean, out of fear and deference to the dean's power. If the student accepts this punishment, the case will not reach a board and the corresponding student would not be heard.

ANOTHER FACTOR in students' acceptance of punishment suggested by the dean is that the dean's action restates one's rights to a judicial board hearing. After the dean has punished, according to Frey, students do not request even the suggested punishment, according to Frey.

He explained that although the student's rights to appeal to a board are expressed in the administrative hearing, this explanation is sometimes too ruchy for complete understanding.

For this reason, Frey noted, the board does not handle enough cases. This year he guessed that the board may have handled three or four cases. Given the student input and publicity for the board would result in more cases, he said.

The judicial system, however, who are in good standing, may contact 60 and have their case heard and be interviewed.

Frey said he attempts to select the most representative group, including fraternity or sorority members, all students, liberals and conservatives, males and females.

Cases generally last from one-half hour to four hours. The average case, according to Frey, lasts one and one-half hours.

Hospital Aids FTU Studies

An agreement between FTU and Winter Park Memorial Hospital was reached March 18, establishing a research and academic relationship whereby members of FTU's faculty and the hospital's medical staff can join together in research projects jointly sponsored by the two institutions.

As stated in the agreement, the joint effort is based upon the fact that "both institutions share common goals of education, health and scientific research, and community service."

Dr. Leslie Sills Jr., dean of graduate studies and research, termed the agreement "a major step in cooperation to the benefit of both."

Ellis pointed out that although the agreement establishes the relationship and opens the door for joint efforts, any specific research or training program must be negotiated and then implemented as an addendum to the overall agreement. Any request for a grant must be accepted by a specific project idea and not just a general idea.

The agreement also includes a provision stating that research of both institutions available to the members of the approved project. This is perhaps the most valuable portion of the agreement because both institutions have facilities which the other does not, Ellis said.

Another provision in the agreement specifies that FTU will cover the indirect costs for the research projects.
Hand Receives Standing Ovation

By Mike Crites

Classical guitarist Frederic Hand performed in the Village Center Assembly Room Monday night. The talented artist from New York presented many different styles in the two-hour program.

The first selection of the evening featured the work of two English impresarios of the 17th century. Hand started with John Dowland's "Minstrel Winter's Jump" and blended it with two songs by Robert Johnson, "As I Went to Washington" and "Two Almans." He brought the journey through the British countryside to a close with "My Lady Hannah Potts" by England's most famous hit player, John Dowland.

Hand performed a piece by Jean-Baptiste Besard that begins with a French dance movement in 2/2 time, "Brinale," and continues in a quicker dance movement on the same theme. The Besard song concludes with a short song of the court and a section titled "Voile."

The recording star is also a master of the vihuela, a Spanish equivalent of the lute, which was played throughout the rest of Europe during the 16th and 17th centuries. Hand presented "Four Paynays" by Louis Mikeir and "Pavane and Canario" by Caspar Smith, both of which were written for the vihuela. Milan published one of the first books of songs for a single voice with accompaniment in 1536.

"Improvisations on Besard's Melodies" gave the audience the first taste of Hand's composing ability. He began with the basic themes and created a unique, personal rendition of the songs "Michaelus," "Deamer Rigby" and "Yesterday." He explained the Besard often used the repeated dance form of the Saraceno, "Panacagia."

This is a part of the program which because it gives me a chance to improvise," Hand said.

Hand explored the Brazilian neo-classicism of "Prehule and Two Studies," a 20th century piece, Luis Bonfa's "Black Dragon," and was a reading version of music by Hand in the bossa nova style. "Maurice Ravel is one of the few composers that worked with the 20th century stock dance, the pavane. His most famous composition in this form is "Pavane for a Dead Infant," which was written for piano. Hand chose to do the guitar composition by Ravel, "Pavane for a Dead Princess." The young guitarist did a masterful job in relating 16th century and Spanish forms throughout in concert.

Hand played the "Adagio for Ralph Vaughan Williams," the English composer who died in 1958. The piece reflected Williams' love for English folk music. Hand finished the program with the same style he began with earlier in the evening, "A Dance for John Dowland. Hand received a standing ovation and showed his gratitude with an encore.

Male Vs. Female

Debated By Panel

"What is masculine and feminine today?" was the topic discussed in Tuesday's first session of the symposium on the roles of women in society.

Tuesday's panel moderator was Dr. Enny Freeman, psychologist with the Orlando Center for Psychological Services and FUE adjudged psychology professor.

The next session will be held Tuesday, in the Multi Purpose Room.

MEMORABLE performances, snappy dialogue received by hilarious patronisms, catchy tunes and witty footnotes, combine to make the theatre department's production of "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" a success.

The Lessaris and Burrows musical comedy, which opened Wednesday and continues tonight and tomorrow, is the story of J. Pierpont Finch, an aspiring young window washer, who climbs the corporate ladder with effortless speed.

Under the direction of Frances Johnson, the cast sings and dances its way through the business world of World Wide Dктив Corp. with a comic zest that is infectious.

The outstanding performances in the show are almost as numerous as the advertising managers fired from the company. Even the bit parts sparkle with witty lines and comic expressions.

MISS NOTABLE among the many are: Vince Santa as Finch; Nora Fussell as Rosemary; Michael Brunson as Bud Frump; Larry Turner as J. B. Biggley; Cheryl Caroncino as Betty LaRue; Carolyn Stallings as Miss Jones, and Jose Rodrigues as Wally Womper.

Miss Fussell plays Rosemary, the secretary in love with Finch, as a sweet, romantic idealist with visions of a vine-covered cottage life in New Rochelle: "Happy to keep his dinner warm. (Hello, dear—I'm pregnant! What's new downtown?)..."

Her singing voice is strong and true and harmonizes well with Santa in his love song, "Rosemary." The music for "How to Succeed" is provided by Jerry Beston, Gayle Prince and Don Simpson under the direction of Richard Schloenberg. For the most part, the singers have strong enough voices so that the songs are not lost under the musical accompaniment, although at times some notes do get lost.

The songs themselves are comic, both in their content and presentation, as in the men's quartet song of "They Believe in You," the secretaries' "Allied Inns" chorus in "Cinderella Darlin'" and the mandolin exaggeration of Finch's and Biggley's "Heart of Gold" which very well be the funniest song of the play. "Cinderella Darlin'" while it is comic and well-harmonized, nevertheless loses some of its effectiveness due to the introduction of a dream sequence dancer who detracts from the song's rendering.

Susie O'Hara, who performs some simple ballet routines while the secretaries are trying to convince Rosemary she should marry Finch, is too stiff and wobbly to lend the necessary grace to her dance. Looking at her dainty ankles, one fears she may not make it through the entire number, but fortunately, pays less attention to her activity on the other side of the stage.

Although the show is a long one, time goes by swiftly, and the end comes perhaps to suddenly and simply than one would wish. From the climax of Finch's advertising campaign disaster, the play tumbles as quickly to a resolution as Frump falls from his rung on the corporate ladder to the lowly position of window washer. Miss Fussell stands even higher with her lovely Rosemary.

Company life goes on as Biggley orders his employes back to work and the audience concludes its applause for a successful production.

Curtain time today and tomorrow for "How to Succeed" will be 8:30 p.m. in the university theatre. Reservations may be made by calling the box office, 203. Admission is free to members of the FTU community. General admission $1 for non-FTU students.

Judge Bean Saga

"As It Should Be"

By Fran Elliott

In the West, around the turn of the century, there was indeed an interesting, woolly character by the name of Judge Roy Bean. As stated in the prologue of the film entitled "Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," his story is told, "not the way it was, but the way it should have been."

In truth, the movie is a bloody farce depicting degraded men and women living with dirt and death always near. And yet, through the artistry of John Huston’s directing and Paul Newman’s acting, the film is extremely funny.

Huston’s touch of genius is evident in many artistic forms, such as the coloration of the film, the vivid characters, the pacing of the dialogue and the overall effect which gives the audience a feeling of "textured time."

Similar to "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," there is a touch of tender beauty in a scene showing Bean, his beautiful young woman and their best friend (a bear) eating, playing and swaying while on a picnic. It even includes a melodic tune at that point, which reminds one of the "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head" portion of "Butch Cassidy."

Huston himself plays the part of the old man of nature who literally dumps the huge black bear in Bean’s lap.

An excellent and unusual role is played by Anthony Perkins as the Bible-spouting Reverend Mr. LaSalle, who butts the 1.5 bodies of Bean’s early victims. The group of 13 filthy so-and-sos had "done Bean wrong" so he just blasted away, and it was on that spot that he builds a booming town named after his lovely unborn sonId Lib Langtree (played briefly later in the show by Ava Gardner).

There are other very good performances turned in by Stacey Keach as the "original" loud haggard Athena Ado Bobo, and Tah Hunter as a two-bit young robber promptly hanged by the Judge.

Other than Paul Newman’s Griffith vocal characterization as the Judge who declares, "There’s gonna be peace and I don’t care who I have to kill to get it," the best role is played by Bruno Betta as Watch Bear. Adorable and loyal, Watch Bear is undoubtedly as human as the next fellow - willing to die to protect his best friend, Bean. And he does just that.

ONE OF THE WORLD’S most renowned orchestras, the Philadelphia Orchestra, presented in Orlando an evening of music that will be remembered as a highlight of the current concert season. At the Municipal Auditorium on March 29 an orchestra that is responsible for many quality recordings performed under the direction of Eugene Ormandy.

The Philadelphia Orchestra has been conducted by Ormandy for the past 37 years. The Hungarian-born conductor came to the United States in 1921 as a solo violinist. He conducted the Philadelphia Orchestra at Rubin Hood Dell in Philadelphia’s Fairmont Park for three concerts during the summer of 1930. After five years as music director of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra he became the music director and conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra in 1936. At 73, he has a longer career with a single orchestra than any other living conductor.

Bach’s "Toccata, Adagio and Fugue in C Major," the first selection of the concert, has the unique Dparallele form, which foreshadows the birth of the modern atonality. ORMANDY transcribed the Bach piece for orchestra, and began the second movement, Adagio, with an oboe and then an orchestra that in one of the most profound statements in music, was not heard until the very end, and is followed by a short transitional passage that restates C major in the effort of creating a new sonata form. This shape the fugue in a typically logical structure on the eight-note motif.

The systematic style of Bach has some very much, except for the "Toccata and Fugue in D Minor" which I think is more interesting than the "C Major" piece. Though I admire the precision of Bach, I am moved by the "D Minor" piece more than anything else.

The Fourth Symphony was the last that Brahms wrote. He had cherished the heritage of his father’s generation of composers, the work of Beethoven. The forms of Romantic music were developed by Brahms through his original rhythmic ability. "The Fourth Symphony" captures the melancholy expiration of Romanticism, artistic sensitively yielding to emotionalism.

The PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA performed Claude Debussy’s innovative masterpiece, "Prélude à l’Après-midi d’un Faune," with virtuoso Murray W. Panitz accomplishing the difficult passages.

Debussy’s art was intended to be luscious. "Afternoon of a Faun" was written for piano. At first listening, the result was rejection by the audience, but subsequently the piece received standing ovations around the world.

"It is the general impression of the audience," Denby wrote, "that in following it more closely the music would pull like a cab horse running for the Grand Prix against a thoroughbred." He went on to say that Debussy’s music is a distain for science. It is without respect for good breeding."

ORMANDY’s direction of "Prélude à l’Après-midi d’un Faune" was unforgetable. The recreation of the faun, his dancing habits and his prominence were musically placed before the audience in splendid scope.

Debussy’s radical compositions were often denounced as the work of a man with a nervous affliction. Some music critics complained that his music was innocent of melody and deficient in rhythm.

When people began to understand his music, the revelations were stunning. Behind the curtains of his life, the art which Debussy created was a peculiarly own. "DAPHNIS and CHLOE Suite No. 2" by Maurice Ravel was a beautiful piece in the final position of the concert. Ravel composed the score for this ballet with the incredible leaps of Nijinsky fresh in his mind. Sergei Diaghilev’s Ballet Russe’s arrival in Paris was an important influence on many French composers. "DAPHNIS and CHLOE," premiered one week after "L’Après-midi," and was overshadowed by the controversy over Debussy’s work. "Suite No. 2" reflected the introduction Ravel felt when he witnessed the dazzling enthusiasm of the Russian Ballet.

Gary Gaffman will be featured on piano with the Florida Symphony Orchestra on April 19. An intriguing program is planned: Prokofiev’s "Classical Symphony," Tchaikovsky’s "Piano Concerto No. 3," and Brahms’ "Piano Concerto No. 1."

An FTU graduate, now attending Duke University Medical School, has been named to receive one of six $1,000 national scholarships awarded annually by Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Ralph L. Bundy was chosen for the award on the basis of his record at FTU, where he graduated magna cum laude last June.

Dean of Men Paul McQuilkin noted that the awarding of the graduate scholarship to Bundy is the first time a national fraternity has honored an FTU student.

STUDENT TEACHING

All students planning to participate in the College of Education senior year student teaching fall quarter, 1973, must submit their application prior to April 13 to the professional laboratory office, CB 326. Applications are available in the "Guidelines for Junior Year Student Teaching Handbook."
FTU Plays Riddle Game With Waste, Roses, Gator

By Randy Harrison

WHAT IS found on the FTU campus, has a hundred thousand gallons of liquid waste, experimental rooms, a smiling crew of nine and an alligator that is fond of bread?

If, in your infinite wisdom you answered, "Our very own prize-winning sewage treatment plant," you may go to the head of the class. If you also knew the plant was a "completely natural process involving no chemicals" then you are a rare scholar indeed.

Most of us do not even begin to think of what happens when we pull the little handle, but for nine very dedicated men the process involved in waste treatment is a very serious business.

FTU TREATMENT plant, located on a distant, secluded corner of the campus, should actually be a point of pride for everyone involved with the university. In these days of rising concern over environmental problems, the FTU treatment plant actually improves the ecological picture.

Headed by the energetic Daniel S. Abbott, the plant is a constant pleasure winner on both the state and national scene. Abbott explained that the FTU plant has been named "Outstanding in its field" in the Florida Pollution Control Association's Environmental Awards. He said the plant averages between 94 and 97 per cent pollutant removal and that most plants have made to both plant's consistent high performance. Basically, the system accelerates natural bacterial breakdown by forcing large quantities of air into the raw sewage. This evenly spaced, repeated process produces final products that would bring a smile to even the most determined environmentalist: fertilizer and pure, clean water.

"If CURSE Al just came out of the woods," said Penland, laughing. "He's real friendly and he goes crazy over bread," he added. As Penland talked about him, Al kept his six-foot form submerged to eyeball level in the fish filled waters of the settling pond.

The pond is the last stop for the treated, purified water before it is pumped into a sprinkler system that regularly waters a desolate section of the campus, completing the back to nature process.

The plant, operating at less than half its potential is bound for better things, according to Dan Abbott. His goals are a string of first prizes in pollution control awards and still greater efficiency. "I guess because we're second we'll have to try harder," Abbott said.

Abbott is quick to give credit for the plant's consistent high performance to his staff. He points with pride to the contributions that he and his assistants have made to both plant efficiency and appearance by dint of voluntary extra hours of hard work and ingenuity.

Symposium Theme
To Be: "Mystic"

Mythicism and Symbolism in Art as a Function of History: the main theme of an art symposium beginning Sunday at Loch Haven Art Center.

The symposium, coordinated by four faculty members, will be held in two locations: Orlando's Loch Haven Art Center and at the University of Central Florida at PTO on Monday at 10 a.m.

Discussing the exhibit is Plato Deseree being joined in the program by Dr. Walter Gaudnek, Johana Eyeloyd and Steve Lort. Lois said the upcoming symposium is part of a series of forums, exhibitions, marathons and publications jointly entitled, "The Holy Art, 1970-74.

He further explained, "Archetypes play an enormous role in art. Archetypes are similar to religions, a philosophy that is inherited. They, in part, cause us to structure our culture as we do."

A portion of the symposium will include a report of worldwide submissions from artists, judges, art historians, writers and collectors who have been invited to send opinions and for abstracts for a conference. Artists are being accepted in English, French and German.

The sponsors of Gaudnek, Eytoll and Lort presented the program symposium during last spring's 25th Anniversary of the U.S. Art Fair last year. The project received national acclaim in the form of a CBS 30-minute special.

In addition, the symposium are asked to contact Lois at ext. 3076 for further details. The public is invited to both phases of the symposium. Residents of Britain Adjuts Tuition Fees

Five different study levels are now being offered to American students and teachers who wish to study English in Britain. In addition, a new British educational office that has been set up for the exclusive purpose of assisting American students and teachers in the area of English as a second language. Another program is available for teachers doing special research or independent study. A fourth study level is also available for students wishing to study at a campus of another British University or college. Other services available include housing, round-trip airfare, books, and insurance.

Students who wish to study as a regular student at a campus of an American University in Great Britain must be at least 18 years of age. Students may now study as a study in Britain, or independent study. A fourth British Tourist is now accepting applications. The program by Dr. Walter Gaudnek Eyf au ne .

Supervision from various savings and loan associations throughout Florida will attend a three-day seminar on consumer credit and financial relations in the ETFU Board of Regents Conference Room Wednesday afternoon.

The purpose of the seminar is to enhance the ability of the individual to supervise and manage more effectively by fostering an understanding of communications as it relates to interpersonal behavior. Instruction and discussion will be conducted in the areas of human relations, communication, leadership, decision making, and management by objective.
Order Of Red, Red Rose

By Mark Weintz

YOU MAY have heard of the Rosicrucians, The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, and even the hidden order of Mystrah Submarinion—but have you ever heard of The Ancient and Beneficent Order of the Red, Red Rose? If you have not heard of the latter organization it may surprise you to learn that said order recently held a conclave which involved a number of FTU faculty, staff and administration.

The Ancient and Beneficent Order of the Red, Red Rose is not to be confused with any of the above mystical orders or with the Red Rose, which was the organization of Secret Chiefs of the upper and inner circle of the Great White Brotherhood (a hidden assembly of powerful sages).

No exact information is really available concerning the Red, Red Rose cabal other than what the brethren of the Order were willing to divulge at their conclave which convened at the Ramada Inn. Books make no mention of the Red, Red Rose Order, and up until the recent assembly it is said that no outsider has ever entered the sanctum sanctorum of the Order.

The CEREMONIES of the conclave began in the afternoon under the sign of Aries (The House of Mars—a fiery, red, masculine and cardinal sign). The Red, Red Rose Order is an annual event and this year, like every other year, the ceremonies commenced out of doors.

When all the neophytes (new members, initiates) had arrived, they were filed outside and two at a time taken into a small, candle-lit room where they signed a pact with the Grand Old Man. The Grand Old Man is the supreme officiant of the Red, Red Rose.

Two other officials also signed in the Order of the Red, Red Rose: the Lord High Mokus and the Grand High Scribe. The Grand High Scribe explained that the purpose of the conclave was to provide a contribution to the FTU scholarship fund. He said each annual meeting usually produces a contribution of $100.00. At this year's meeting 62 neophytes were initiated into this organization and $100.00 was contributed for a contribution to the scholarship fund.

The Order of the Red, Red Rose is not wholly a FTU organization and membership is open to any person active in the educational profession. Valencia Community College and Seminole Junior College were represented at the recent conclave.

While the ceremonies were in progress a few of the brethren of the Rose commented on the organization.

SOME OF the brethren of the order seemed uncertain of the back ground of the fraternal order but willingly gave directions to someone who could give directions to someone who would comment on the organization. This reluctance is probably due to the fact that each of the brethren is required to take a pledge of secrecy concerning certain aspects and riots of the Order; from concerning this region anon.

One anonymous FTU professor described the Ancient Order as the equivalent of a "faculty men's club: a social function." He also said, "It is a FTU tradition and supposedly a nationwide thing."

Some of the order comments were, "This is my first year out of the neophyte stage—you picked the wrong guy," and "I don't have any particular comments." OTHER AND more inspired brethren offered deeper insight into the order. "It's a good opportunity for educators to get together and have a good time and it also gives new people a chance to get acquainted," said one of the brethren.

Another brother said his only comment was that the wife of each teacher involved in the Order should be invited to come out and participate in the celebration of the rose. One eminent brother emphasized the scholarship aspect of the group.

While the aforementioned brethren were being interviewed, the neophytes were parading around partaking in psalmody and singing. "We signed to join the Red, Red Rose and to see the Grand Old Man," said "Glory, glory! I'm unworthy to see the Grand Old Man." In addition to the chorus some pretty treby choreography was initiated.

Holds ‘Secret’ Initiation Rites

High Scribe explained that the appearance of the Grand Old Man in the ‘revelation of the evening’ is the OUTSIDE ceremony that had gone on for over an hour and then the group of neophytes was led into the inner sanctum of the Ramada Room, whereupon the double wooden doors were closed behind them. The secret part of the ceremonies had begun.

All of the neophytes sat in the center of the room and the brethren sat at tables surrounding them, save for a single aisle. The purpose of this arrangement allowed the brethren to easily participate in and view the rites of initiation. The Lord High Mokum and the Grand High Scribe are the main masters of rituals, but many of the brethren get a chance to participate in their continuation.

The purpose of the long and solemn rites that are held behind closed doors is to test the worthiness of each neophyte. At one moment in the ceremony, one of the neophytes is subject to being dipped out and commanded to help to some enigmatic pool. This is termed the search for an uncle by the brethren who have already proved their adherence at such feats.

The INTERIOR ceremony also included dinner. Chicken, an sacrament of the Order, was served according to tradition. The chicken feathers in legs, breasts, and thighs and the neophytes also ate pieces of chicken.

By the time dinner was completed, the Ramada Room had been transformed into a battlefield. Certain parts of the rites and the metaphysical nature of these, for example, at one point all of the neophytes made a collective passage from west to east for the Grand Old Man.

During the disenchantedment of the initiates, the walls of the room echoed numerous oaths, chants and hallowed words but the thoughts of neophytes were not one of the brethren inevitably declare, “No worry.”

The meaning of this word is not completely understood in relation to the ceremonies but it often brings forth great mirth from the brethren.

After many varied and uniquely similar rituals of hocus pocus, the Grand Old Man did manifest his presence to the bewildered neophytes. Each neophyte was then an official brother and went home a little lighter.

Crime of violence listed in Gurney's bill are arson, murder, kidnapping, 'serious robberies and burglaries' and air piracy. A person arrested within 48 hours of commission of a violent crime would be taken to a local medical facility to determine if a hard drug was in his body when the crime was committed.

Drug rehabilitation and drug education centers have been established nationwide, but, according to Gurney, as commendable as these centers are, they have not succeeded in curbing drug traffic.

Current laws have been ineffectual in preventing the flow of drugs, Gurney said, adding his bill was designed to deter drug traffic. "The problem with the present laws is too many law violators are freed after apprehension by a plea of guilty to a lesser crime," he said. Gurney's program would not allow such action.

The mandatory life sentence has a twofold purpose, according to Gurney. It will remove the pusher from the streets and would serve as a deterrent to potential pushers.

Gurney Makes Move For New Drug Bill

Sen. Edward J. Gurney has proposed a bill in Congress to increase criminal penalties both for distribution of hard drugs and for the commission of violent crimes while under the influence of hard drugs.

The bill, modeled on a proposal in New York, Rockefeller of New York, prescribes the following penalties: Distribution of marijuana, amphetamines and hard drugs such as heroin would result in life imprisonment for persons 16 years of age or older.

For those 18 or older, the life sentence could not be suspended or probated. For those 16 through 18 years old, parole would be obtainable after 15 years of the original life sentence had been served.

FTU Debate Team Captures Spring Hill Tournament

FTU’s debate team won five of the 13 tournaments they entered during the 1972-73 season. Under the coaching of Jeff Butler, the debaters captured 51 trophies and finished in the top eight teams in four tournaments.

During the first weekend of March, FTU won the Axa Bank Debate Tournament in Mobile, Ala. The debaters finished the season with a victory over a field which included the University of Pittsburgh, the University of Florida, Florida State University, the University of Florida, Louisiana State University, Spring Hill College and Xavier University.

The cross-examination method of debate, a seldom used form in college matches, was the basis of the Spring Hill tourney. It was the only "cross-out" meet of the year for FTU. The team of Geoff Hiniger and Alan Rainey defeated the University of South Alabama and the chancellor of Honda University and FTU team, Jack Higley and Larry Cook, advanced as far as the semifinals.

FTU’s communications department staged the 1973 State Junior College Debate Tournament last week. Broward County College triumphed over Miami-Dade Junior College in the final match. All the activities were supervised by graduate students and faculty members of FTU.

The current debate squad is so strong that no extensive recruiting programs are being conducted for the 1973-74 season. All 10 varsity debaters will be returning to compete next year.

Unionization Topic Of Migrant Series

By Bill Hidden

Do all migrant workers want a strong union behind them? Can unions actually solve most of the problems the migrant workers face today?

These questions were considered Monday by a small gathering in the Multi Purpose Room as an informal talk and discussion was held on the problems of the migrant workers in Florida and around the country.

The recent slavery issue in one Florida campus has brought quite a bit of nationwide public attention to the migrant workers and their problems. At FTU, a three-period series on the migrant worker opened Monday. Dr. Marshall Berry, president of New College, spoke Thursday on unionization of migrant workers.

Jim Osborn and Al French, of Management Research Organization, were the guest speakers in the opening of the series Monday.

Osborn told the audience he believed "migrant workers generally receive very good wages. Their major problems are housing and a large percentage of unemployment. First, unionization or organizing may not cure all their problems."

"The workers' mistrust of unions has prevented strong union support in most types of migrant labor," said Osborn. "This is due to a strong stand many unions have taken regarding union policy. Sometimes going as far as having migrant workers fired. Many workers also felt that actual control of the unions was out of their hands and they had little say in their own lives."

At French backed those statements, saying, "In Florida, on the average, the migrant worker earns $2.21 an hour. Only California ranks higher. As far as the citrus and other fruit industries go, Florida ranks the highest in the country."

Concerning unions and organizing of migrant workers, French used the example of the migrant worker in the sugar industry. Although at one time 65 per cent of the workers were against joining a union, the trend is shifting gradually in the other direction.

"The workers' mistrust of unions has prevented strong union support in most types of migrant labor," said Osborn. "This is due to a strong stand many unions have taken regarding union policy. Sometimes going as far as having migrant workers fired. Many workers also felt that actual control of the unions was out of their hands and they had little say in their own lives."

The migrant worker series concludes this Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. with a debate in CB 115. There is no charge and the public is invited.

Office Of Campus Ministry Expands Services, Staff Size

The FTU Office of Campus Ministry has expanded its office and services for the spring quarter. The office’s services are open to all of the FTU community.

The Office of Campus Ministry is an interdenominational effort to provide religious presence and spiritual dimension within the university community.

The major departments are participating initially — each working with its own denomination and religious tradition but making their services available to any person who might be interested in or in need of their particular expertise.

These services will include pastoral counseling, spiritual direction, prayer groups, worship services, community involvement programs, discussion groups, fellowships, gatherings, lectures or contemporary moral questions.

The clergy who are participating and staffing the Campus Ministry offices are the Rev. Brad Dimmick — Methodist; the Rev. Stony Shaw — Baptist; Rabbi Roshchik Adlin — Jewish; the Rev. Pat O'Neil, the Rev. Vin Hargis, the Rev. Dorothy Dawes — Roman Catholic; the Rev. Jim Allen — Episcopalian, and the Rev. Louis Bixler — Lutheran.

The Office of Campus Ministry is located in VC 236 and the campus ministers may be contacted there. Any of the clergy may be contacted through the clergyman or volunteer present in the office at any given time.

The office is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

REAL ESTATE COURSES

Florida’s colleges and universities are second only to California in the number and diversity of real estate programs offered.

Today, 20 Florida institutions offer real estate courses for college credit. Three years ago only ten schools offered such courses.

WANELESIA PRaised

FTU professor Martin P. Wanelesia was recently cited for outstanding engineering achievements by the Florida Chapter of the Florida Engineering Society.

Wanelesia was noted for significant accomplishments relating to the 1973 engineers week theme, "A better environment through technology."

He was also praised for efforts on the restoration of Lake Eola in downtown Orlando.

If You Were Born Today:

You will fall into a great deal of money today. It will not be yours and you will be caught with it. You will be found guilty of robbing the bookstore of its entire week's profit. (S3.17. Don't take my word for it, ask Max.) You will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law and will be sent to the University of Florida for a quarter as punishment!

Aries: Your mind is slowly shrinking. By July you will be no smarter than your English prof, and by August anybody on the physical ed. faculty will be able to outthink you. It's because you're petting strange dogs again.

Taurus: You were certainly born under your sign, friend; everyone quickly says you're full of bull.

Gemini: You are witty, charming, dashing, handsome, clever and humble.

Cancer: Lose ugly fat while you eat the foods you love!

Leo: Do not be distressed by the words of your so-called friends. That fact is they are not your friends at all. In fact you don't have any, so there is no reason to be distressed. After all, who needs 'em? They only want to borrow money and things all the time. Good riddance. . . . I will sell you a nice clean razor blade, however, if you are not convinced.

Virgo: Stop pretending to be something you're not, like a high school graduate.

Libra: All your immediate relatives are hastily writing you out of their wills. They won't use you to generate power, however; if they get their way, you will be used to drain power just as soon as the death penalty is reinstated.

Scorpio: You fink! The deal was patterned for it, ask Max.) You were certainly born in Paris either. Dag nab it! the foods you love! is no reason to be distressed. And I told you to never meet Paris either.

Sagittarius: Just remember, like friends. That fact is they are will sell you a nice clean razor blade, however, if you are not convinced.

Capricorn: Like the Colorado River, you cut deep and move quickly. Take a lesson from the Colorado. Somebody is going to dam you up pretty soon and it'll be all over. They won't use you to generate power, however; if they get their way, you will be used to drain power just as soon as the death penalty is reinstated.

See Europe via Summer Jobs

For any student planning a trip to Europe, a temporary paying job could be the answer to the lower purchasing power of the U.S. dollar. Temporary student jobs are available to any student willing to work in order to see Europe.

The Student Overseas Services (SOS), a Luxembourg student helping students for 15 years, will obtain a job, work permit, visa and any other necessary paperwork required for a college student who applies early. SOS also provides a job orientation in Europe so the student goes to work.

hotel or restaurant job which provides wages plus free room and board will pay for the youth fare air ticket and provide leftover cash for traveling around Europe.

Most jobs are available in Austria, Switzerland, France and Germany in resorts, hotels, restaurants and on farms. Jobs are also available in factories, offices and shops.

Standard wages are paid; room and board are arranged in advance and are provided free of charge with most jobs.

The jobs are given on a first come, first serve basis.

Students may obtain application forms, job lists and descriptions and the SOS handbook on earning a trip to Europe by sending their names, addresses, educational institutions and $1 (for addressing, handling and postage) to EURENOUS, Student Overseas Services, 22 Ave de la Liberté, Luxembourg, Luxembourg, Europe, or SOS, P.O. Box 5173, Santa Barbara, Calif. 93109.

At least here at the University of South Florida professors already tortured enough to thank their lucky stars and uncounted professors should be worried. Dr. Carl Rigs, vice president for academic affairs, told college deans and department chairs they must accept a harder, more realistic line when granting tenure to faculty members. Tenured professors are beginning to worry over a new teacher evaluation program approved by the Florida Board of Regents which will evaluate all professors, tenured or not, most likely with equal mercy—or lack of it.

Macon, Georgia....

Students here at Wesleyan College have the opportunity to attend a new and increasingly unique course entitled "Aeroponics Act," translated that means "Kite and Zeppelin Making."

The course concentrates exactly on what is implied in its title; students spend class time making and flying kites. The largest kite yet built by the students measures 12 by 15 feet and is known about the campus as "The Whale."

Pensacola...

Students here at the University of West Florida are being given a chance to nominate the professor of the year among all full-time faculty members at the university. Each student is allowed one nomination and the selected teachers will receive a pat on the back—and a $600 prize from the Distinguished Teaching Award Committee.

Fairbanks, Alaska...

It appears that our food service is not alone in its troubles to serve students a variety of foods and still keep costs down. Food service at the University of Alaska has been plagued by a fixed budget and financially skyrockets their busy start and urgently looking for alternatives to economize wherever possible. And of course, University of Alaska students are the ones who will have to pay these hikes in pies and pasties. FTU's food service faces the same problems and unfortunately, the same alternatives.
President Richard Nixon has announced a total of $424 million in federal funds will be available this summer for youth programs. This is a 20 percent increase over last year.

In a special released March 31, Mr. Nixon indicated the rapid expansion of the nation’s economic opportunities for young persons in the summer.

Last year, however, the unemployment rate for youth dropped by 1.8 percent, even though the youth labor force increased by 2.1 million persons. One important element in the employment picture—especially aimed toward the disadvantaged youth in the central cities whose unemployment rate is “too high”—is that funding from federal programs will be sufficient to support 778,000 job opportunities for young persons. Total federal funding available for this effort will be $554 million, slightly less than last year but more than the average of previous years.

Three different sources are available to states and local communities providing such jobs:

- The Employment Emergency Assistance Act. Under a continuing resolution passed by Congress, states may receive $1.50 million for the current fiscal year is available for this program. The President estimates that the states and local communities will be able to use some $800 million of it for summer youth jobs.
- Direct Federal Employment. $50.4 million is directly available to the federal government for hiring young persons through ongoing federal programs. The Federal-State Employment Service should provide a total of 120,000 jobs for young Americans through its Youth Summer Placement Program.
- Youth Conservation Corps. $35 million is available for summer job programs.

President Nixon said he was happy to report this government commitment to summer jobs is being matched by significant efforts in the private sector.

“For example,” he said, “the National Alliance of Businessmen plans to hire 175,000 young persons in 126 major metropolitan areas.”

Catching all youth in the summer program, recreational opportunities for those under 14 years old will be available through federally funded recreation programs operated by cities, colleges and universities. These programs are targeted to the needs of disadvantaged youth providing them with wholesome recreation, sporting instruction and exposure to local cultural institutions.

Other summer programs will provide transportation services for the employment and recreational opportunities. Also, the summer nutrition program will feed nearly 2 million needy young Americans 128 million meals.

CONFIDENCE, maturity, and a few extra pounds apparently are the key ingredients that have turned Mike Ferrell into the hitting sensation of the first half of FTU's first varsity baseball season. The 22-year-old physical education major had been a good player for two years at Santa Paula Junior College and one year at Rollins. His average usually wound up around the .300 mark, but only after a customary late-season surge which would pull it out of the mediocre category.

Thus, there was no obvious explanation for the torrid start he got off to which has seen him hit .400 about .6, 1973.

"I like to lead off," stated the sandy-haired, left-handed batter. "You usually get to see better pitchers-the pitchers don't expect the lead-off hitter to be one of the best hitters. Also, I get a chance to steal if I do get on base."

Ferrell doesn't feel batting down in the order, often with men on base, adds undue pressure. But he does feel more comfortable in the top spot. "And I get more ups that way, too," he added.

WHILE there seems to be no question about what he can do with the bat, his fielding in the main has been the concern. This is the only FTU's first year as a second-sacker and his inexperience has shown at times. "I know I need a lot of work at second," he admitted, "but I consider it a challenge. I feel I may have hurt the team out there for a while but, we don't have a lot of depth so we have to play people out of position."

The outfieldsman wants to learn the position and Coach Doug McCorkle emphasizes that he can. "Second-base is his position," said McCorkle. "As far as his hitting goes...I'm sure he could make it to Class AAA. He's not far enough along to play at second. I know he has the ability."

Ferrell will definitely be the hardest one to replace next year, the coach pointed out.

Amazingly, the team's top hitter does not even have a scholarship to play this season. "He sat out last year, his first at FTU, and almost didn't play this year."

"I'm glad I didn't give it up," though, he said. "Now I'd like a chance to play pro ball if I could."

The numbers don't mean too much, but now that it's past the halfway point of the season the scouts will start to take notice of him.

REGARDLESS of anything else, Mike has already exceeded his goals set at the season's start. "I figured if I got 160 hits this year, I should get 50 hits (a .333 average) but I'm 40 for 88, a .458 average."

In Winning Federation National, Rouse's 'Best Ever' Takes 5th

WINNING a fifth-place trophy and wrestling "my best match ever," Doug Rouse, a senior at Rollins College, could point to with pride from last weekend's NCAA wrestling tournament in Columbus, Ohio.

"It did narrow down the heavyweights' group quite a bit," though, he added. "There weren't any easy touches left."

Rouse whipped the eventual third-place-finisher, Doug Mayla of the University of Colorado, 7-2, before suffering a pinfall at the hands of Northern Iowa's Mike McCrosky, who went on to win the heavyweight class. Rouse, incidentally, had only a sitting in the steam room all day trying to lose weight and avoid Taylor-then he didn't even show up.

Though Rouse is the fourth seed, naturally the home crowd favored him. "I doubt if I would have lost by 2-0 lead to the pleasure of approximately 3,000 spectators, still tied at the end of the second period but the 5-2 decision was reversed in the final round. With only one minute to go in the final minute match, he got a double take-down on his tiring opponent to tie them and then a near pin as the once tiring opponent grew fatigued. Silent, that is, except for his late-season support-Torrey's best friend and room-mate Pat Ward, who accompanied him to the competition.

ROUSE, won the match 7-4 with the final score added. "It was very satisfying," beamed Rouse, "coming from behind like that and tiring to go into 10 minutes, too."

Team title of the Sutry went to the Chicago-based Mayor Richard J. Daley Youth Foundation. Outstanding wrestler award was carried off by Southwestern Oklahoma State University's 125-pounder from Oklahoma City.

In addition to Rouse, most of FTU's team members will go to the National Amateur Wrestling Association championships at Patrick Air Force Base in Satellite Beach beginning this Sunday. International rules will apply and there will be 11 weight classes.

Eventually they were allowed to phone their call, and fortunately out of some of the connections in Pensacola. Ball was finally paid and the dynamic duo was back in Pensacola.

If you get a chance, go out and see the baseball team play. This Saturday FTU will play at Haines City High School in Winter Haven, Florida. The University of Miami, a team who has flirted around the top 10 all year in the national polls. Game time is 2 p.m.

This story should have seen last year's baseball team play, and are afraid to come out because you just can't see it, give this year's team a chance. I'm sure you will be mighty happy you did. You know they're good. They look like a team. And there is no funny business. They are out there to win a game. I've heard more than one man say that FTU is one of the best hitting teams in the state. If you see them play, you will see that this team has no problem been pitching. Seeing back to basketball, Coach Torchy Clark and Ron Meuk have been assisting the basketball team for next year's team. Both have been searching for that deeper that can help stabilize the program, carbonate. Have invited the recruiting of the Santa Barbara, and Minnesota Twins team game with one of the best, if not, the best, outfielders in the fielding dinner in the FTU cafeteria around 6 p.m. Tuesday, you could have been there to see the junior college players in the state. They were having dinner with Meuk. All these prospects look encouraging. The only problem is that Clark has only four scholarships.
He Really Works At His Tennis

Jim Kelaher likes tennis. In fact, he has such a love for the game that he has decided to devote his entire life to the sport.

Right now, Jim is playing on the FTU tennis team and teaching tennis in his free time. That's quite an accomplishment for the senior pre-law student, especially when you consider where Jim is doing his tennis instruction.

Jim is the tennis pro at The Springs, formerly Salado Springs, an exclusive condominium development catering to some of the wealthiest people in Central Florida.

Besides giving private, individual tennis lessons, Jim manages the pro shop. Inside the spacious display room which overlooks four tennis courts, Jim strings racquets and offers his experience in helping tennis players in the selection of tennis equipment and apparel.

Although Jim finds the position to be an exciting challenge, he knows that his step up into the role of a tennis pro has cost him dearly. When he first came to FTU three years ago, Jim was the number one player on the team. This year, he finds himself in the No. 8 position.

The situation must be difficult for Jim to comprehend. How can a guy who is good enough to become a tennis pro, fail to start on his school's tennis team? Well, Jim expressed it best. "While the team practices four hours a day, I'm busy to make two hours. And, I don't get to play a variety of individuals."

But, then Kelaher is quick to add that there is another reason for the transition from No. 1 to No. 8. And it boils down to the strength of the FTU team, something most people fail to realize. "When I came here two of the local high schools could beat us, now we can play tennis evenly with any college or university in the southeast."

"However, FTU needs more scholarship money to get better quality players like Octavio Piva and Mike DeZeeuw," said Kelaher. Piva and DeZeeuw are the top players from Brazil and South Africa, respectively, and are Coach Wood's choicest finds on his tennis squad.

Jim's conversation flows freely when he talks of tennis. Realizing that tennis takes years to become good at, he says, "When people first learn to play, they spend most of their time during the first few months chasing balls all over the court. Naturally, this is discouraging but it is the only way to learn. Too many people give up before they give it a decent try," said Kelaher.

As for tennis at the college and professional level, Jim says, "Tennis won't be a good spectator sport until more people play it. Tennis is not that interesting to most people. You have to know the game to appreciate it." And obviously, most people don't know enough about the game even though it has skyrocketed in popularity and become the sport of the 70's, he added.

FTU Battles Ranked 'Canes

By Fred Cay

THE COLLEGE baseball team considered to be the best in Florida and currently ranked as number four in the whole country will be challenged by an ambitious FTU Goldsco squad tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Winter Park's Harper-Stephod Field. The 22-8 Miami Hurricanes, pared offensively by second baseman Ben Castillo, first baseman Orlando Gonzales and freshman shortstop Wayne Krenchicki, just recently completed a grueling 21-game stretch which saw their record slip slightly from their early hot pace.

And ready to battle the tomorrow will be an FTU squad which hasn't won in its last five outings, but nonetheless is still respectable 13-8. "WE DON'T have any more breaks in our schedule this year," head coach Doug Holmgren observed. "Miami's the best we'll face this year and after them we have to play Lyndon State, which is the best team in the Vermont-New Hampshire area." The pitching we've been going against has really been tough," he continued. "I don't really know why, but we've been getting everybody's best pitchers and I'm beginning to expect it now."

In the case of Miami, the Goldsco will probably have to go against either lefty Stan Jakubowski or right-hander Cary Sarzo, the 'Canes' no. 3 and 4 starters. However, the Goldsco have 3-0 records and both have excellent control.

CASTLELLANO honorable mention on last year's All-American team is the Miami team with 31 RBI's. Krenchicki is the squad's leading hitter at .342 and the speedy Gonzales has stolen 25 bases.

Lanky Bill Larsen will handle the mound chores for the Goldsco, his first start in a week and a half.

The main reason he hasn't been pitching more is because the Goldsco haven't been playing many games recently--the weatherman hasn't cooperated. Three contests have been rained out in the last week.

MOST RECENTLY, FTU lost a 7-3 decision to Harvard in St. Petersburg Tuesday night. Five FTU errors paved the way for the Crimson, who scored five unearned runs. The Goldsco actually jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead on a booming 375-foot triple off the right-field wall by Pat McCarty with two on. Harvard also committed a couple misplays to aid the rally, and McCarty scored on a passed ball.

The Goldsco were only able to muster a lone hit thereafter, while the Crimson scored three times in the second, three more in the fifth and one in the seventh. Pete MacLaughlin pitched a good game for FTU and defended better control than usual, walking just two and striking out eight in six innings, but his record fell to 3-5.

Tennis Team Tops Tampa

By Bill McGrath

The FTU varsity tennis team pounded The University of Tampa 9-0 Monday in a match played on the FTU courts. The match victory gave FTU an 8-1 record going into a showdown Wednesday with the University of South Florida. Octavia Piva, the Knight's number one and only woman who was kept from an easy win. Piva, down 5-4 in the second set, rallied to take a 7-5 and the match.

SINGLES

1-Octavia Piva d. Rick Debl 6-1, 7-5
2-Mike DeZeeuw d. Mike Brandon 6-1, 6-2
3-Joe Luciani d. Bill Hess 6-0, 6-0
4-Craig Linton d. J. Whyte 6-2, 6-3
5-Neil Howard d. Stan Borowski 6-1, 6-3
6-Hernando Diaz d. Dave Yasallo 6-2, 6-1

DOUBLES

1-DeZeeuw, Luciani d. Debl, Brandon 6-1, 6-2
2-Linton, Yasallo d. Hess, Yasallo 6-1, 6-0
3-Diaz, Howard d. Whyte, Borowski 6-4, 6-3

Neil Howard, FTU's no. 6 man moved into the no. 5 position for the match to fill the slot vacated by Bill McElroy, who is sidelined with a sprained back. Now, at no. 6 for the Knights is Hernando Diaz, another Brazilian tennis player recruited by Coach Wood.

IM Action Gets Into Full Swing

The six-team independent league in men's intramural water polo will get under way Monday. Teams, which have 6-6 players over 6-6, looks to be an exciting one.

Powell's People and TKE II also appear to be contenders for the top spot in the two-and-a-half week long sport. Winner of this league will take on the victor between the fraternity Gold and Black Leagues, which are already well into their schedule. Defending champ and Gold League favorite, Alpha Tau Omega, takes on Tau Kappa Epsilon on Tuesday, then Phi Kappa Alpha on Wednesday, Black League front-runner, Tau Kappa Epsilon, will be tested by Sigma Sigma Chi in another important game Thursday.

Team A, with Powell's People in the week's top offering in the independent division. That contest will be Wednesday at 6 p.m.

Women's softball will start Monday with eight teams battling for the title. The Imortals are the defending champs.

IM Action Gets Into Full Swing

Monday is the last chance to enter this year's IM wrestling tournament. Required clinic will be held April 9-18. The journey will be April 18 in the Village Center Assembly Room.

It is obvious why tennis has boomed. Tennis is a sport with carry-over value, and unlike most other sports, it can be played long after college. Social level tennis is an excellent way to keep fit. According to Jim, many athletes play it in their off season. Baltimore Colts defensive back Jack Hidlen, who lives at The Springs and is a tennis regular, says that his coach urged him to take up tennis after the off season.

Bill McElroy graduated in June, Jim will manage pro shops for the Pro-Ten Management Corp. because, "I would like to stay in tennis, but get out the teaching aspect."
