Central Florida Future, June 25, 1997

6-25-1997

Find similar works at: http://stars.library.ucf.edu/centralfloridafuture

University of Central Florida Libraries http://library.ucf.edu

Recommended Citation

http://stars.library.ucf.edu/centralfloridafuture/1372

This Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives at STARS. It has been accepted for inclusion in Central Florida Future by an authorized administrator of STARS. For more information, please contact lee.dotson@ucf.edu.
Build it and they will come

UCF students hoping for new weight room

By SEAN CLAEYS
Staff Writer

There was a time when word came around that a new fitness facility would be built in the near future. Then there was another time and another, and now the future is here but a new fitness facility isn't.

Dr. Kay Stanney, industrial engineering professor and aerobics instructor at UCF, has pointed out, the workout room, aerobics center, and the overall recreational services provided for students and faculty is a wonderful bonus for all to enjoy.

Stanney is one of the few who has witnessed and acknowledges the great work done by the recreational services staff, namely Jonnie Pierras, director of the fitness center. Though Stanney and others are content with their cardiovascular workout area, the vast majority wants more.

At the Director of Recreational Services, Loren Knutson, “When athletic or academic recruits are looking at colleges, the fitness gym is the most important reason for their decision.”

“We don’t even show our hole-in-the-wall gym, that was created by sealing up half of our cafeteria, on our campus tour. Where as the gym at E. Carolina, UF, FSU, Georgia, and South FL are becoming key stops for bringing in the new recruits.”

Jason Banta, one of the staff members at UCF’s gym, said the consensus of gym-goers say there is not enough room in the tiny workout area or aerobics room. Plus the aging equipment is wearing out and breaking.

Student Dominic Calpe best described the gym with one word, “Outdated.” He went on to say his old high school weight room is better than UCF’s, and much less crowded. Nicole Griffin not only agreed that the gym is crowded, but so packed she said long-time friend Joyce Clampitt, “There’ll basically be assigned in one place for two years so they get to know the character of the neighbor- hood, the kind of services that people that live there have and don’t have.”

See STUDENTS, Page 2

Dr. Pete Fisher’s life uplifted thousands at UCF

By NORA R. KULIESH
Managing Editor

Kenneth E. “Pete” Fisher, a political science instructor, founder of UCF’s peer counseling program and founder of UCF’s Lambda Chi Alpha Chapter died June 1 in his Oviedo home. The cause of death was a brain infection. He was only 51.

Fisher, born and raised in Ocala, began teaching political science at UCF during its inaugural year in 1968 as a resident teacher living in a men’s dorm. However, he left his teaching job to serve his country in the Vietnam War.

Upon his return, Fisher earned a doctorate in education administration from Florida State University and went back to UCF in 1976 to continue teaching.

The early 1980’s brought Fisher to school once again, this time as a student. Fisher received his master’s in counseling education from UCF and thus began his career as a UCF counselor.

“He was like a brain surgeon without surgical tools and he could fix broken hearts,” said friend Eric Yount. “There are lots of counselors, but few that are as outstanding a human being as Pete.”

Fisher eventually established a private practice as a family therapist and created a program at UCF where senior students offered counseling to younger ones.

The programs Fisher created and his personal attention to those in need, friends say he touched the lives of thousands.

Tom Messina, executive director of the UCF Alumni Association, was a graduate student who worked for Fisher in charge of Fisher’s counseling program.

“I have known him for 15 years,” Messina said. “He could really captivate. He understood the human psyche.”

Fisher was best known on campus for his knack for soothing emotional pain and being, simply, an incredible human being.

“He had this incredible ability to make anyone he came in contact with feel very, very special,” said long-time friend Joyce Clampil, a UCF Administrator.

Clampil says Fisher had many passions which included people, books, movies and plants.

“He is probably the most incredibly sensitive and caring individual I have known,” added Clampil.

Fishers will live on in the hearts of those who knew him and on campus he will be remembered for his wonderful service and dedication, to those he counseled, as well as the brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Donations can be made to the Dr. Pete Fisher Endowed Scholarship by contacting the UCF Foundation, 249-4740.

Through the programs Fisher created and his personal attention to those in need, friends say he touched the lives of thousands.

Tom Messina, executive director of the UCF Alumni Association, was a graduate student who worked for Fisher in charge of Fisher’s counseling program.

“I have known him for 15 years,” Messina said. “He could really captivate. He understood the human psyche.”

Fisher was best known on campus for his knack for soothing emotional pain and being, simply, an incredible human being.

“He had this incredible ability to make anyone he came in contact with feel very, very special,” said long-time friend Joyce Clampil, a UCF Administrator.

Clampil says Fisher had many passions which included people, books, movies and plants.

“He is probably the most incredibly sensitive and caring individual I have known,” added Clampil.

Fishers will live on in the hearts of those who knew him and on campus he will be remembered for his wonderful service and dedication, to those he counseled, as well as the brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Donations can be made to the Dr. Pete Fisher Endowed Scholarship by contacting the UCF Foundation, 249-4740.

Dr. Pete Fisher’s life uplifted thousands at UCF

By NORA R. KULIESH
Managing Editor

Kenneth E. “Pete” Fisher, a political science instructor, founder of UCF’s peer counseling program and founder of UCF’s Lambda Chi Alpha Chapter died June 1 in his Oviedo home. The cause of death was a brain infection. He was only 51.

Fisher, born and raised in Ocala, began teaching political science at UCF during its inaugural year in 1968 as a resident teacher living in a men’s dorm. However, he left his teaching job to serve his country in the Vietnam War.

Upon his return, Fisher earned a doctorate in education administration from Florida State University and went back to UCF in 1976 to continue teaching.

The early 1980’s brought Fisher to school once again, this time as a student. Fisher received his master’s in counseling education from UCF and thus began his career as a UCF counselor.

“He was like a brain surgeon without surgical tools and he could fix broken hearts,” said friend Eric Yount. “There are lots of counselors, but few that are as outstanding a human being as Pete.”

Fisher eventually established a private practice as a family therapist and created a program at UCF where senior students offered counseling to younger ones.

The programs Fisher created and his personal attention to those in need, friends say he touched the lives of thousands.

Tom Messina, executive director of the UCF Alumni Association, was a graduate student who worked for Fisher in charge of Fisher’s counseling program.

“I have known him for 15 years,” Messina said. “He could really captivate. He understood the human psyche.”

Fisher was best known on campus for his knack for soothing emotional pain and being, simply, an incredible human being.

“He had this incredible ability to make anyone he came in contact with feel very, very special,” said long-time friend Joyce Clampil, a UCF Administrator.

Clampil says Fisher had many passions which included people, books, movies and plants.

“He is probably the most incredibly sensitive and caring individual I have known,” added Clampil.

Fishers will live on in the hearts of those who knew him and on campus he will be remembered for his wonderful service and dedication, to those he counseled, as well as the brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Donations can be made to the Dr. Pete Fisher Endowed Scholarship by contacting the UCF Foundation, 249-4740.

Dr. Pete Fisher’s life uplifted thousands at UCF

By NORA R. KULIESH
Managing Editor

Kenneth E. “Pete” Fisher, a political science instructor, founder of UCF’s peer counseling program and founder of UCF’s Lambda Chi Alpha Chapter died June 1 in his Oviedo home. The cause of death was a brain infection. He was only 51.

Fisher, born and raised in Ocala, began teaching political science at UCF during its inaugural year in 1968 as a resident teacher living in a men’s dorm. However, he left his teaching job to serve his country in the Vietnam War.

Upon his return, Fisher earned a doctorate in education administration from Florida State University and went back to UCF in 1976 to continue teaching.

The early 1980’s brought Fisher to school once again, this time as a student. Fisher received his master’s in counseling education from UCF and thus began his career as a UCF counselor.

“He was like a brain surgeon without surgical tools and he could fix broken hearts,” said friend Eric Yount. “There are lots of counselors, but few that are as outstanding a human being as Pete.”

Fisher eventually established a private practice as a family therapist and created a program at UCF where senior students offered counseling to younger ones.

The programs Fisher created and his personal attention to those in need, friends say he touched the lives of thousands.

Tom Messina, executive director of the UCF Alumni Association, was a graduate student who worked for Fisher in charge of Fisher’s counseling program.

“I have known him for 15 years,” Messina said. “He could really captivate. He understood the human psyche.”

Fisher was best known on campus for his knack for soothing emotional pain and being, simply, an incredible human being.

“He had this incredible ability to make anyone he came in contact with feel very, very special,” said long-time friend Joyce Clampil, a UCF Administrator.

Clampil says Fisher had many passions which included people, books, movies and plants.

“He is probably the most incredibly sensitive and caring individual I have known,” added Clampil.

Fishers will live on in the hearts of those who knew him and on campus he will be remembered for his wonderful service and dedication, to those he counseled, as well as the brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Donations can be made to the Dr. Pete Fisher Endowed Scholarship by contacting the UCF Foundation, 249-4740.
Traffic violation leads police to ‘deadbeat dad’

By DAN TUCKER
Staff Writer

On June 7, Darrell Alexander Price was pulled over for a traffic violation, according to UCFPD reports. After officers released the vehicle, Dispatch informed the officers that Price had a felony warrant for his arrest. Police stopped again on June 12, after observing Price, who matched the description of the felony warrant, get into his vehicle. Darrell Alexander Price was arrested for driving with a suspended license and for child support delinquency.

A routine check of the second occupant of the vehicle, Kevin Orlando Jones, revealed an active warrant for his arrest as well. Price and Jones were taken into custody and transferred to Orange County Jail.

In other campus crime reported by the UCFPD:

*Sabri James Hammud reported a burglary and grand theft after he discovered $210 worth of Craftsman tools were missing from the Engineering Building on June 10. Hammud said the tools, a 99 piece socket set, an electric drill and a drill bit set, were last seen locked up on May 14 in Rm 168. Hammud did not give anyone permission to use the tools.

*Christian Ferreria Lima was arrested on June 11 for driving with a license that had been suspended three times.

Students favor new UCF fitness center

From PAGE 1

finds it hard to get a good work-out in. To remedy her dilemma, she enrolled herself into body building classes to lift weights in the athlete’s gym, where there is ample room and equipment.

Students in her predicament are frustrated by the antiquated facilities, yet UCF is not providing us with the adequate space or equipment needed for exercising,” said Griffin.

Due to the lack of room and equipment, which causes overcrowding, Bastian stated that students are having to pay large sums of money for off campus memberships. For those who cannot afford an off campus gym, though, they are limited to what UCF provides.

Plans are in progress for the funding of a new fitness facility. It was several semesters ago that UCF was granted $11 million from the Capital Improvement Trust Fund (CITF) for expansion purposes. Though UCF will not receive the money for almost another year, a contract was made between former Student Body President Marlin and President Hitt.

This contract, called the Marlin agreement, gives a list of plans for allocating the $11 million. Building a new recreational facility was the third on the list. Knutson said the first two priorities have been dealt with using other funds, and the recreational facility is now taking precedence.

It is simply a matter of President Hitt writing a letter to the CITF committee in Tallahassee stating UCF’s intentions for the money.

So, once again there is talk and actual planning for a new gym. A two-story fitness center with over 150,000 square feet has been sketched out. Plans to rent out parts of the facility to high schools and junior sport leagues have been considered to help pay maintenance costs. Locations have been narrowed down, and funding is within an arms reach.

Students will have to wait and see whether the new facility will actually break-ground. If the $11 million is allocated to the weight room, construction may begin as early as Fall of 1998.

“I hope the money goes to the weight room. I use it at least four times a week, and think it is adequate now, but it [a new building] will alleviate a lot of the overcrowding. I will keep my fingers crossed,” said senior Julie Werner.
Parents do not get a vote, but they do get a say

By NORA R. KULIESH
Managing Editor

Governor Chiles allowed the Teacher Tenure Bill to become a law on June 14, without his signature. The bill which will, for the first time, give parents an official say in the evaluation of their children's teachers and require an objective measurement of a teacher's success with students.

The bill, which some education experts and reformers say is not strong enough, goes into effect on July 1. The final version of the bill:
• Cuts from one year to 90 days the time a teacher has to correct deficiencies noted when a contract is renewed.
• Says school systems have to measure the progress a student makes under a given teacher and consider their performance in making evaluations.
• Says parent's comments have to be considered by school systems during evaluations.

Library exhibit shows diverse collections

The following items will be on display in the library during the month of July:
1. Optical Spectaculars through Ordinary Lens, by Chia Hui Chen, photographer.
2. Weight Control Without Dieting, by Terri Langford.
4. Fantasy/Horror Collection, by Special Collections and
5. Patents: Why Didn't I Think of That?, by Meg Scharf.

UCF cadets in action

ROTC cadets participated in the last Basic Course Field Training Exercise (FTX) in Camp Blanding, near Jacksonville recently.

The Basic Course consists of UCF freshman and sophomores. Some possess ROTC scholarships, but the majority do not. The Basic Course was designed as a means for students to look into Army ROTC with no military obligation.

To participate, interested students can sign up for MIS 1031 like a normal college course. Basic Course cadets learn military leadership which includes hands-on practical exercises such as weekly labs and Field Training Exercises.

For more information about Army ROTC, call 823-3383.

Summer term library book sale

The Friends of the UCF library (FOL) will hold a book sale on Tuesday, July 15 from 10:00 am until 2:00 pm in the main lobby of the UCF library.

Due to the response to the sale of new and used textbooks, manuals, and fiction as well as an increase in the number of items, has prompted the FOL to offer a sale during summer term. Typically, these sales are held during the Fall and Spring semesters.

The books were donated to the UCF library by students, faculty, staff and friends in the community. None were purchased with state funds or tax dollars. The books represent duplicates that could not be added to the libraries collection. However, the volumes are useful to students as an inexpensive way to build their personal libraries with reference and reading material.

The monies realized through FOL book sales are used to purchase new titles for the University's collection.

The following items will be on display in the library during the month of July:

1. Optical Spectaculars through Ordinary Lens, by Chia Hui Chen, photographer.
2. Weight Control Without Dieting, by Terri Langford.
4. Fantasy/Horror Collection, by Special Collections and
5. Patents: Why Didn't I Think of That?, by Meg Scharf.

UCF cadets in action

ROTC cadets participated in the last Basic Course Field Training Exercise (FTX) in Camp Blanding, near Jacksonville recently.

The Basic Course consists of UCF freshman and sophomores. Some possess ROTC scholarships, but the majority do not. The Basic Course was designed as a means for students to look into Army ROTC with no military obligation.

To participate, interested students can sign up for MIS 1031 like a normal college course. Basic Course cadets learn military leadership which includes hands-on practical exercises such as weekly labs and Field Training Exercises.

For more information about Army ROTC, call 823-3383.

Summer term library book sale

The Friends of the UCF library (FOL) will hold a book sale on Tuesday, July 15 from 10:00 am until 2:00 pm in the main lobby of the UCF library.

Due to the response to the sale of new and used textbooks, manuals, and fiction as well as an increase in the number of items, has prompted the FOL to offer a sale during summer term. Typically, these sales are held during the Fall and Spring semesters.

The books were donated to the UCF library by students, faculty, staff and friends in the community. None were purchased with state funds or tax dollars. The books represent duplicates that could not be added to the libraries collection. However, the volumes are useful to students as an inexpensive way to build their personal libraries with reference and reading material.

The monies realized through FOL book sales are used to purchase new titles for the University's collection.

The following items will be on display in the library during the month of July:

1. Optical Spectaculars through Ordinary Lens, by Chia Hui Chen, photographer.
2. Weight Control Without Dieting, by Terri Langford.
4. Fantasy/Horror Collection, by Special Collections and
5. Patents: Why Didn't I Think of That?, by Meg Scharf.
Q: 1.) Did you vote in the last Student Senate Election? Why or Why not?
   2.) Did you also vote in the last Student President/Vice President Election? Why or why not?

   BY PETER KUNDIS

A:

1.) No, I didn't know any of the candidates that were running.
2.) Yes, I felt that it was important to vote in that election.

—Laurie Klugman, Junior, Elementary Education, Ft. Lauderdale

1.) No, I wasn't taking any classes during the time of the election.
2.) Yes, I felt that my particular candidate had very good intentions for the students.

—Brigida Padilla, Junior, Psychology, Winter Park

1.) No. This is my very first semester at UCF. But I do plan to vote at the next election, and at others, while I'm attending UCF.
2.) No, for the very same reason that I gave for the above question.

—Patricia Tom, Graduate Student, Environmental Engineering, Fellsmere, FL

1.) Yes. Because of the great slogans, and also the candidates were very passionate about running for office.
2.) Yes. Out of responsibility and support for both the students and also the student government.

—Katherine Kirchner, Graduate Student, Clinical Social Work, Winter Park

1.) No. Because I'm an International student, I didn't know who any of the candidates were. So, I was confused, as to whom to vote for. And also I wasn't sure about what criteria to use in choosing a candidate.
2.) No, for the very same reason that I gave for the above question.

—Nimat Hague, Masters Studies, Computer Engineering, Chittagong, Bangladesh

1.) Yes. But that's mainly because of having a very hectic semester. I do think that the candidates did a great job. I just wish that I could have had the time to carefully listen to their arguments. I didn't want to just vote, without at least having some idea of what their election agenda was.
2.) No, for the very same reason that I gave for the above question.

—Andi Cowell, Graduate Studies, Industrial Engineering, Manchester, England

---

“I DON’T DO WEEKENDS.”

“Because working part-time at UPS... I don’t have to. They have five-day schedules that leave your weekends free. Work morning, noon, or night hours that work around your class schedule. And get paid holidays and vacations.

“That’s plenty of time to study or recharge. And I make plenty too... almost $10,000 a year for working about 4 hours a day. UPS knows students value time as much as money.

“At UPS, most students work in Operations and some in Accounting, Industrial Engineering, I.S. and Customer Service. So if you don’t do weekends, do contact UPS.”

Applicants are being considered for your local UPS office. For interviews or more information about UPS, see your school’s career development or job placement center. UPS is an equal opportunity employer.

M/F/D/V

WORKING FOR STUDENTS WHO WORK FOR US.
UPS DELIVERS EDUCATION

CONTACT YOUR SCHOOL'S CAREER RESOURCE CENTER
College radio is not what it used to be ... it's jazzy

By JASON HEIRONIMUS
Opinion Editor

With the advent of the phonograph in the dark ages people no longer had to resort to their own voices for music. Instead they could play a scratchy record, listen real close, and get a small piece of happiness blotted out by a bad speaker type thing.

Then came the record player, and the sound quality got tremendously better, which enabled listeners to get all the way totally new out of their desired music. After that of course came the infamous 8-track, which got a lot of people to be able to boogie down in their very own Fintos! In the '80s we realized how ridiculous 8-tracks were and switched to the smaller, more compact cassette. And finally, in the technologically-entrenched '90s, we prefer compact discs for our listening pleasure.

So, what about college radio? The radio is an important part of the college experience; students listen to it for the music, for the safety of their interests, so they can pick and choose what they listen to. Unfortunately, however, some people are forced to listen to the radio for lack of funds to buy one of those nice stereo systems. Being in college, a student in this predicament might want to turn to their college radio station.

At one time college radio was the last bastion of experimental radio. Eventually it garnered its own genre of music. Through the experimental '60s and up to the late '80s a college student could count on the safety of college radio. Often in order to cater to the many different types of people attending a university the station would be forced to offer something for everyone. From folk to rock to Indian chants, every student could find an eclectic mix to listen to on America's college campuses. But sometimes, some college radio stations just can't seem to get it right. Orlando has a fairly large radio market. With the five buttons on my 1986 factory radio I am able to receive five average radio stations, which will produce at least one good song at any time of the day. So, I am a slave to my car radio. I thrive on my radio.

What I would love, however, is if I could discover some new music not via MTV or the commercial radio which Orlando offers. A smart thinking individual might think, "Hmmm, UCF needs more stuff for the students ... College students tend to like music. College students tend to listen to music. Wait a minute, what about a college radio station which would cater to all the different interests of UCF's diverse student body? What a great idea!"

Instead it seems as if someone has taken that idea, and instead thought, "Hmmm, UCF needs more stuff for the students ... College students tend to like music. College students tend to listen to music. Wait a minute, what about a college radio station which would cater to all the interests of UCF's diverse student body, and just play JAZZ!!!"

—JASON HEIRONIMUS

Study Here!!!

Enjoy Traditional

Apartment Living and be Close to UCF.

- Two Pools
- Air Conditioned Racquetball Courts
- Private Patios and Balconies
- Fireplaces Available

- One Bedrooms also Available
- 7/12 Month Leases (available on selected apartments)
- Located Just Minutes from UCF
- Fitness center with treadmill

Central Florida Future

Knight Publishing, Inc.
120 N. Central Ave.
Oviedo, FL 32765

News and Sports Desk
(407) 977-9396
Entertainment Desk
(407) 977-9397
Advertising & Classifieds
(407) 977-1009
Fax
(407) 977-0019

Publisher: Rick Stolte
Managing Editor: Scott Enck
News Editor: Liedel Mahan
Sports Editor: Diane Gondolas
Opinion Editor: Jason Heironimus
Entertainment Editor: Dean Lipton
Layout Editor: Royal Ginter
Photo Editor: Mike Marshall
Advertisement Manager: Alicia Atkins
Distribution: Brian Brink

Opinions in the Central Florida Future are those of the newspaper or its individual columnists and are not necessarily those of the University Administration or Board of Regents. Materials submitted must be typed and include the authors signatures and phone number. Letters are subject to editing for space and grammar and become the property of the newspaper. The Central Florida Future is a free campus newspaper published weekly. Knight Publishing, Inc. is not associated with the University of Central Florida.
Family overcomes poverty to earn degrees

By COLLEEN DE BAISE
College Press Service

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va.—Rafiq Jeffries had every excuse not to graduate from college. His home is Philadelphia's gritty Germantown, a place enveloped in poverty, despair and drug addiction. It's where he and his eight brothers and sisters struggled to make ends meet for food after a family tragedy left them without parents or income.

"I wore sweats—some of the first two years of high school," Jeffries, now 23, recalls with a laugh, in a conversation two days before receiving his degree May 19 from the University of Virginia.

With graduation so near and a Virginia spring touching the campus, it was easy to be lighthearted. But for Jeffries, simple survival—his situation worsened in 1985, when Jeffries' mother, Gail, who had a history of depression, mentally withdrew from the world; his father, Rafiq, lost his job and battled with drug addiction.

Suddenly the Jeffries siblings, whose ages ranged from 8 to 23, were forced to raise themselves. It sounds a bit like the plot of Fox's "Party of Five," except this real-life story involves nine children living in Philadelphia's inner city, not San Francisco's tony Pacific Heights.

"Things were already difficult," Jeffries says. "Then they really collapsed." By the time he was 13, Jeffries was working three or four jobs after school, getting home after midnight. Sometimes, the house he shared with his eight brothers and sisters was without heat or electricity. Often, there was no food.

He adds: "When people think of poverty, don't think they have a really good idea of what it is. We were hungry, angry, as hard as we worked. There were days when we didn't eat." He knew there was one way out: education.

And that's what he wrote on his application to U.Va., that the family turmoil "was slowly pulling toward the oblivion of the fast money and drugs. So I had to make a decision and ask myself if I was savvy enough to walk on the road I wanted to take—and I decided it was not."

What makes this story so amazing is the fact that Jeffries is only one of four family members to be graduating this year. Jeffries will receive a master's degree in teaching; his younger brother, Jeremiah, 21, will earn a bachelor's degree in psychology, also from U.Va. At Temple University, older sister Basyinah, 26, will graduate cum laude with a bachelor's degree in elementary education. Another older brother, Level, 32, will earn a master's degree in health care administration and financial management from Temple. A second sister, Shahnah, 27, has been accepted at Harvard University and will start a Ph.D. program in divinity and education in the fall. She's a graduate of Haverford College.

Three other siblings—Mikal, Gabriella and Eva Marie—are still in high school. "They're going to college. We're going to work hard... whatever it takes," Jeffries says. "They're survivors, too.

He remembers the tough times immediately after his sister's suicide. "That one point in history was our low," he says, quietly. "We lost one."

But the close-knit siblings struggled to raise themselves, they remember. "The rule was, you listen to the person above you," Jeffries says.

His brother Jeremiah adds: "And you are responsible for the ones younger than you. We were determined to make it. We were determined to beat poverty and anything else that came our way. We had our parents' spirituality, even if we didn't have them actively with us."

Lorenzo, the eldest brother, now 35, quit school and went to work for food. The other older children stayed in school, but took odd jobs around the neighborhood. Shahnah, the eldest sister, tutored the younger children in writing and mathematics.

"Education was the vehicle, devotion to each other was the drive," says Jeffries as he explains how his siblings managed. "As they worked to complete their degrees, more hardships surfaced. The family was evicted from its home in 1993, and the remaining siblings scattered throughout the city with friends and relatives.

Jeffries says he never doubted he would finish his degree, even during very dark moments. "I didn't have a choice whether I was going to finish," he said. "I wasn't going to go back to my family and say I failed. No way.

He credits his parents with instilling in him and his siblings the conviction that education is a right. Jeffries says his mother, an elementary teacher, used to tell them as they were growing up: "In order to love yourself and the world, you have to educate yourself." His father once served as treasurer of the Sister Clara Mohammed School, a private Muslim school he co-founded in the 1960s.

Also, "Allah wouldn't give us anything we can't handle," says Jeffries, who is Muslim. "We were tested. We're pretty good people. Even at our lowest point, we were taking in kids to live with us."

In recent months, their mother has slowly come out of her depression and is regaining an active role in the family, their father has completed his drug rehabilitation.

"Both my mother and father are doing incredible now," he says. "This has been a healing period for my family."

The Jeffries family story has captured national attention, from USA Today, Chicago Tribune and even People magazine. But Jeffries says the sudden fame hasn't distracted him or his siblings from a special goal: to start a foundation that lobbies for educational funding.

"No one should have to go through that," he says, referring to the poverty he and his family experienced. "We have so much wealth in this country. In two days, he and his brother will walk together across U.Va.'s stage, as their parents watch from the audience. The moment will mark not just the end of a long journey, but the beginning of a lifetime of service to others, he says. "This is just the beginning step; this passes us on to another stage of our life," he said. "Success is definitely within our reach."

"We will be incredible; we will change the world."
For Sale: 1993 Plymouth VIP $195
5 spd, red, sunroof, ge, pw, ac, anti Theft, $4,200.00 obo. Call 222-4555.

3 ROOMS IN HOME FOR RENT

KOMID CAR COMPANY
842 N. Mills Avenue
Orlando, FL 32803
407-895-KOMID (5666)

Summer Student Specials

94 - GEO METRO - red, 5-spd, 2-door hatchback, w/ sunroof, cold A/C, stereo, cty and econo at only 30k miles. Great price at $4,600.
94 - EAGLE TALON - home grown, 5-spd, 2-door hatchback, A/C and stereo, sharp and sporty! Only $3,900!
91 - MITSUBISHI ECLIPSE - Max, 5-spd, 2-door hatchback, cold A/C. Proof right at $4,900. Call John @ 983-3578. Cost & Drive Home Today!!

CARGO Furniture For Sale: couch, sofa table, coffee table, and lamp table in good (clean) condition - $400. Call 381-0175 - Must See.

TOWNSHIP For Rent
Close To Campus, Two Story - 2 Bedroom, 1.5 Bath, Washer & Dryer -

HELP WANTED
Representatives earn $510-$5100+ part-time, flexible hours, call prerecorded information - 672-7141.

$550 SALES LADIES $550
Ladies, are you outgoing, assertive, responsible & have a positive attitude? Here's your chance to work in the nicest nightclubs in Orlando: EIGHT SECONDS, BACKSTAGE, MULVANYS (no cover a few). You will be selling floral quality roses & arrangements to one major customer. The best part is you can make $15-35 per hour! We don't want tacky & embarrassing uniforms but attractive sundresses. Schedule flexible, hrs. 9-2am. Call Kean at 477-8957.

Downtown Real Estate Developer needs Additional hrs avail. Transportation years old. You'd pay your own way.

Got a good story idea? Give our news desk a call @ 977-9396.

Attention Marketing Majors
Opportunities this fall selling advertising for the Central Florida Future. Work in a professional environment with a proven product. If you plan to be an account executive this is a great training ground. High commissions paid. This is your chance to prove to employers you've got what it takes to make it in sales. If you want to earn extra money while in school call the Central Florida Future to schedule an interview.

977-1009
Cage and Travolta: Face to Face

By DEAN G. LEWIS
Entertainment Editor

John Travolta and Nicolas Cage, by far the best-dressed action duo this summer, bring out heavy artillery for John Woo's violent and nasty "Face/Off". The former disco king and two-time Oscar nominee star as gun-toting Archers whose obsession in nailing mastermind terrorist Castor Troy (Cage) gets a ghastly face-lift when he has Troy's kiss-carved out (putting laser technology to good use) and transplanted onto his own. Trouble is, Travolta sooo wants the job. The three key people who used to work with Troy are conveniently dealt with early in the film, making everyone clueless of the pair's true identities. This pompous, bizarre plot goes overboard where Troy steals Archer's stowed-away Garlands (using laser technology to good use) and transplants onto his own. Trouble is, Travolta sooo wants the job. The three key people who used to work with Troy, including his best, since coming to America and his most ambitious since his Hong Kong classics "The Killer" and "Hard Boiled".

Woo's best scenes come in a scene where Troy's former flame Sasha Hassler (Gina Gershon), along with her son and Troy's other henchmen, have set up refuge. Troy was such a good actress that she pulls us into a few rare emotional moments. But Travolta is such a good actress that she has to change his pretty face for something else. Unfortunately, this is a John Woo film, his best yet uneven attack on coal mine strife in Yorkshire. When the fictional Grimley Colliery shut down its lights on home turf, the local troupe of musicians, most of whom are miners themselves, defiantly challenged the government in hopes of avoiding a closure that could have economic effects. The players, headed by Pete Postlethwaite (Oscar nominee for "In the Name of the Father"), ultimately find salvation through their music. Timely, being the big-wig likes of Margaret Thatcher, Postlethwaite brings together an above-average cast to help him blow some eardrums. Highly reminiscent of his earlier works, Woo's bloody choreography of violence here hits a high step when the Judy Garland song "Over the Rainbow" starts to play amid the bullets and bodies. Woo replaced the original on early prints with a new one that is smart enough not to emphasize copyright squabbles. Still, it is a first for the action genre and unlike anything this year, and with an exhilarating boat chase, "Face/Off" easily outshines the lame "Speed 2: Cruise Control". In America, it is wise not to mess with a master of action. Compared in the past to the late Sam Peckinpah, Woo has delivered the goods, giving us over two hours of fiery entertainment. For the first time in America, Woo has found his Hong Kong calling.

 1/2 (out of four) A-
2 hrs. 15 min. Rated R.

High, low notes rock coal mine

By DEAN G. LEWIS
Entertainment Editor

Constant socio-political pounding almost breaks up the brass band in writer-director Mark Herman's "Brassed Off!", a well-intentioned year-round project about coal mineworkers in Yorkshire. When the fictional Grimsley Colliery shuts off its lights on home turf, the local troupe of musicians, most of whom are miners themselves, defiantly challenge the government in hopes of avoiding a closure that could prove to be economically disastrous. The players, headed by Pete Postlethwaite (Oscar nominee for "In the Name of the Father"), ultimately find salvation through their music. Timely, being the big-wig likes of Margaret Thatcher, Postlethwaite brings together an above-average cast to help him blow some eardrums. Fellow bandmates Ewan McGregor (currently in "The Pillow Book") and Tina Fitzgerald surprisingly have little to do in a script that is smart enough not to emphasize their underwritten roles. Herman does extract a subtle romantic subplot for the two by sticking them side by side in an unseen sexual all-nighter. Appropriately short, their romance bliss allows time for the film's more deserving moments of conviction, especially between the ailing Postlethwaite (his lungs have become chimneys of soot and coal dust) and son Philip, excellently played by Stephen Thompkinson. Stuck with a broken trombone, Phil has mismanaged his wife and kids for almost ten years. Having served time in the slammer, Phil's now got a pair of loan sharks on his tail and a clown gig to endure for extra money. Herman tackles the usual father-son relationship with flair. Phil tries suicide; old pop ends up bedridden, yet both men find a bond in the end after venturing, along with their proud band, into London's Albert Hall for a final, "pour-out-hearts-out" performance. Herman's beautifully-staged horn session, in turn, closes the film. A nice send-off for a sometimes preachy, schematic fusion of working-class Brits and harmonious instrumentals.

 1/2 (out of four) B-
1 hr. 41 min. Rated R.
Friends Julia Roberts (left), Dermot Mulroney (middle), and Rupert Everett at the altar in ‘My Best Friend’s Wedding’.

To wed or not to wed

By DEAN G. LEWIS
Entertainment Editor

Energetic comedy gets a considerable boost from British actor Rupert Everett (“The Madness of King George”), who plays Julia Roberts’s trusty, gay friend. Abandoning the stereotypes seen before in that kind of character, Everett lets his quirky, sentimental way. Scripted by Ron Bass (“Rain Man”, “Muriel’s Wedding”), the film features Roberts as a food critic whose single life is loose in what turns into an amiable farce from Australian director P.J. Hogan (“Men In Black”). The plot isn’t really there in “My Best Friend’s Wedding”, yet the picture works in its own quirky, wedding day attire. Another long time ago she made a pact with best friend Dermot Mulroney that if either one of them was not married at the age of 28, they would inevitably hook up and tie the knot. Some of the schemes devised by Roberts are borderline insane. Food critic or not, her character basically lacks the believability of such a part even though she’s at her most appealing since 1990’s “Pretty Woman”. Music dominates the film, most notably in the opening credit sequence in which an all-female act flawlessly performs in bright colors and wedding day attire. Another rousing moment comes at a dinner party in which Roberts and company sing a rendition of the old Burt Bacharach-Dionne Warwick collaboration, “Say a Little Prayer”. Not bad for the veteran music maestro (also prominently featured in Mike Myers’ “Austin Powers”).

1/2 (out of four) B+ 1 hr. 38 min. Rated PG-13.

By College Press Service

Less is more. But not when you’re answering essay questions.

Let’s take an inside look at the grading process. On multiple choice or short answer tests, you start with 100 percent and lose points with each wrong answer. You might even say instead of grading, the professor is “down-grading” your exam.

On an essay test, though, you are starting at zero, and you can only add points by putting ink on the paper. Every irrelevant piece of information you provide adds to the value of your answer and ultimately to your grade.

With essay questions the rule is clearly “more is more”. Therefore, the number one goal needs to be: provide as much information as possible in an organized manner without being redundant.

You’ll want to download as much information as possible, but you also want to be coherent so the professor will look at dozens, maybe even hundreds, of essays. He or she will eventually start skimming answers looking for the key points. When you use the lists and vocabulary presented in class, the grade will be able to spot them easily and add points to your score.

Remember, you’re starting at zero. So, write ‘til you’re right.

Florida Film Festival

By DEAN G. LEWIS
Entertainment Editor

The 6th Annual Fest concluded Sunday night with special screenings of its award winners, revealed the night before at the traditional gala ceremony at Florida’s Universal Studios. Filmmaker Roger Corman received his Lifetime Achievement award and was personally congratulated by Peter Fonda, whose film “Ulee’s Gold” is set to open Wednesday at the Enzian theater in Maitland.

Sunday’s showings included “The Handhunter’s Sister”, winner of the Festival’s Jury Prize. Other awards went to the documentaries “Before I Sleep” and “Nobody’s Business”, the cross-cultural drama “The Journey” and “35 Miles From Normal”. The French biopic “Beauharcaire” and the Norwegian Oscar-nominee from last year, “The Other Side of Sunday”, and the Canadian mystery “Le Polygraphe” also played Sunday night.

One of the better spotlight films this year was Jonathan Nossiter’s Sundance-winning film, “Sunday”, a perceptive and visually stunning drama about a homeless man discovering there’s more to life than shelters and street corners when he meets a mentally unstable actress who mistakes him for a famous film director. Nossiter’s tale starts slowly and gradually builds into something more: a disturbing slice-of-life about longing, identity, friendship, and love. Recipient of the Grand Jury Prize and the Waldo Salt Screenwriting award at Sundance. Due for national release later this summer from Cinepix Film Properties. A quiet, startling find.
LEAD STORIES

- In April, the town council of Cambre in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions, in northern Spain voted in legal, marriage-like status to nontraditional unions.

- Christopher Stien faced a $55,000 lawsuit against the town of Ipswich, S.D., in February after he fell on a sidewalk that had rough edges. He claims the town failed to maintain the sidewalk in good condition, which is not an unusual claim except that Stien is the mayor of Ipswich.

- Carolyn Strauss filed a $1 million lawsuit against the New York Lottery in March because she was offended by its Lotto subway advertisements. Strauss is 5 feet 7 inches and weighs 200 pounds and felt personally insulted by the ad that suggested the lottery was a less onerous way to make money than marrying "the client's big-boned daughter."

- A 1994 lawsuit, filed by Judge Philip Espinosa, 44, of the Arizona Court of Appeals against singer Barry Manilow, will finally go to trial in September. Espinosa said he still has a painful ringing in his ears from a Manilow concert in Tucson. He admitted his wife was upset at the time, but said, "She loves Barry." And in February, a New York judge tossed out the lawsuit by Clifford Goldberg against Motley Crue because a 1990 concert was too loud, giving him a "searing pain" through his ears. The judge said everyone at a Motley Crue concert knows it's going to be loud.

- Five people filed a lawsuit in March in Nagoya, Japan, against Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto for about $950 in damages, claiming that his support for smoking causes them mental anguish and deprives them of the healthy life they are entitled to under Japan's constitution. Hashimoto had promised the nation that "there's little flab, his legs are nicely shaped, and he sports an even tan." Said a club owner. "The women went crazy over him. I call him super Mario."

- In October, Kim Novacs told reporters she would file a $1 million lawsuit in West Palm Beach against an alligator that her husband killed the year before. The 6-foot-long gator scared the couple's little girl, causing Keith Novacs to shoot it, for which he was convicted of poaching. Mrs. Novacs cited a 1993 Florida court case in which an endangered species animal was the named plaintiff in a case and argued that if such an animal can be a plaintiff, it can be a defendant, with the state Game and Fish Commission liable for any damages.

- In January, Wayne Wooden filed a lawsuit in Indiana, Calif., against actress Nanette Fabray, and later in the month Evelyn Amato filed a lawsuit in New York City against actor David Hibbard. Both plaintiffs were seated close to stages, and the actors are accused of injuring them as part of the play between actors and audience — Fabray in a musical revue and Hibbard in the Broadway show "Cats."

GREAT TIME TO BE SILVER

- A 20-year-old man and three teenagers broke into the Moses Lake, Wash., home of Dorothy Cunningham, 75, and Ms. Marty Killinger, 61, in February, allegedly to rob them. However, both women happened to be armed and drove the guys away with warning shots. The four were arrested a short distance from the home.

- The Associated Press reported in March that Mario Delucono, 81, of New Orleans believes he can continue his avocation as a stripper for another "two, three years." According to the dispatch, "Time always has weakened his skin, there's little flab, his legs are nicely shaped, and he sports an even tan." Said a club owner. "The women went crazy over him. I call him super Mario."

- In Ashdod, Israel, a 93-year-old woman was arrested in March for peddling heroin to police officers who had knocked on her door. According to police, the woman's eyesight is failing, and she thought they were her regular customers. And in Adrian, Mich., in January, Lillian Howard, 84, was arrested for attempting to smuggle marijuana in her underwear to her son during a visit to Gas Harrison Prison.

INCOMPETENT CRIMINAL

- Jetrice Allen Thomas, 35, was arrested and charged with robbing a Signet bank in Baltimore in April. An employee called police during the robbery, and two officers on foot patrol arrived quickly to find Thomas still in the bank, standing beside a teller's station counting his money. (Thomas was also charged with robbing the same bank a month before.)

NO LONGER WEIRD

- Adding to the list of stories that were formerly weird but which now occur with such frequency that they must be retired from circulation: (17) The burglar who sneaks into a home or building intending to loot the place but who falls asleep before he can get to work, as allegedly did Brian Hodgson, 28, who was arrested in September after the ceiling at a Pompano Beach, Fla., McDonald's gave way, disturbing his slumber. And (18) the family that leaves behind one or more members at a highway rest stop and fails to realize they are short-handed until down way to the road, as happened in April to a 9-year-old boy whose father left him in Lloydminster, Manitoba, and did not miss him until he got home to Red Deer, Alberta, nearly 200 miles away.

THE LITIGIOUS SOCIETY

- Valerie Nicolescu filed a lawsuit against the Los Angeles Police Department in April for letting her son (one of the two heavily armed, armor-vested men in Feb. 28 bank robbery and shootout) bleed to death by not giving him medical care soon enough after he was shot by officers. (Nicolescu is also in court these days because police, in a separate matter, forced a mentally retarded woman in her care had been locked in a room in Nicolescu's basement along with several toilet buckets.)

- An April 3, less than 24 hours before he was due to be executed for beating three people to death with a bowling pin in 1991, Phillip Wilkinson was taken off North Carolina's death row and sent for mental evaluation because guards found two suicide notes in his cell. (Apparently, prison officials believe that a person scheduled to die the next day but who was deemed mad enough to be insane and therefore cannot be executed.) And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was scheduled to die the next day but who was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.

- Charges for a woman in March who had rough edges. He claims the town failed to maintain the sidewalk in good condition, which is not an unusual claim except that Steen is the mayor of Ipswich. And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.

- Valerie Nicolescu filed a lawsuit against the Los Angeles Police Department in April for letting her son (one of the two heavily armed, armor-vested men in Feb. 28 bank robbery and shootout) bleed to death by not giving him medical care soon enough after he was shot by officers. (Nicolescu is also in court these days because police, in a separate matter, forced a mentally retarded woman in her care had been locked in a room in Nicolescu's basement along with several toilet buckets.)

- An April 3, less than 24 hours before he was due to be executed for beating three people to death with a bowling pin in 1991, Phillip Wilkinson was taken off North Carolina's death row and sent for mental evaluation because guards found two suicide notes in his cell. (Apparently, prison officials believe that a person scheduled to die the next day but who was deemed mad enough to be insane and therefore cannot be executed.) And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was scheduled to die the next day but who was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.

- Charges for a woman in March who had rough edges. He claims the town failed to maintain the sidewalk in good condition, which is not an unusual claim except that Steen is the mayor of Ipswich. And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.

- Valerie Nicolescu filed a lawsuit against the Los Angeles Police Department in April for letting her son (one of the two heavily armed, armor-vested men in Feb. 28 bank robbery and shootout) bleed to death by not giving him medical care soon enough after he was shot by officers. (Nicolescu is also in court these days because police, in a separate matter, forced a mentally retarded woman in her care had been locked in a room in Nicolescu's basement along with several toilet buckets.)

- An April 3, less than 24 hours before he was due to be executed for beating three people to death with a bowling pin in 1991, Phillip Wilkinson was taken off North Carolina's death row and sent for mental evaluation because guards found two suicide notes in his cell. (Apparently, prison officials believe that a person scheduled to die the next day but who was deemed mad enough to be insane and therefore cannot be executed.) And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was scheduled to die the next day but who was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.

- Charges for a woman in March who had rough edges. He claims the town failed to maintain the sidewalk in good condition, which is not an unusual claim except that Steen is the mayor of Ipswich. And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.

- Valerie Nicolescu filed a lawsuit against the Los Angeles Police Department in April for letting her son (one of the two heavily armed, armor-vested men in Feb. 28 bank robbery and shootout) bleed to death by not giving him medical care soon enough after he was shot by officers. (Nicolescu is also in court these days because police, in a separate matter, forced a mentally retarded woman in her care had been locked in a room in Nicolescu's basement along with several toilet buckets.)

- An April 3, less than 24 hours before he was due to be executed for beating three people to death with a bowling pin in 1991, Phillip Wilkinson was taken off North Carolina's death row and sent for mental evaluation because guards found two suicide notes in his cell. (Apparently, prison officials believe that a person scheduled to die the next day but who was deemed mad enough to be insane and therefore cannot be executed.) And on April 1 in Texas, convicted murderer David Lee Herman was scheduled to die the next day but who was given his lethal injection. And on April 1, Leslie Joseph Menen, 28, was sentenced to probation in Regina, Saskatchewan, for shoplifting, but on condition that he dress himself in other than designer-label clothing for the next two years. Moran is said to find Nike and Chicago Bulls items irresistible.
Senior-laden 1997 awaits UCF volleyball recognized foreign aid services of the student’s home country are not counted against those five years. Because of this by-law, Menchikova’s one-year of military service in Russia will not cost her a third year of eligibility at UCF.

From PAGE 12

Coach Laura Smith feels Menchikova’s return to the senior-laden team will only increase UCF’s chances of making it farther into the post-season.

“With Renata getting to come back this year, it most certainly will help the team,” said Smith, whose Knight squads have yet to lose to a TAAC opponent in her five seasons at the helm.

“It’s like the icing on the cake for us and could not have happened to a better person.”

Off the court, Menchikova has been a Dean’s List student and a two-year TAAC All-Academic honoree. She also has a 3.4 gpa in a double major in Management Information Services and Computer Sciences.

On the court, Metzcus said their team leader is all business.

“Even though she is one of the best hitters in the country, she is not arrogant in the sense she would boss her teammates around, but she leads by example,” Metzcus said.

After all the effort spent on building towards a third and final season, Menchikova is just happy to play again.

“When you first start, you have to learn how to play the college game and learn your coach’s system,” she said. “It would have been unfair, now that we are seniors, not to utilize everyone’s experience and have a great season.”

Menchikova said she will enjoy returning to UCF for learning, as well as athletics.

“It’s a good school for business and computer science and I like the area,” she said.

“I don’t mind staying for awhile longer.”

Kerri Cope (left) positions herself to regain possession for UCF after the scrum with FAU.

Women get revenge from rival FSU

From PAGE 12

come out and keep trying to do better,” said Koheler. “After the first one [the loss to the Pelicans] we looked pretty decent, but we really didn’t have our act together. The third game [the win over Orlando] we looked really sharp and we polished a couple of things up and got a little bit better as the day went on.

“In the fourth game we kept all the starters in, and it’s only 14 minutes so, it was easy to win.”

Koheler said that the heat definitely played a factor in the earlier losses, but as the day wore on and the wins began, it was less of a factor.

“It was a factor in the first couple games, but we sort of just [tried] to get more used to the heat,” Koheler said. “We got a little more hydrated up for the third and fourth games, but, I’ve lived in Florida my whole life and I’m still not used to it.”

The tournament was probably UCF’s last chance to qualify for the Southeastern Regional Tournament. The club will continue to participate throughout the summer in various tournaments including one in Naples, Fl. in late July and the Cape Fear tournament held in late August.

UCF club officials commented that tournament competitors were shocked at how well the tournament was organized. The tournament, from the painted lines on the playing field to the concession stand providing food and refreshments, is run entirely by the UCF men and women’s rugby clubs.

Club officials went on to state that with the poor quality of other tournaments in the south, the Todd Miller Sevens tournament is widely regarded as the premiere Sevens tournament.

The tournament, which included college clubs from USF, FSU, UF and other club teams such as the Miami Rugby Club, the Jacksonville Rugby Club, and the Palm Beach Rugby Club, is expected to have at least equalled the $2000 mark from last year’s tournament although no official dollar amount was released. All proceeds from the tournament go to its namesake, Todd Miller, a former UCF rugby club member who incurred a paralyzing injury while participating with the club.

Men to play out string after poor tournament end of the trizone as the pursuing defender collapsed behind her. Her try as time expired gave UCF a 10-7 victory.

From PAGE 12

Cope, the co-founder of UCF’s women’s rugby club, said that defeating FSU was a goal for the team as soon as they knew they would be facing the Lady Seminoles.

“It [beating FSU] was very important to us. They’re the ones who won the tournament last year, so all we wanted to do was beat them,” Cope said. “It was even sweeter [to beat them] and watch the girl [who was pursuing me] fall.”

UCF finished the tournament at 3-0, with the other two wins coming in 10-0 and 29-0 defeat of FAU. This tournament was the club’s first test of the season, and Cope said the club performed as well as could be expected.

“We played together as a team, everybody was where they needed to be, and everything clicked,” Cope said.

But the title did not come without some adversity. UCF Seven’s rookie Tara Thompson sustained a knee injury during the FSU game. The extent of Thompson’s injury was unknown, but may have suffered an torn Anterior Cruciate Ligament.

The club will travel to Naples with the men’s rugby club in late July to participate in the Naples Rugby Tournament and may also attend the Tallahassee Invitational Tournament on August 16.
Women’s rugby club wins tournament, more respect

By JEFF CASE
Staff Writer

As the new kids on the block in the women’s rugby circuit in Florida, UCF has found whatever respect they may have earned around the state has been hard-fought.

Case in point: in the final of the Qualifier round of the tournament, but to win the round and earn a berth for their full rugby squad in the Southeastern Regional Tournament held in fall of 1997.

But with temperatures exceeding 90 degrees for most of the day combined with a tough early tournament schedule, the heat of insecurity set in. With two straight losses in Qualifying round play, the club found themselves and their plans in shambles.

For the coaching staff, it feels much better as the new kids on the block in the women’s rugby circuit in Florida, UCF has found whatever respect they may have earned around the state has been hard-fought.

Case in point: the rivalry between UCF and FSU.

Over a year ago, UCF’s women’s club traveled to Tallahassee to participate in a tournament held on the FSU campus against the FSU women. When UCF arrived, they found that the hosts were not present and did not show up until several hours later.

UCF, having paid the tournament fees and sat through a grueling bus ride to Tallahassee, felt disrespected and spurned by their competitors. As the team entered the Todd Miller Seven’s Tournament last weekend, the club saw the June 21 tournament as a golden opportunity to payback their in-state rivals.

The club converted on this opportunity by defeating FSU, the defending champions of women’s competition at Todd Miller, in dramatic fashion.

With FSU leading 7-5 late in the second half, UCF needed to make a move for the FSU trionze (goal) soon. UCF got their chance late in the period when UCF’s Kerri Cope picked up a loose ball and began running towards the trionze. With an FSU defender on her heels, Cope put forth an extra burst of speed and touched the ball in the near corner.

As the ball went in, Cope, Kerri Cope put forth an extra burst of speed and touched the ball in the near corner.

Photo by MIKE MARSHALL

Evading a tackle from a member of the Pelican Rugby Club, UCF’s Eic Czachowski looks for an open teammate.

See WOMEN, Page 11

Men’s rugby club feels the heat at own tournament

By JEFF CASE
Staff Writer

In Florida, the heat can make even the clearest situation hazy.

Just ask the men’s rugby club.

Entering the sixth annual Todd Miller Seven’s tournament on June 21, the club had two goals: To not make the finals in the Qualifier round of the tournament, but to win the round and earn a berth for their full rugby squad in the Southeastern Regional Tournament held in fall of 1997.

But with temperatures exceeding 90 degrees for most of the day combined with a tough early tournament schedule, the heat is a constant factor in the tournament.

By defeating the Orlando Rugby Club’s second team 15-0 and then rolling over the Pelicanos Rugby Club 29-5, UCF was able to leave the tournament with a 2-2 record while also improving their overall season record to 3-5.

UCF’s losses, a 14-0 defeat at the hands of the Pelicanos Rugby Club, and a 19-5 loss to the Naples Rugby Club, played a role in the team’s motivation to finish strong, said Jon Koholer.

“After the first two losses, we wanted to...

See MEN, Page 11

Volleyball captain ruled eligible for senior season

By DEREK CONSOLINO
Sports Editor

Title IX must be treating male and female athletes the same: The NCAA almost declared ineligible the team leader from UCF’s most celebrated women’s sport.

Renata Menchikova, the reigning TAAC volleyball player of the year and Golden Knight team captain, will have another year of eligibility after UCF petitioned the NCAA on the basis of Menchikova’s Russian military service.

“If feels great to be back,” Menchikova said.

For the coaching staff, it feels much better.

“With seven seniors on the team, a genuine, talented year is coming for us,” assistant coach Miriam Metzcus said.

“The players are really tight after their years together. Nothing can break that now that we have our team leader back.”

Despite her coaches’ confidence in winning the case, the reigning TAAC player of the year could not help but be nervous until the announcement came in mid June.

“I wasn’t quite sure what would happen,” Menchikova said.

“Back in February I started wondering if I would get to play again.”

Those reservations had Menchikova preparing for an alternate future with the Knights.

“I was ready to be an assistant coach,” she said.

“This year, with all the seniors coming back, we should be able to reach, the level we have always wanted to and that’s getting past the first round of the NCAA’s. After coming up with my teammates, I wanted to be around when it happened.”

Menchikova, who started her schooling in Russia in 1992, served in the Russian Army in 1994 and enrolled at UCF in 1995. The NCAA By-Law 14.2.1 states a student-athlete must complete their eligibility within five years of enrolling at a collegiate institution.

However, time spent in the armed services, on official church missions or with