The UCF School of Optics celebrated its recent establishment as a formal UCF school this week by hosting an optics conference, which drew about 300 people.

"The conference was a bit of official recognition of the establishment of the School of Optics, but mostly it was a celebration of the discipline of optics," M.J. Soileau, director of the School of Optics, said.

The conference was held Jan. 11 and 12 in the Student Union and featured prominent speakers, including three Nobel Laureates. One of these, Nicolaas Bloembergen of Harvard University, chaired the conference.

UCF faculty and students were pleased with the quality and stature of the conference.

"I am particularly thankful to Nobel Laureate Nico Bloembergen and Professor Eric Van Stryland, of our faculty, for putting together a conference program of exceptional quality for the benefit of our students, faculty and guests," said Soileau. "I am most proud of the fact that our peers in Optics now recognize UCF as one of the top three schools in the country in optics. This has been our goal since coming to UCF 12 years ago." UCF Provost Gary E. Whitehouse was also supportive of the conference. "It is a tribute to the School of Optics that most of the leaders in optics participated in the conference," he said. "I feel the conference was definitely a high point for UCF and the optics community in Central Florida."

The conference ran from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Golden Rule violations for fall '98 short of last year

UCF took formal disciplinary action against 113 students during the fall of 1998. This is five less than the 118 students disciplined during all of last year.

Dr. Garth Jenkins, associate dean of students, said it is hard to pinpoint the exact cause for the increase. Jenkins said he thought the growth of the student population and the zero tolerance policy of the UCF Police Department were key factors.

Indeed, the population has risen from 28,302 in the fall of 1997 to 29,838 in the fall of 1998.

Sgt. Tom Gorbas of UCF's Crime Prevention Unit said the police department is having to be more aggressive due to the demands of society. "That's just the nature of the beast. The university is expanding and the community around us is growing."

The majority of the violations are for misuse of student ID cards. Jenkins said most of these violations were of people getting fake IDs not only for the purchase of alcohol, but also to get others admitted into the football games at the Citrus Bowl. "We are getting more and more serious about it," Jenkins said. "The police in particular with the fake IDs."

Jenkins said most cases involving the second largest group of violations, the misuse and abuse of alcoholic beverages, were reported by the UCF Police Department.

However, university policy states that UCF regulations apply to student behavior on and off campus.

If a student is arrested off campus, it is up to the discretion of the arresting agency whether or not to forward the report to UCF. Therefore, a student could receive judicial punishment and punishment from the university. "Most of the time we deal with Orange County," Jenkins said. "They are not a required to, but if they feel we need to know about something, they will forward the report to us and we will take action based on that."

Academic dishonesty is plagiarism and cheating. There is not enough data to know how big a problem it is on campus, according to Jenkins, because most instructors choose not to report it. "They handle it themselves, and it's really not fair to the students. We are working on educating the faculty more as to the procedures."

Jenkins said the six thefts reported are primarily from the library and the six abuses of the computer system deal with people downloading software, such as games.

According to Jenkins, about 80 percent of the violations were committed by freshmen and sophomores, with the majority being freshmen.

Students will often receive multiple sanctions for violating the same rule. "Sanctions range from an official disciplinary warning to suspension and expulsion."

Discipline at UCF is handled one of two ways. Either administratively with Jenkins as the hearing officer, or with the Student Judicial Council, a group of students elected by the Student Senate.

Jenkins said sanctions as serious as suspensions are almost always handled by the Judicial Council. "That's a pretty serious decision and I think more than one person needs to look at it."

Consistency is something Jenkins said he tries to follow when considering punishment. Because the university does not have guidelines like the civil and criminal courts, each case can be dealt with individually.

"UCF is getting bigger geometrically," he said, "and any opportunity we have to look at students as individuals, we try to do it. This is certainly one area where we can." Jenkins said university discipline focuses more on education. Depending on the severity of the violation, students are often required to attend seminars, workshops, or classes, or perform community service. Most of the alcohol violations involve a student having to attend the Wellness Center's alcohol and chemical drug program. Community service is usually related to the violation. Jenkins said if it is an alcohol violation, the student may have to volunteer at a halfway house. "We try to make it an educational process," he said. "It's punishment, sure it is. I mean, who's kidding who? But I have a lot more latitude than the civil and criminal courts do."

Punishments handed out during the fall were:
• six students received official disciplinary warnings
• nine were placed on disciplinary probation
• six were ordered to perform community service
• eight paid restitution
• 30 had to complete educational requirements of workshops or papers
• six received official disciplinary warnings

Many students admit that they have heard of the Golden Rule, but have never tried to follow it. "And any opportunity we have to let the campus know that the university does have expectations and there are standards of behavior. The university does care and we'll deal with the people who don't adhere to the rules."

Senior Kymbrel Brown said students should take it upon themselves to know what's expected of them. "I think the university is a miniature of the world. Just like in the world, there are rules and regulations so there should be at the university too."
Short first week hurts spring rush

Shelley Wilson
Staff Writer

Rush this semester did not have the impact it usually does, as it was plagued by a shorter rush week and poor advertising. Jaime Halscott, president of Pi Kappa Alpha, said, "Being on the Interfraternity Council for most of my Greek life, I have seen several rushes. This year's spring rush was unfortunately doomed to fail because of its timing and lack of advertisement. I have faith that as this young IFC executive board gains experience they will be able to plan a more effective rush week."

Interfraternity President Scott Baker said that although it was a short week for rush, most of the chapter members were happy. "I think rush went well and overall they're satisfied with it." The IFC did look at extending rush for the next week. "After talking with the chapters, there was no need to since chapters can give informal bids all that week and throughout the semester," Baker said.

Austin Reeves, co-chair for the Rush Committee for Delta Tau Delta, thinks that continuing rush would have been a problem for his chapter. "Since we are a smaller organization, money would have been an issue," he said. Reeves said the numbers were down across campus for rush.

There was a miscommunication of when school actually started

- Rob Tessmer

The total number of rushers pledging this semester was about 150 according to the vice president of recruitment for IFC. Rob Tessmer, Tessmer said the number was very good, considering it was spring rush. "Spring rush just fell at a bad time. There was a miscommunication of when school actually started. The IFC was told last fall that school would start on Jan. 4 (Monday), so we planned Rush Kickoff for Jan. 6 (Wednesday)," Tessmer said.

Tessmer said he is looking at new and different ways to make spring rush more effective. "We are looking forward to making spring rush bigger and better because there's no reason it should be significantly less than fall rush," he said.

Junior Rubenstein of Kappa Sigma said the goal for rush and the fraternities is not the numbers, but the quality of the new members. "We look at their grades, leadership, and school activities, and try to find good guys to join," Rubenstein said.

Luis Velaquez, vice president for Delta Upsilon, said the stereotype of fraternities was also something dealt with at spring rush. He said, "Students are hesitant to join because it's [the stereotype] the biggest thing we have to compete with. We offer so much more than just a party, and we emphasize that with students."
Clubs and organizations set up tables to pass out information to students and win new members.

Clubs use event to inform students on their activities

Orlando and "Still Life" from Jacksonville. Dave Scharf, a DJ at the Headlights nightclub in Orlando, was also at the event.

The event was called KnightLife for the first time last semester; in previous years it had been the Activities Fair. "I had a vision in an airport for more involvement calling it KnightLife. I see it as a huge success," Student Body President Jason Murphy said.

This year's event was also the first time in a decade that it was not canceled because of bad weather.

Meg Dutnell, associate director for Campus Activities, said: "This is my third year here and five or six times in a row it was canceled due to rain or the cold. This type of event you can't move inside."

"This event showcases the wide variety of choices of things to do," Dutnell added.

The other director of the event, Courtney Martin, director of Campus Involvement, was in charge of the Student Activities. Martin handed out nearly 70 pizzas and 600 chicken wings.

"The full event was very successful and we wanted to set up another event in the spring and create a party atmosphere," Martin said. "We invited all the clubs and organizations to attend and we had around 60 responses."

Some of the clubs represented were: Alpha Phi Omega, the Rugby Club, the Society of Women Engineers, Water Polo, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Tau Kwon Do, Music Fraternity for Women, and the Environmental Society.

The Student Alumni Association was also there to recruit students and help prepare them for after graduation. This organization offers "real world" connections by offering mentoring programs, seminars, and invitations to alumni events.

"This is a mini-alumni group and it is open for students from freshman to graduates, so we're here recruiting new members and directors," Carla Cordoba, the program director for the Student Alumni Association, said.

Volunteer UCF was also at KnightLife to promote involvement in service projects.

Gina Weiss, a member of the board of directors for Volunteer UCF, said: "A lot of students are obligated to join, but we have events once a month through SPARK, so they can participate and not be obligated for the rest of their school life. This event does help with student awareness."

The Campus Activities Board had a booth and wanted students to know that CAB is about more than Homecoming.

Jaime Endick, director for Popular Entertainment, said: "We're here for the students and since attendance is down this time of year, we wanted to promote all of the events because we do have a lot coming up."

Reach Peer Education was there promoting its upcoming events. "We have a table every Wednesday to promote health services and health peer education on issues such as alcohol, drugs, birth control, and STD's," Melanie Downs, a Reach peer educator, said.

The UCF Membrane Research Focus Group received a $60,000 contract from Hydranautics Membrane Manufacturer to test a new ultrafiltration beginning this month.

The focus group, formally established in the summer of 1998, is comprised of civil and environmental engineering professors Seung-Hong and James Taylor, engineering professor A.A. Randall and molecular and microbiology professor Saleh Naser. Hydranautics Membrane Manufacturer is the principal investigator and Taylor and Hong are the co-principal investigators of the project.

Naser's role is to inject pathogens into the water and pour it through the filter. Then he tests the water to determine if the water is pure. The project is to be completed by the end of this year.

In addition to this project, two active projects are also in session.

The first of these two projects, funded by American Waterworks Association Research Foundation, studies the "causes and control of particle fouling in membrane filtration: bench and pilot scale evaluations." This research is being conducted by Hong who is an expert in the development and application of membrane processes for water and waste water treatment.

Taylor is working alongside Hong as co-principal investigator, in a partnership with Yale University. Ten water utilities nationwide are also participating in the study.

Taylor has more than 25 years of experience in water treatment and has been with the university since 1977. He is currently the director of the Environmental Systems Engineering Institute. His research at UCF centers on the study of the treatment of drinking water.

Randall's research interests include microbial quality and regrowth in drinking water, advanced water treatment and groundwater bioremediation.

The fourth member of the group, Naser, is a participating investigator at the Center for Diagnostic and Drug Development.

Claudia Romero, a molecular biology and microbiology graduate student, demonstrates the ultrafilter project.

ALEXANDER MELENDEZ CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Numerous memorials across the country celebrated MLK Day this year. At UCF, students gathered Monday to celebrate the life and mission of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The African American Student Union held a Freedom March across the UCF campus, then gathered for a time of reflection on the civil rights leader and his achievement.

The march went from the Reflection Pond to the Student Auditorium, where the second half of the day's festivities, Soulful Expressions, took place. Soulful Expressions is an event where students can reflect on the times and what exactly King's work did for society.

The African American Student Union said students need to express their feelings on what has taken place in the past few decades, and what has taken place in their lives. The Freedom March and Soulful Expressions are meant to be the conduits for students to vent their feelings.

In 1929, Martin Luther King Jr. was born the eldest son to Martin Luther Sr. and Alberta Williams King. His father was a pastor of Ebenezer Baptist church in Atlanta, Ga. As such, he levied a strong influence in the community and on his young son's development. King Jr. excelled in the segregated schools of Atlanta.

By the age of 15, he had been accepted by Morehouse College in Atlanta. At 18, King graduated from Crozer Theological Seminary and became a fully ordained Baptist minister. He later went on to earn a doctorate in systematic theology from Boston University in 1955.

Also in 1955, King helped head up the Montgomery Improvement Association and become president of the group shortly after. He led the famous bus protest sparked by Rosa Parks when she refused to relinquish her seat to a white passenger at the order of the bus driver. In 1957, King helped found the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, an organization of black churches and ministers that aimed specifically at challenging segregation.

King organized numerous protest campaigns through the SCLC, the most famous being the march in Birmingham, Ala. King encouraged young children and high school students to attend the protest, which was met with violence by the city police. The police commissioner sent men with attack dogs and high pressure water hoses in an attempt to stop the efforts of the protesters.

This action backfired in King's favor. The next day, newspapers all over the country ran pictures of people pinned to buildings by the hoses and small children being mauled by police attack dogs.

Perhaps King's most famous speech came on Aug. 28, 1963. The "I Have A Dream" speech was the keynote address to an audience of more than 200,000 civil rights supporters in Washington, D.C. The speech, along with the march, were instrumental to Congress passing the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

On April 4, 1968, a sniper in Memphis, Tenn. assassinated King.

In 1983, Congress made his birthday a federal holiday.
UCF music student pours his heart into his work

I remember my first morning of school since I had moved to South Florida. It was Chris Cimaglia’s 5th grade home-room, and I had known no one. I guess around the room looking for someone worth talking to. That’s when I noticed the fat kid, with long blond hair, making faces at the teacher. He was a little funny. I want to be his friend.” I remember thinking. As it turns out, Chris became my best friend to this day and has been a major influence on me for over half of my life.

There’s no answer to the door. I know that Chris Cimaglia is home because I can hear his electric guitar screaming. Good thing I have a spare key, I’ll just let myself in. I walk into Chris’s bedroom to find him jamming on his guitar under a framed portrait of John Lennon.

Chris doesn’t even notice my presence as I sit on his neatly made waterbed to observe. There are four guitars against the wall under a picture of his Golden Retriever, Sarah. After all, Sarah is part of the family. The single most important woman of Chris’s 23 years has been his mother. She’s great. Chris takes it for granted how much she believes in him. His mother is always positive and the foundation of his life.”

When Chris got into his band, Howlround, Each of the four members got to contribute original music as well as their own lyrics. These guys played regularly at “The Blarney Stone” and “The Surf Cafe” in South Beach for years. Chris usually stayed hidden behind his guitar. However, upon occasion, he would step up to the microphone for a song or two.

I have personally become dependent on Chris and the other members of the band. Originally, I was using Pink Floyd to set the mood for one of my skydiving documentaries. However, my present outlook could not allow me to use any band who was signed to a label. Fine, no problem. Ever since all of my background music has been supplied by Howlround, the look and the sound of the band can be compared with today’s “grunge” superstars.

This day the band is split up with everyone going to college, and even the state. “I miss the band. When I listen to them, I really miss playing with the guys,” Chris said.

Now Chris is up in Orlando for music school. The UCF Music Department prepares students for performance and music education. The department has a deserved reputation for high standards. Chris is among the high number of prospective students auditioning this year. Along with the number of students, the Music Department has increased its faculty with the addition of new professors, teachers and staff. The department is authorized to plan for a master’s degree to be implemented in the Fall of 2002.

“Skills and habits learned from studying music here have contributed to the success in our student’s careers,” said Deborah Ryan, associate professor of the Music Department.

Chris’s education is his art, and his art involves round music. I cannot relate because my art is different. Chris has made the decision to pour my heart into my work. After all, Chris, how Lennon did it, and that’s how Chris makes his art.

Holiday drive collects over 2,000 toys for underprivileged kids

One of UCF’s volunteer organizations, Circle K, collected over 2,036 stuffed toys for underprivileged children for the Christmas/Hanukkah holidays.

Eight organizations across the state received the toys, including Toys for Tots, Boystown, Reelin’ Christian Migrant Association and UCF’s Creative School.

UCF professors participated in the collection, urging students to bring in toys. They were: Dr. Sutton, Dr. Finn, Ms. Jordan, Dr. Scott Smith, and Dr. Mike Luckett.

This is the second year for the drive. Last year, about 750 toys were collected.

I suppose if I really tried, I could care less about the NBA than I do. But as it turns out, I am busy with my 15-hour per week part-time job, my 25-hour per week part-time job, my wife and my 3-year-old daughter. In my freelance writing class, I was supposed to read 3 issues each of two separate magazines. That’s six magazines in one week. I still have issues of Outside, Backpacker and National Geographic languishing on my bookshelves since 1996. I can’t read one magazine in a week.

And that’s just one class. Plus, I live in Brevard County and my major is not offered at UCF Brevard. Every day during my 45 to 60 minute commute, I pass scores of cars with Brevard County license plates and UCF parking decals. Furthermore, I do not think I am the only student with a family to support. So when Tony Mejia laments the lack of student support for UCF’s basketball, I take exception, not offense.

According to UCF’s Public Relations Website, 7,184 UCF students are from Orange County, 505 from Osceola County, 2 Research Plus, and 3,204 from Volusia County. That means the commuter campus nickname comes from somewhere else. Perhaps this is where the commuter campus nickname comes from.

“If a large crowd of supporters cheering in approval is an adequate reward for their work,” wrote Mejia, “then they haven’t been rewarded.”

I think it’s wonderful how successful both Kirk Speraw and Lynn Buri have been in cultivating a solid, winning basketball program. However, UCF is currently a Level 2 Research University Carnegie classification. That means UCF receives $125 - $25 million in federal support from research and development. And we award at least 5000 scholarships a year.

How did we get here? By commitment to high academic standards and investment in research in my guess.

Well, according to the 1997-1998 UCF Graduate Catalog, three institutes-the Florida Solar Energy Center, the Center for Research and Education in Optics and Lasers, and the Institute for Simulation and Training account for more than half of all UCF’s sponsored research money.

To be sure, everyone wants his or her university to be nationally recognized. But remember when Chico State in California was nationally recognized as the No. 1 party school in America? And Kent State? “Four dead in Ohio,” sang Neil Young. How about UC Berkeley? Free speech riots. And does anyone know the name of Harvard’s number one sports hero?

How about Yale? Former President George Bush went there—and, I’m told, he did play baseball.

My point is, there are many athletes attending UCF for the intercollegiate sports program. But many others came here strictly for an education. So, the reason they, or we, are staying away from games is not because UCF isn’t “in a real” conference. It’s because we have “real” commitments to families, studies and jobs.

Still, the game will be televised, so I can show my support that way. Good luck, Knights!

The soul of a champion: a letter to Michael Jordan

Andrew Bernstein
College Press Exchange

Dear Mr. Jordan - or if I may - Michael,

I would like to wish you well on your retirement and to thank you.

Thank you for winning six NBA titles and earning hundreds of millions of dollars. If you ask why I thank you when obviously you did it for yourself, not for me, I will respond: That is exactly why I thank you. I can see the pride you take in your achievements - in being the greatest ever in your field - but I wonder if you realize all that you have to be proud of.

Most people, unfortunately, do not push themselves to excel - and the problem is not a lack of capacity. Over a period of 20 years as a teacher, I have observed many talented students who squander their gifts. It is hard work for a man to actualize his potential. Thomas Edison defined genius as 1 percent inspiration and 99 percent perspiration. Many of us - perhaps most - do not wish to perceive that profoundly. But yes, Michael, do not share such a reluctance.

When the teen-age boy, cut from his high school basketball team, practices hours every day before school, he displays his work ethic. When the University of North Carolina hero "husts his butt" at Bobby Knight's drill-instructor-style practice sessions in order to win the Olympic gold, he reaffirms that commitment. When the greatest player in the history of basketball continues, at age 35, to out-bustle far younger players - on defense as well as offense - and to lead his aging team to yet another championship, he surpasses the meaning of such concepts as "dedication" and "perseverance": he sets an example and a standard for which, perhaps, mankind has not yet developed a vocabulary.

Most of us, unlike you, are mere mortals; we cannot fly. But we can aspire. We can push ourselves to the limit of our ability and achieve the highest level possible to us. When we see you playing in a championship game with a fever that would keep most men in bed - when we see that, physically, you are almost too weak to stand, but you still push yourself to score 38 points and hit the game-winning shot - it moves me to ask: What can I achieve if I dedicate myself similarly to my own work and life?

It is true that basketball, like any sport, is just a game. Mankind's survival does not rest on the outcome of the World Series or the Super Bowl - not in the same way that it rests on the ability to grow food, cure diseases or invent new technologies. But in a broader sense, the world does depend on the spirit at the root of any athletic contest; the dedication to excellence. The superb athlete striving for a championship or a gold medal is a publicly visible symbol of achievement. He (or she) is in a sense a man of dignity and stature. I hope you realize that this is the source of your enormous popularity.

There are few heroes today. Great men are no longer revered in our society; they are derided. Martha Stewart is accused of arrogance for showing people how they could lead more beautiful lives; you are attacked for alleged immoral acts, they seem determined to betray their admirers. But you stand high above them as a man of dignity and stature. I hope you realize that this is the source of your enormous popularity.

The American people sense, in some visceral, non-intellectual way, that their heroes are being taken away from them. They see all around them, in books and in films, stories about losers and low-lifes. It is clear to them why ours has been called the "era of the anti-hero." They do not like it.

This is the reason so many people read only the sports page of the newspapers, and why sports are so popular in our country: it is the last arena of heroism tolerated and permitted by the leaders of our culture. As public figures, you - and a select few of your outstanding colleagues - are the standard-bearers of man's pursuit of excellence. Your larger-than-life stature serves as a beacon to all of us who would be the heroes of our own lives. As the only man I know of who has a statue of himself outside his place of employment - and who has earned it - you are a concrete reminder of how much is open, potentially, to us all.

As Ayn Rand stated in her novel, "Atlas Shrugged": "The sight of an achievement is the greatest gift a human being could offer to others." You have offered such a gift, abundantly, to us. You will continue to inspire those of us who, like you, hold a high estimate of man's proper stature and yearn to attain it. This is the full achievement for which you have a right to be proud. And this is why all Americans should say "Thank you."
Editor of AMA Journal fired after sex story

LAURA BEIL
COLLEGE PRESS EXCHANGE

The editor of "The Journal of the American Medical Association," one of the world's most prestigious medical journals, was fired Friday after publishing what his bosses considered a too-timely study about sex.

The AMA said the report, in which 59 percent of college students said that oral sex is "my confession," was fired Friday after publishing the report, in which 59 percent of college students said that oral sex is "my confession," in the February issue of the journal.

"Publishing this survey this way at this time imposes "JAMA" into the highly charged political debate surrounding the impeachment proceedings now under way in the U.S. Senate," said Dr. Ratcliffe Anderson Jr., executive vice president of the AMA. The study will appear in the Jan. 20 issue of the journal.

Dr. George Lundberg wasn't just fired over this one article; but for "my observations of his performance over seven months which led to a loss of trust and confidence," said Dr. Anderson, who was appointed to his post in June. "I just cannot go into the granular detail over what's behind this."

A written statement from Dr. Lundberg's attorney said the former editor "is considering all of his options at this time, including litigation." "Dr. Lundberg has enjoyed a long and eminent career as a physician, researcher and educator in, and ambassador for, the medical profession," the statement said. "For the last seventeen years, he has served with integrity, honor and fervor independence as editor of "JAMA" and other AMA-related journals."

It is this independence that may have irritated the AMA leadership, his colleagues said.

"He's been close to being fired on a number of occasions," said Dr. Andrew Relman, retired long-time editor of "The New England Journal of Medicine," which is the nation's other major medical journal. "He's been chastised before by the AMA for publishing certain things."

Although Dr. Relman said he would not have published the sex survey — simply because journals typically can publish more scientifically significant submissions — he called the firing a bad mistake.

"I think that this is going to have a backlash effect on the world's most prestigious medical journal," Dr. Relman said. "I think George made a poor editorial judgment, but not so egregious a one that it merited this action, particularly when it gives the message that the editors of the journal are not independent."

Although the AMA publishes the journal, "JAMA" operates largely free of its political influence, its president said. "This independence is one of our assets as an organization, and we protect it jealously."

The research that led to Dr. Lundberg's firing was conducted "to determine which interactions individuals would consider as having had sex," the study reported. Scientists from the Kinsey Institute for Research in Sex, Gender and Reproduction in Bloomington, Ind., surveyed 500 undergraduates in 1991. The paper says it attempts to address "current public debate regarding whether oral sex constitutes having 'had sex.'"

Scientific research has become entwined in political debates before. A study from the British journal "Nature," made public just before last November's U.S. elections, concluded that Thomas Jefferson fathered a son of one of his slaves. An editorial published with the study made references not only to the past and the present but to the current scientific debate.

The AMA's Dr. Anderson said he was not surprised to see Dr. Lundberg go.

"If I had had a vote, I would have voted in favor of this happening," said Dr. David Vanderpool, a Dallas physician who is also an elected delegate to the AMA. "I think it's been time for a change for a while."

He said that AMA delegates during past meetings have tried to discipline or replace Dr. Lundberg when he has apparently questioned AMA positions through the pages of his journal.

"Dr. Lundberg has been insubordinate and unable to support the AMA House of Delegates in his own editorials in "JAMA,"" Dr. Vanderpool said.

"We will not support his views, and we will not allow him to undermine the AMA's credibility with our members and the public."

The AMA publishes the journal, "JAMA," which is the nation's other major medical journal. Its policy states that peer-reviewed studies and other articles represent the opinions of the authors and do not reflect the official policy of the American Medical Association unless specifically stated. The AMA, with about 200,000 members, is the nation's most politically influential doctors group.

A local AMA representative supported the decision and said he was not surprised to see Dr. Lundberg go.

"If I had had a vote, I would have voted in favor of this happening," said Dr. David Vanderpool, a Dallas physician who is also an elected delegate to the AMA. "I think it's been time for a change for a while."

Princeton president wants to end ‘Nude Olympics’

CHRISTINE TATUM
COLLEGE PRESS EXCHANGE

PRINCETON, N.J. - The “Nude Olympics,” a long-standing tradition at Princeton University in which students run naked through the semester’s first snowfall, should stop before someone gets killed, the university’s president says.

In a letter printed in the student newspaper, President Harold Shapiro said the university is considering banning the event after six students were hospitalized with severe alcohol poisoning and four more were treated at the university’s student health center following the latest raucous running on Jan. 8.

“This past weekend’s experience provided a grave reminder of the serious risks that the Nude Olympics pose to our students’ health and safety, largely because of the excessive and indiscriminate use of alcohol,” Shapiro wrote. “Moreover, several of the college masters report behavior that was truly disgraceful and unacceptable.”

About 350 students bared all, and hundreds more clamored to watch on Friday, but what started out as fun and exhilarating quickly got out of hand, many students said.

Anna Levy-Warren, 19, said she ran with her friends wearing nothing but shoes, socks, a hat, body glitter and a tiger; the school’s mascot, painted on her back. While making her way through the courtyard, she said she saw a man peeling on a woman; another man masturbating; a couple having sex; men gropping women; drunk students drifted in and out of consciousness and several people slipping on the ice and snow.

“I was in a mob porn-plot grabbing desperately at arms and shoulders to keep myself from being trampled,” she wrote to the student newspaper, the Daily Princetonian. “I felt a sense of shame. I think many people there felt ashamed.”

Nevertheless, many students want the event to continue, claiming that it is an important opportunity to bond and soak up the college experience with classmates.

“I look like an idiot trying to defend people’s right to run around naked, but if students see this as a tradition, the administration needs to do anything possible to make it safe,” said student body president-elect Spencer Merriweather.

University officials have tried to regulate the event in the past few years by working with student organizers and hiring photographers and television cameras. The university also added security, extra lighting and emergency personnel to make the run safer for students.

As far as Shapiro is concerned, the efforts have failed. He has asked the university’s deans of students and a group of faculty, students and staff to study the event over the next several weeks and come up with “options for preventing this tragedy before it happens.” Shapiro said he wants to resolve the issue with university trustees early in the spring semester.
Robin Williams exposes himself

Robin Williams believes in the ability of laughter to heal.

"I think it's powerful. I've seen it one-on-one, on a personal level, with Chris Reeve," says the funnyman, referring to his paralyzed close friend. "I've seen the effect it has on children, on Make-A-Wish kids, on kids I've visited on children's wards. I've seen it with people just dealing with each other one-on-one. It's not so much laughter as human connection. It works."

Another person who believes deeply in the concept of laughter as medicine is Hunter "Patch" Adams, a once-suicidal man who, while institutionalized in a mental institution in the 1960s, discovered his ability to listen to people, to help people, to make people laugh. Once released, he attended the Medical College of Virginia, where he fought a system that sought to take the humanity out of healthcare that reduced hospitalized patients to mere body numbers or conditions. He formed a free clinic, often sported a bright red rubber nose, and, in the William's phrase, strove to connect with everyone he encountered.

"Patch is an outrageous guy," says an unusually soft-spoken Williams. "This movie covers just the beginning, his time at medical school. When we did 'Awakenings,' Oliver Sacks was there every day. Patch came to this set three or four times. This movie is kind of the essence of Patch. He's got two great things: this amazing comedic spirit and a great level of compassion."

"He's physically different from me. He's about six-foot-two and he looks like Salvador Dalí and (the clown) Emmett Kelly had a kid. His desire was always to push the system, in any way possible. That could be irritating. We couldn't show everything. (Playing Adams) I could be outrageous at times, when he's funny and clowns around, but it's all based upon the interaction with patients, about connecting with someone, especially the children."

The Adams biopic comes in the middle of a frenzied stretch during which there seems to be no escaping Williams. He received an Oscar for "Good Will Hunting," then went the family route in "Flubber," enlivened Woody Allen's caustic "Deconstructing Harry," visited heaven and hell in "What Dreams May Come" and once again co-hosted HBO's annual "Comic Relief" fundraiser. Next up is "Jakob the Liar," a Holocaust drama due for release in early 1999.

"Jakob" is different from "Life Is Beautiful," Williams says. "Jakob" takes place in the ghetto. The ghetto was like a holding area that the Germans, especially in Poland, would use to keep the Jews. It takes place in 1944, when a Polish Jew hears a broadcast on a German radio. In the background he hears a battle being fought, and he realizes it's on the borders of Poland. So, the Russians are coming. They are no longer fighting in Russia. They are now in Poland.

"Jakob (Williams) tells one person, to prevent him from committing suicide, and that just triggers everybody wanting to know more. He doesn't have a radio, but everybody thinks that he does, and he starts to make things up to keep it going. It's a character-driven piece. Alan Arkin is in it, and he's amazing. There are moments of humor, but it's not a comedy. I talked to survivors and they said 'Moments of humor existed, even in the (concentration) camps. It was very dark humor, but it kept the soul alive.'"

It's an amazing, small movie."

As if that weren't enough, Williams still manages to make surprise appearances at comedy clubs in New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco—where he lives with his family—and is soon to begin yet another film, "Bicentennial Man," based upon Isaac Asimov's sci-fi short story of the same name. Rumor has it that Williams might lay low after he wraps "Bicentennial Man" because he fears overexposure.

"Overexposure is a dangerous thing," he says. "Jakob the Liar couldn't come out this year. It would just be too many films. They'd start advertising movies without me. Presenting... a movie without Robin Williams. In the past, I'd do one or two a year, at most. Then, all of a sudden, there was a period where I was doing three a year. It's better to slow down. It's better to build expectations. That's an art form." Williams has performed. He waits, then booms, he'll do another one. Sometimes I'm like a little kid. 'That's great! Let's go!'"

What happens, then, if a great role in a marvelous film comes along? Wouldn't Williams kick himself hard if someone else made a movie he turned down simply because he caved into worries about overexposure?

"It's a danger, yeah," he replies. "Sometimes you will miss good films. But if you just keep taking them, you burn out yourself or you burn out the audience. They'll go, 'Seen that. Seen that. Seen that.' That's more dangerous."

Let’s face it, the (Re)Fugees aren’t just talented, beautiful and interesting, they’re also the only MTV darlings worth their two-video-per-hour rotation. When Ms. Hill’s album first came out it signaled a triumph of the lyrical Queen over the pompous and melodramatic reign of the Lilith Fair Lites. A little wisdom on love, an infectious low end and a cash crop of influences so lush and historical, 30 years from now, one might call it the perfect statement of the 1990’s.

Robert Rivers-
The “sketch pad artist”

In a biography by Norman Mailer, his subject, a young Picasso is described as being "relegated to a sketch pad artist." The comment held a certain amount resonance, as though Picasso’s career was stifled by his lack of painting supplies. Robert Rivers, whose selected "sketch pad" is currently on display at the UCF gallery (as part of the Flying Horse exhibition) does not give the impression of limits, but rather of a stealthily naturalistic, and disciplined artist. His subject matter? Well, the animal. But what animal do you see? Is it the artistic kind? Is it some archetypal primordial kind, beyond the human kind? Mythical and inspiring, and all from a mere UCF art instructor, some teachers deserve their relegated obscurity, but some are always on the verge of universal acclaim.

Dear Dr. Daphne,

My 21st birthday is in a few weeks & my friends want to take me out drinking. I'm not much of a drinker and not too hot on the idea. What should I do?

Unexcitable Buddy

Dear Dr. Daphne,

I kissed my boyfriend's friend over the weekend. It just happened. Do I tell him?

Little Miss Secrets

Dear Dr. Daphne,

I cannot see why you wouldn't want control over what you do. To damn thing. You wake up next to the porcelain god, all your friendships gone. I think that sounds like great fun, I wonder why the idea sounded so good in the 21st century. You relive the story for years, though you can't quite place what happened. I think that sounds like great fun. I cannot see why you wouldn't want to do that.

Dear Hot Lips,

My first question is: do you have a ring on that finger? I didn't think so. Cheap loser probably didn't know, then it's easier to dodge questions.

Dear Dr. Daphne,

I applaud you for making up your own mind and not falling into this drunken stupor our generation is in. But, what is wrong with you? Everyone HAS to have a memorable 21st birthday. That usually means getting really wasted. Some guys are wacko. You under no obligation to tell them, so what? Just be careful, okay? Some guys are wacko. You under no obligation to tell that boy-toy of yours anything. He will undoubtedly find out. Choose to fool around with guys your own mind and not falling into this drunken stupor our generation is in.

Various Artists
The Faculty—Soundtrack
(Columbia)

Glossy but hard-hitting, homogenous but undeniably entertaining, the soundtrack to 1998's cross-breeding of Scream and Invasion of the Body Snatchers is, indeed, a reflection of the film itself. No expense was spared as far as signing the talent involved—The Offspring, Creed, Soul Asylum, Garbage, Sheryl Crow, and Oasis are just some of the musicians involved. However, it's the lesser known groups that make the biggest impressions in the album. The best selection appears smack dab in the middle of the lineup: "Haunting Me," by Stabbing Westward. Although they may not be as well known as their radio-friendly counterparts, Westward creates a rhythm of paranoia that captures the spirit of the film more completely than anything else on the CD. Another highlight is "It's Over Now," a slick, well-done number by the group Never (no, not that Never). This is not to say that The Faculty soundtrack is without flaws. Far from it. The powers that be, including executive producer (and Faculty director), decided that a good vault raiding was necessary. Thus, we get a recycled version of Pink Floyd's "Another Brick in the Wall." Why? Wasn't the original perfect enough? No matter what the new musicians did with the material, it'll make those who've heard the real McCoy nostalgic. Another miscue was to exclude the film's score (by Scream and Scream 2's Marco Beltrami). The score often proves to be the highlight of the CD (listen to the soundtracks of Armageddon, Dark City, L.A. Confidential, etc.). But if you overlook the remakes, this is a rocking concoction, with Garbage adding their unique style to "Medication," and Crow chipping in with perhaps her most unusual track in "Resuscitation."

Combustible Edison
The Impossible Dream
(Sub Pop)

It's like the feeling of walking into a smoke-filled jazz lounge, while the most diverse range of people are sitting around watching. It's a style that may attract a clown (or two), a mime, and some track drivers. Combustible Edison plays some very high quality, yet strange, melodies that one can only dream about. With hardly any vocals, their sound appears more along the lines of Benny Goodman guest starring on an "X-Files" episode. Magical voices appear at random, atonal chords provide an eerie rhythm, and drums provide an exotic bossa nova tint. Where the music can't be heard is where Combustible Edison comes through. They seem to be the usually unwanted parts of an average musical arrangement such as bass, chords, and float them to the surface. The first track, "Upolia," is a prime example, and an immediate entrance into their busy world. They show their ghastly sounds especially on "Dior," where the voice of Liz Cox slithers in and out of the jazz lounge air. Most of their thirteen scores are blends and combinations of Henry Mancini, Martin Denny, and Benny Goodman packaged with electronic mixes. The Impossible Dream is an unexplored album that shows a new potential, and a melodic spark never felt before.

UCF Theatre would make Hansberry proud

HENRY SPRINGS

"To be Young, Gifted, and Black! To be Young, Gifted, and Black!" the chorus wails.

January 29, 1969 heralding the premiere of Ms. Hansberry's play "To Be Young, Gifted, and Black!" is history. It was about a family much like her own. A story she wrote with "poignancy and urgency" that mainstream America embraced. The world followed. The story, her play, won the New York Drama Critics' Choice Award for Best Play of the Year. She was the fifth woman and the only "Negro" woman to have been so honored. That is only a part of the story, a rich montage of images which the UCF Theatre has exuberantly recreated in the '98 version of the play.

In the late 60's the nation experienced many changes. There were political protests, the sexual revolution was just taking form, and the civil rights movement was not just read about but also experienced by everyday Americans. It signifies why the play is still relevant today. It represents a voice that still struggles to be heard. Not unlike any other individual, American voice.

For most part the disconnected images appear to be more connected than not. There may be times during the performance when you question what direction the action is taking you. The same could be said of the original version. Those same questions asked by Ms. Hansberry during her life.

The play takes eight performers consisting of three men and five women that step in and out of the scenes and sometime share a single character. There is no real star of the show but the cast makes all the facets of Hansberry's character shimmer uniquely. Although the UCF production lacked Cleony Tyson it seemed to produce a more toe-tapping performance of "Lord I Don't Feel No Ways Tired," a song from the play. The play is a tribute that celebrates Hansberry's life more than her death.

The updated version of To Be Young, Gifted, and Black is just as enjoyable, just as touching, and maybe done just a bit better. The play takes excerpts from both Raisin In The Sun and The Sign In Sidney Brustein's Window. The actors pull it off with ease and in some cases are more believable than the original. If you don't catch it now, you'll have to wait until next time to see how history continues to influence the present.

TO BE YOUNG, GIFTED, AND BLACK runs until the 24th. For ticket prices and show times, please call the Box Office at 823-1500.

*Since July, the Tokento Chinese restaurant in Tokyo has been offering the all-you-can-eat lunchin buffet (regularly about $16) to the first 30 diners at a time, and after that, it takes a half­ hour, measured by a time clock that diners when entering and exiting. Other restaurants have copied the idea in recession-torn Japan, according to a December Wall Street Journal report, and some have found that including alcoholic beverages on the per-minute menu tends to get people to stay longer.

The Weirdo-American Community

Tyrone V. Henry, 26, was arrested in September in Tuscon, Ariz., and charged with possession of child pornography. Police said they led to Henry's home after six female University of Arizona students complained of a man supposedly conducting a test of facial cream, using a substce that (according to the women) tasted like semen. However, police said they do not have enough evidence to charge Henry on the facial­ cream tests.

I Don't Think So

*In September, Libya's Moamar Gadhafi broadcast a video that he said had a 1966 assassination attempt against him by British agents. However, on frame-by-frame inspection, according to an Associated Press report, the grenade on the video appeared merely to have been tossed onto a man's hand and then onto other frames as an airborne object headed toward Gadhafi. Not sur­prisingly, the "grenade" did not explode, and Gadhafi was spared, but he said a British agent was arrested and has confessed.

*Ms. Fareena Jabbar, 37, was arrested in Colombo, Sri Lanka, in October and charged with trying to pass a U.S. $1 million bill (a denomination that does not exist). To assist her scheme, Jabbar supplied a "certificate of authenticity" signed by officials of the "International Association of Millionaires."

No Longer Weird

Adding to the list of stories that were formerly weird but which now occur with such frequency that they must be retired from circulation: (29)
The customer dismissed at a bar or restaurant or store who decides to express his anger by driving his car right through the front door, as done by Joe L. Stephens, 48, at a Lima, Ohio, tavern in December. And (30) the careless error observed by home heating oil delivery drivers who see a for­ merry fuel spill spout on a house next door to the one they are supposed to deliver to and thus mistakenly pump a couple hundred gallons of oil into the basement, such as happened to Steve and Christy Barte of Tacoma, Wash., in December.

Ceiling-Crawling in Albuquerque

*On Dec. 1, a 35-year-old man, who had been living in an Albuquerque restaurant, climbed into the ceiling in a restroom, crawled around a bit, and fell through, into the kitchen. The police were not able to determine a motive. Six days later, another man robbed a Bank of Albuquerque branch on its first day of business by dropping down from ceil­ tape in a recession-torn Japan, according to a December Wall Street Journal report, and some have found that including alcoholic beverages on the per-minute menu tends to get people to stay longer.

The Weirdo-American Community

Tyrone V. Henry, 26, was arrested in September in Tucson, Ariz., and charged with possession of child pornography. Police said they led to Henry's home after six female University of Arizona students complained of a man supposedly conducting a test of facial cream, using a substce that (according to the women) tasted like semen. However, police said they do not have enough evidence to charge Henry on the facial­ cream tests.

I Don't Think So

*In September, Libya's Moamar Gadhafi broadcast a video that he said had a 1966 assassination attempt against him by British agents. However, on frame-by-frame inspection, according to an Associated Press report, the grenade on the video appeared merely to have been tossed onto a man's hand and then onto other frames as an airborne object headed toward Gadhafi. Not sur­prisingly, the "grenade" did not explode, and Gadhafi was spared, but he said a British agent was arrested and has confessed.

Florida topples the rest of the country

UCF's Daunte Culpepper and Paul Miranda led the charge for Team Florida, who defeated Team USA, 17-5, in the inaugural Gridiron Classic at the Florida Citrus Bowl. It was the first bowl game of its kind to have players from one state compete against players from the remaining 49 states.

"In my opinion, this all-star game in general, within a very short period of time, is gonna be the best college all-star game that's out there," Team Florida Coach Lindy Infante said. "The players that we had here, you’re gonna see a lot of these names show up in the future..."

Culpepper, who rewrote most of the UCF record book during his four-year career, earned offensive MVP while leading Team Florida to all 17 points. He completed 8-of-12 passes for 56 yards, including two passes to Bethune-Cookman's James Adderley for 62 yards. Team USA cut Florida's lead to 10-3 on the ensuing drive with a nine-play, 55-yard drive just four minutes later. Nebraska's Kris Brown kicked a 35-yard field goal after Leigh and Brian Kuklick combined to complete 4-of-6 passes for 52 yards, but the seven-point deficit was the closest Team USA would get before Miranda and Culpepper combined to put the game away.

Culpepper, Miranda make UCF proud

When UCF's Daunte Culpepper and Paul Miranda were announced as the Most Valuable Player winners in the Gridiron Classic, a roar from UCF fans in the crowd arose. UCF players were the hometown favorites as they played their first game in the Citrus Bowl before hopefully beginning professional careers. UCF Coach Mike Kruczek had nothing but good things to say about the importance of Culpepper and Miranda's performances.

"This game was fantastic for UCF," Kruczek said. "Obviously, having two MVPs, it doesn't get any better than that with the national exposure."

Missing in action

While most people knew about Cincinnati wide receiver Chad Pummer and having to sit out the game for Team Florida with a broken foot, there was an injury on the other side that may hindered Team USA's chances of winning.

Chuck Noll, the legendary former coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers, suffered an achilles injury on Thursday during practice and was forced to return home. Former New York Jets coach Joe Walton replaced Noll on the sidelines for the USA squad.

Florida Citrus Bowl Gridiron Classic

Traitor in our midst?

Former South Carolina cornerback Kevin Brooks played for Team USA and did not record any defensive statistics. However, he was a popular topic of conversation.

"I'm not sure if you heard about that guy," UCF's Josh Dembinski said. "He was on the wrong end of the ball in the first quarter and was intercepted twice."

UCF leads the charge

UCF had the most representatives (six) of any school in the Gridiron Classic. With the late addition of Paul Miranda to Team Florida, UCF had one more player than Georgia Tech. Fifteen teams had two or more players represented, while 41 more schools had one player each.

Following UCF and Georgia Tech with multiple selections were as follows: four each for Florida, Kansas State, and UCLA; three for Arkansas, Florida State, Notre Dame, and South Florida; and two for Miami, Mississippi State, national champion Tennessee, undefeated Tulane, Virginia Tech, and Wake Forest. Also, 11 non-Division I-A schools were represented: Bethune-Cookman, Clark University, East Tennessee State, Florida A&M, James Madison, Middle Tennessee State, Robert Morris, South Florida, Tarleton State, Troy State, and Western Illinois.

Burley looks to impress scouts at future events

Tony Mejia
SPORTS EDITOR

In the inaugural Gridiron Classic at the Florida Citrus Bowl on Saturday, UCF’s Daunte Culpepper and Paul Miranda both took home MVP trophies. But Siaha Burley, Culpepper’s favorite target this season, saw very little action and failed to make a catch in Team Florida’s 17-9 victory over Team USA.

However, Burley will look to showcase himself this weekend at the Hula Bowl in Hawaii.

“I wasn’t too productive today for whatever reason,” Burley said. “It was kind of frustrating today, but I’ll just have to take advantage of the opportunity next week and make the most of it.”

Making the most of it is what Burley has done since he first came to UCF. After being snubbed by several universities, Burley accepted a scholarship to UCF without even seeing the campus. He made an instant impact for the Knights during his two seasons after transferring from Mesa Community College in Arizona. Last season, he finished with 88 catches for 1,142 yards and eight touchdowns, while helping UCF to a 9-2 mark.

Despite not being the Randy Moss-type receiver that many scouts look for, Team Florida Coach Lindy Infante feels that Burley has other things to offer the NFL.

“He’s a quick footed guy, he has excellent hands, and he’s gonna be a great route runner for whatever system he goes in.”

Burley has proven that he can be a go-to guy, given the chance. He consistently ranked in the top 10 nationally in receptions and yards per game, and UCF Coach Mike Kruczek has always been quick to sing Burley’s praises.

“He brings a lot to the table athletically,” Kruczek said. “He has as good of hands as anyone in the country. He runs great routes and has great body control. Plus he’s a punt returner.”

Unfortunately for Burley, he wasn’t able to play in a bowl game, which put him at a disadvantage compared to many of the players in the game. But once he got into the flow during practice for the Gridiron Classic, he now knows what it takes to impress scouts in the upcoming Hula Bowl.

“I hadn’t played in a month and a half, so the first day I was a little rusty. But I progressed during the week,” Burley said. “I feel like heading into the Hula Bowl that I’ll be better prepared. I think I’ll have a better week.”

Burley was able to play alongside University of Florida receiver Travis McGriff, another player who has a similar challenge to overcome in his pursuit of an NFL job. Both players use quickness and good hands to their advantage to make up for their lack of size.

“I think Siaha’s a really good player,” McGriff said. “It was unfortunate that he didn’t get many balls thrown at him. He’s an excellent player, and definitely has a shot to keep playing.”

Burley was invited to the combine in Indianapolis, where he will have another chance to make a name for himself in front of scouts from all 31 NFL teams. With an additional All-Star game in which to play in, he looks to be ready for his upcoming opportunity.

“I look to be in better shape at the combine. Hopefully, I’ll impress them more than I have so far,” Burley said. “I look to be stronger, faster and bigger. After this week, I’m gonna start rigorous training.”
Miranda solidifies NFL draft hopes with sterling play

TONY MEJIA
SPORTS EDITOR

Walking off the field of Saturday’s inaugural Gridiron Classic, cornerback Paul Miranda could do nothing but smile. The game’s defensive MVP had every reason to, especially since he may have handed himself an NFL future.

After playing in the Blue-Gray All-Star Game on Christmas Day, Miranda had the experience factor working for him when it came to the mythical All-Star games. He knew what to expect, and more importantly, knew what was expected of him.

“These games I’ve played in have been so much about technique and what it takes to get to the next level,” Miranda said. “I’ve heard a lot of good things about the way I played here and practiced and in the other game. It’s encouraging to hear I just have to thank God for allowing me to be in this situation.”

It’s a situation Miranda has taken full advantage of. He was originally not selected to play in the Gridiron Classic, but a late invitation allowed him to show his skills to another group of scouts. He got himself noticed in the third quarter, intercepting an Indianapolis Colts pass and returning it 34 yards to set up Team Florida’s final touchdown.

“It was just a matter of reading the play,” Miranda said. “That’s why I can’t think my coaching staff enough for everything they have taught me. Coach (Pat) Thomas has played and coached at that level so he knows what it takes to get there. He’s really helped me.”

Pat Thomas is a former secondary coach of the Indianapolis Colts and a former defensive back for the Los Angeles Rams. He was impressed not only with Miranda’s abilities, but his personality and character as well.

“Paul is a kid that has always had the athletic ability but his demeanor that sets him apart. He’s a quality kid,” Thomas said. “He was eager to learn and was a pleasure to coach. I feel that if he stays that way, he certainly has a chance to play at the next level. He’s the type of athlete professional teams look for.”

Miranda has used his demeanor and work ethic to his advantage in his playing career at UCF and in his pursuit of an NFL job. He came to Orlando as a wide receiver, learned a new position, carved out his niche in special teams and became a defensive weapon at cornerback this season.

“He’s continued to show that versatility on both sides of special teams, and even practicing some at safety because coaches asked him to,” Thomas said. “I think I’d have to make up for safety so they stuck us back at corner-back,” Miranda said with a very smile.

“It’s all a learning process, but I’m feeling good about it. The difference between college and the NFL is very big. It’s different rules and a different game. I’m really excited about it.”

While there is a certain glamour associated with being the top quarterback out there,” said Infante, a former NFL head coach with the Green Bay Packers and Indianapolis Colts.

“This guy is tremendous. He is certainly one of the top quarterbacks out there,” said Infante, a former NFL head coach with the Green Bay Packers and Indianapolis Colts.

“I’m just glad I have had the pleasure to have coached him, if only for one game.”

Culpepper will play in only one All-Star game this year, and elicited the Gridiron Classic because he wanted to play in the Florida Citrus Bowl one last time. It was important to him to line up with UCF teammates

Ronald Goulston, Rob Collis, Marcus Jenkins, Sierra Burley, and Paul Miranda last one last time.

“It was our bowl game. It was something we’ve been looking forward to for a while,” Culpepper said. “After not being able to play in a bowl, this gave us one last chance to play together. It was special, and it also proved UCF players can play with the best.”

Next up for Culpepper is the NFL combine in Indianapolis, where he’ll be measured, weighed, tested, and evaluated. He plans on hitting the weights and getting his height, reported at 257, down a few pounds before the combine.

“Just for remembering where he came from, those who know Culpepper know that shouldn’t be a concern. In fact, the graduuted quarterback took time out to meet and talk with heavily recruited quarterback Cameron Newton, Atlanta, GA. Harrison was in Orlando on official recruiting visit, and watched Culpepper practice for the Gridiron Classic.

“He was a good kid, I was impressed by him,” Culpepper said of Harrison. “I think it’s key to support your school. That’s what it’s all about. I’ll always be a UCF fan and supporter and feel it’s a privilege to help out the school that did so much for me.”

UCF fans will feel that same privilege to be rooting on one of their own at the next level. UCF’s quarterback is still vintage Daunte Culpepper, on and off the field.

“Middle Tennessee State University. I’ve never played in a bowl,” Miranda said. “I think I’d have to make up for safety so they stuck us back at corner-back.”

Offensive linemen strive for NFL future

JEFF CASE
SPORTS WRITER

UCF linemen Marcus Jenkins, Cornell Green and Ryan Gillis entered Saturday's All-Star Gridiron Classic hoping to claim the inaugural game as UCF's own and possibly turn a few NFL heads their way.

The trio did nothing to hurt their NFL stock, protecting UCF quarterback Daunte Culpepper, the offensive MVP, while getting their last chance to play as teammates. Now, with UCF's, err, Team Florida's 17-9 defeat of Team USA Saturday behind them, the linemen look to their different futures.

Gillis, who missed the 1997 season while recovering from melanoma, was surprised to play in the Classic and looked at the game as his final farewell to the Citrus Bowl and his teammates.

“It was great,” Gillis said. “It was my last game with Cornell, Daunte, Siida [Burley] and Paul [Miranda], kind of like a little farewell game for us all. Cornell and I have played next to each other during practice, yeah, you're big enough.

“T'ld like to stay in Florida if I could, either in Jacksonville or Tampa Bay. Tampa Bay would be my first choice. But, I'll go to whoever wants me.”

But, if the NFL does not work out, Gillis said he has a backup plan: professional wrestling. Gillis often sees WCW stars at a local gym in his hometown of Largo and said they have advised him to wait out, Gillis said he has a backup plan: professional wrestling. Gillis often sees WCW stars at a local gym in his hometown of Largo and said they have advised him to wait.

“I'm just going to wait and see. It's harder to measure your heart if your heart is there and you work through practice and you don't get hurt while you practice, yeah, you're big enough.

“It doesn't matter. I know [UCF Coach Mike] Krouske and I think the UCF program is a good program. I've worked with some guys from big schools who aren't nearly as advanced as guys from small schools. What those kids showed me today is they have a pretty good understanding of football and I know they've done a good job at UCF.”

For Jenkins and Green, the game served as redemption for the Knights lost bowl bid. Jenkins said he has also filled out NFL paperwork and hopes to be drafted this spring. While his post-NFL plans remain uncertain, Jenkins is sure of one thing.

“I'm not into wrestling, that sort of thing,” Jenkins said. “It's all well and pretty much in the air. I can say this, though. This was the best thing to happen for UCF and the players that came out to play. I think for the first year of this game, it was fun and I can't wait to see it in the future.

“This was like our bowl game. Since we didn't have the chance to go to one, this was the icing on the cake for our season.”

Green, who was named to the All-Independent team this season, is the most likely drafter of the group. He was slowed by soreness in his back during the game, but Blackledge said Green's draft stock was probably not hurt by the game.

For now, Green is waiting to graduate in May with a degree in mechanical engineering. He hopes to land an NFL spot like Jenkins and Gillis, but said his degree is his most treasured accomplishment.

“I put it all in God's hands, and hopefully I'll get a shot in the NFL,” Green said. “If not, I'm going to get my degree either way. Hopefully, one day, I want to own my own business, something I can generate for my own family. I had fun playing college football. I'm going to cherish that for right now.”

UCF baseball to play home schedule at Tinker Field

The University of Central Florida and the city of Orlando have reached an agreement to allow the UCF baseball team to play its home games at Tinker Field this season. The move was due to holdups in the construction of UCF's new baseball stadium and the fact that the current facility is in disrepair.

"We are excited about the opportunity to play our games at Tinker Field," said UCF baseball coach Rick Egan. "It is a great facility that our fans will enjoy watching games from. We hope that we can make the most of this opportunity."
Campbell Camels

(6-10, 3-3)—Sophomore guard Eddie Walker made his return to the starting lineup for the Camels last week and it paid dividends. Walker, who has been hampered by ankle problems all season, connected on four of five three-pointers and finished with 19 points in leading the Camels to a 59-56 win at Mercer. Leading scorer and rebounder Jamie Simmons continued his productive play off the bench with 10 points and eight rebounds in the win. Earlier in the week, Campbell lost at Georgia State, 87-64, and won 21 points from Simmons. They host conference leader Samford on Thursday and last place Jacksonville State on Saturday night in what is expected to be a conference title showdown.

Georgia State Panthers

(8-4, 2-2)—It may have taken longer than expected, but Charles “Lefty” Driesell has his talent ready and playing like they expected when they were dubbed the favorites to win this year’s TAAC crown. Since opening week losses to FAU and UCF, the Panthers have won four straight with their most impressive victory coming 90-81 on Saturday in Athens, Georgia. State topped Tennessee, 80-77, on Tuesday and Saturday in hopes of putting themselves in the TAAC’s top tier. The victory against Mercer, which had the conference’s leading scorer, was a testament to the team’s scoring and rebounding both. Kevin Morris was effective as well, averaging 20.5 points and 6 assists, but leading the team was Reese short-poofy (for-26) and averaged only 11 points per game. GSU has a busy weekend ahead, having played at Mercer on Tuesday, hosting Samford in a showdown on Thursday, and playing at JSU on Monday.

Jacksonville Dolphins

(10-5, 0-5)—Hugh Durham’s Dolphins continued their trend of scoring big in conference play, as they swept UCF and FAU this week and remain winning in conference action. The Golden Knights have solidified their reputation as one of the strongest teams in the TAAC, but they have not been able to stop Coastal Carolina, a team that has been successful against FAU, but not against UCF, where they got their first conference win. This week, the Dolphins had a strong offensive outing and scored 27 points in the victory, but they were unable to overcome UCF’s defense, which held them to just 40 points. Still, the Dolphins are 4-1 against Mercer and are looking to build on their conference dominance.

Samford Bulldogs

(12-4, 6-0)—The bear goes on for Samford, who defeated their in-state rivals with mixed results last week, taking out Jacksonville State, 82-57, but falling to Georgia State. The Gamecocks, who were out-rebounded by the Bulldogs, were out-rebounded by 10 points and six steals from Arnette. Gary Durham scored 17 points off the bench, while Cedric Powell had three steals to pull ahead of Arnette in that department. The Dolphins host a third in-state rival, UCF, Wednesday night, before traveling to Centenary on Monday.

Note to copy editors: There is a lot of information in this week’s edition of the Samford Free Press, including updates on the football team, the basketball team, and various other campus events. The paper can be found online at www.samfordfreepress.com.

Florida Atlantic Owls

(5-11, 2-4)—FAU played host to a pair of its in-state rivals with mixed results last week, losing to Section, 73-57, before rallying to beat Jacksonville, 85-80. Rebounding and shooting were the problems in the loss to the Huskies, as the Owls were out-rebounded 40-32 and shot under 31 percent from the field. Daron Amette, the Owls’ top scorer, was held to just 14 in the loss. They were out-worked on the boards against Jacksonville, but shot 54 percent and got 26 points and five steals from Amette. Gary Durham added 17 points off the bench, while Cedric Powell had three steals to pull ahead of Arnette in that department. The Dolphins host a third in-state rival, UCF, Wednesday night, before traveling to Centenary on Monday.

Georgia State Panthers

(5-11, 0-6)—Things got no better for the Gamecocks following their 78-70 loss to Troy State last Monday. On Thursday, JSU was destroyed by conference-leader Samford, 82-57, who was at the other end of the spectrum in not having lost yet. JSU center Wes Wilson had an effective game scoring 18 points, while top scorers Marlon Garkey and Randy Willard had 14 and 12 points, respectively. However, the rest of the team managed little offense against the Bulldogs, with no other players scoring more than one basket. This past Monday, the Gamecocks tried to get to the victory column against Centenary, but fell short 64-54, despite having 12 points and six steals from Arnette. Gary Durham scored 17 points off the bench, while Cedric Powell had three steals to pull ahead of Arnette in that department. The Dolphins host a third in-state rival, UCF, Wednesday night, before traveling to Centenary on Monday.

Troy State Trojans

(5-11, 2-4)—After handing Jacksonville State a 78-70 loss last week, Troy State was hoping to make a dent in the TAAC standings with games against Mercer and Georgia State. It didn’t happen. Mercer beat up on Troy State, 81-65, despite 23 points from Eugene Christopher. A bright spot however, was their play in a 90-81 loss to Florida Atlantic on Saturday. Although playing their third game in six days, the Trojans hung tough and battled the preseason favorites before giving way in the end. Christopher scored 16 points and grabbed ten rebounds, while Brad Grant also recorded a double-double with 10 points and 12 rebounds. Former walk-on Joey Raines scored a season-high 27 points in the loss. Troy State will be at Stetson on Tuesday night, and will play against Jacksonville on Saturday.

CENTENARY GENTS

(8-4, 2-2)—Billy Kennedy’s team had a statement game against Samford last Saturday night in what is expected to be an upset against the unbeaten Bulldogs, solidifying the Gents as legitimate conference title contenders. However, Samford had other plans, as the Gents lost 62 percent from the field and knocked down 12 three-pointers to lead 84-66 win. Ronnie McCollum scored 21 points for Centenary, while point guard Tim Law added 13 points and six assists. McCollum has moved up to second in the TAAC in scoring with a 20.3 points per game average. Centenary gets a chance to bounce back in a road contest against wireless Jacksonville State on Monday night and take advantage. 64-54, behind 20 points from McCollum and 19 points and nine rebounds from freshman Daniel.

Florida Atlantic

The Owls return home to host UCF and Florida Atlantic on Saturday and Monday, respectively.

Jacksonville State Gamecocks

(5-11, 0-6)—Things got no better for the Gamecocks following their 78-70 loss to Troy State last Monday. On Thursday, JSU was destroyed by conference-leader Samford, 82-57, who was at the other end of the spectrum in not having lost yet. JSU center Wes Wilson had an effective game scoring 18 points, while top scorers Marlon Garkey and Randy Willard had 14 and 12 points, respectively. However, the rest of the team managed little offense against the Bulldogs, with no other players scoring more than one basket. This past Monday, the Gamecocks tried to get to the victory column against Centenary, but fell short 64-54, despite having 12 points and six steals from Arnette. Gary Durham scored 17 points off the bench, while Cedric Powell had three steals to pull ahead of Arnette in that department. The Dolphins host a third in-state rival, UCF, Wednesday night, before traveling to Centenary on Monday.

Samford Bears

(6-10, 3-3)—Mark Skinker has Mercer playing its best basketball in years, but a chance to position itself among the teams in the TAAC was cut short by the wayside on Saturday with a 59-56 loss to Campbell. This came after a decisive 81-65 win at Troy State in which Mark Adamson had a career game, recording 28 points and 10 rebounds, as the Bears overpowered the Trojans, scoring 35 percent. However, Campbell neutralized Adamson in its win, holding the TAAC’s leading rebounder to 13 points and 7 boards, while the Bears shot just 40 percent. Still, all is not lost for Mercer. They hosted Georgia State on Tuesday and will play at Stetson and Jacksonville on Thursday and Saturday in hopes of putting themselves within striking distance of the TAAC regular season crown.

Samford Bulldogs

(12-4, 6-0)—The bear goes on for Samford, who defeated their in-state rivals with mixed results last week, taking out Jacksonville State, 82-57, and beating on Centenary, 84-66. Reed Rawlings scored 27 in the victory against the Gamecocks, while four other Bulldogs scored in double figures. Against Centenary, center Marc Salyers scored 22, while Will Daniel had one of his best games of the year, scoring 19 despite having to guard the TAAC’s leading scorer, Ronnie McCollum. Samford puts its undefeated record on the line Thursday when it plays at Campbell. The true test to see how good they really are comes Saturday, when they travel to play at pre-season favorite Georgia State.

Stetson Hatters

(7-3, 2-0)—Coach Murphy Arnold is satisfied with his team’s start to date, confident that most people have thought Stetson would have had a winning TAAC record as this juncture of the season. However, don’t let him fool you. Arnold admitted he would have loved to have beaten the Golden Knights to move ahead of them in the conference standings. UCF has been terrific basketball from the outset and took a 52-34 halftime lead, winning 84-65 at the final buzzer. Stetson’s signature win, who had scored 23 points in a 75-57 win at Florida Atlantic earlier in the week, was held to just 6 points by UCF. Garrett Davis led the Hatters with 23, scored only 4 points in the second half. It was the final game of a four-game road trip for Stetson, who return to the Edmund Center for games against Troy State and Mercer this Thursday and Saturday.

Troy State Trojans

(5-11, 2-4)—After handing Jacksonville State a 78-70 loss last week, Troy State was hoping to make a dent in the TAAC standings with games against Mercer and Georgia State. It didn’t happen. Mercer beat up on Troy State, 81-65, despite 23 points from Eugene Christopher. A bright spot however, was their play in a 90-81 loss to Florida Atlantic on Saturday. Although playing their third game in six days, the Trojans hung tough and battled the preseason favorites before giving way in the end. Christopher scored 16 points and grabbed ten rebounds, while Brad Grant also recorded a double-double with 10 points and 12 rebounds. Former walk-on Joey Raines scored a season-high 27 points in the loss. Troy State will be at Stetson on Tuesday night, and will play against Jacksonville on Saturday.
Stewart handles variety of roles with great success

TRAVIS BELL

UCF guard D’Quarius Stewart has endured playing second fiddle to Harry Kennedy, Mark Jones, and now Brad Traina as the leading scorer. However, the junior co-captain has been pivotal in helping to lead UCF to a 5-1 start in the Trans America Athletic Conference, while filling many positions and doing the things that often go unnoticed.

Stewart leads the team in number of minutes played; an important category that is often overlooked. The rationale for his extended minutes is simple. When Cory Perry needs a break, Stewart handles the point. If Brad Traina is out, Stewart fills the scorer’s role. If there is a tough guard that needs defending, guess who fills the void. So while he isn’t necessarily the go-to guy on a full-time basis, as long as Stewart is on the court he doesn’t mind waiting his turn as long as the Knights leave the court victorious each night.

“I know that when I’m on the court, I’m doing things to win. I’m not out there for myself,” Stewart said. “I’m not trying to be the big dog. I’m just trying to do whatever it takes to be the team player. Playing the minutes usually isn’t a problem, because I just don’t quit.”

His versatility was key in the 84-65 win against Stetson on Saturday night. He scored 11 points on 4-of-6 shooting from the field, pulled down three rebounds and dished out five assists compared to only one turnover. All that was done while running the point to allow Cory Perry some rest, taking shots when leading scorer Brad Traina was resting his injured foot, ironing clothes, and making sure the team was properly hydrated.

“He played really solid. He’s real athletic, and he takes it when it’s there,” Davis said. “He doesn’t try to force things too much. He handles it. He can shoot it, and he can drive.”

Not a bad compliment from a player as good as Davis, who leads Stetson in scoring. The fact that Stewart put up all his numbers while having to guard the explosive Davis wasn’t lost on UCF Coach Kirk Speraw.

“I’m most pleased with his defense,” Speraw said. “He has taken on some real­­ly good players, and his defense has made much more progress than the rest of his game.”

While Stewart’s defense has impressed Speraw the most, his offensive numbers have been exciting the UCF crowds. He is averaging 13.6 points per game while starting all 15 games he’s played in. His best career performance came last Thursday during a 16-point victory over Jacksonville. While Traina struggled after suffering a stress fracture in his foot, Stewart carried the offense with 24 points on 10-of-12 shooting, including making all four three-pointers he attempted. He added three rebounds and three assists in the win, effectively picking up the slack of the ail­­ing Traina, who is motivating teammates to continue to play despite his injury.

“Brad inspires you, and it puts you in the mode where he’s giving his all and it makes you want to work even harder,” Stewart said.

While Traina plays through the injury, Stewart becomes that much more impor­­tant. He has always understood his role in the resurgence of UCF basketball improving from 7-19 his freshman year to 17-11 last season. And he knows that next year will be his chance to finally step out of his shadow.

“Stewart becomes that much more impor­­tant.”

UCF guard D’Quarius Stewart has raised his scoring average in each year as a Golden Knight and leads the team in minutes played this season.

With UCF’s fast start in TAAC play, teams will be looking to knock them back into the pack. Despite Sanford’s 6-0 start, Stetson coach Murray Arnold dubbed the Knights the conference favorite following UCF’s impressive 84-­­65 win against the Hatters. The target is firmly entrenched on the backs of the Golden Knights. How well they weather the onslaught awaiting them in enemy terri­­tory will tell whether they remain the team to beat when they return home in February.

Tough contest awaits against Gents playing.”

UCF will see another of the TAAC’s top scorers when it travels to Centenary on Saturday, Jan.23. Ronnie McCollum, the sophomore three-point threat, is aver­­aging just over 20 points per game in leading the Gents to a surprising 4-2 start in conference play, right behind UCF. Centenary hosted Jacksonville State on Monday night, and kept the Gamecocks winless in TAAC competition, 64-54.

Learning a lesson from the Gators:
UCF lost to the University of Florida 89-59 on Jan. 9, but a lopsided loss does not mean the Knights did not learn anything. The Knights allowed Gator forward Tiffany Travis to score 19 points on 7 of 13 shooting in 21 minutes. Coach Lynn Bria said the strong post play of Travis gives UCF a barometer for the season.

"We have some very good post players in our conference, and if you can defend UF’s, you can defend anybody," Bria said. "You play good teams and they exploit your weaknesses, and we wanted to do that because it prepares you for conference.”

Bria said the Knights lose to No. 21 Florida also teaches her team to put a blowout loss into perspective.

“You can’t go, ‘oh, we’re a terrible team,’” she said. “You have to realize the competition you’re playing and keep it in perspective. It gave us a reality check. You check out where you are at, but you have to keep it in perspective.”

Win against Stetson keeps Knights perfect, but...
UCF’s 71-63 defeat of Stetson on Saturday gave it a 4-0 record in the TAAC, but Bria is still not satisfied with her team. She said her team’s defensive intensity has grown since the start of the year, but she still expects more.

“You’re glad you’re 4-0," she said. "But to say I’m pleased? I’m not pleased. We’ve got a conference season to play and a tournament to play. I’m by far not pleased, but am I pleased with our progress to this point? Yes. We have made some strides to put some things together, things seem to be flowing a little bit more.

“We’ve got a ways to go. I don’t think you can ever be happy when you’re winning. I think that’s a team that’s going to get knocked off.”

Williams, McClendon switch spots
Newly added forward/guard T.J. Williams started her first game of the season Saturday, adding nine points and connecting on two of three three-point shots.

Williams, who joined the team on Dec. 30, bumped usual starter Chat McClendon out of the lineup. Bria said the move allows more freedom for leading scorer Charyia Davis in the UCF offense.

"Putting T.J. in the game makes us much more versatile," Bria said. "I can put Charyia where I want her. T.J. is the only person who can create shots for Charyia now, and it’s the first time we’ve ever had that. Chat is a very good defensive player. She not only gets in the paint for some scores, but when we need to press, she’s got long arms. I don’t think you can ever be happy when you’re winning. I think that’s a team that’s going to get knocked off quick.”

Knights take to the road for four straight

TONY MEJIA
SPORTS EDITOR

The UCF men’s basketball team has a lot to be excited about. They are 5-1 in conference play, rank second in the TAAC, and are playing their best basketball of the season. However, the upcoming four-game road trip could dampen their spirits.

“Road is never fun. It’s a tough place to be,” Coach Kirk Spuraw said. “It’s a different atmosphere, but we’ve got to get up to step. The way the schedule is laid out has us on the road for four straight, so we have to adjust and play well.”

You can’t blame Spuraw for not being overly enthusiastic about this road trip. UCF has only two games away from the UCFArena in eight opportunities. However, the team seems to have turned things around since their poor start. “something guard D’Quan Stewart attributes to maturity and an easier schedule.”

“It’s helped that we’ve started conference play,” Stewart said. “We had a bad clean slate and really wanted to come out and send a message. All the guys have been playing together for a while, so we’re a veteran group that has started to click.”

The Golden Knights are 5-1 since the new year began, winning all five games by 10 points or more. It’s a sign that UCF is playing with the lead and putting teams away when it has the chance, which Spuraw states is a sign of a veteran team and a vast improvement from years past.

UCF begins its road trip with a game in Boca Raton on Jan. 20 against Florida Atlantic. The Owls are 2-4 in conference action, coming off a 77-70 home victory over Jacksonville. FAU features the TAAC’s leading scorer in swingman Damon Arnette, who also ranks second in the conference in rebounding. The Owls also have the TAAC’s top three steals leaders, meaning ball handling and good decisions will be a focal point for UCF.

“Certainly we’d like to cut down on our turnovers. The first half of the Stetson game, we did a good job of moving the ball around and possessing the basketball,” Spuraw said. “We’re always looking to improve though, and that second half they did some things that caused us problems. We just have to work through them and keep getting better.”

“It will be interesting to see who will line up to defend Arnette. Junior Mario Lockett has been somewhat of UCF’s defensive stopper this year, doing tremendous jobs on Auburn’s Chris Porter, Miami’s Tim James, and lately Jacksonville’s Calvin Slaughter and Stetson’s Sebastian Singletary. Arnette, however, is more of a driver than a low post player, and does present matchup problems with his 6-foot-5, 220-pound frame. However, if it is Lockett who is assigned to shut him down, UCF has every confidence the junior forward can do the job.”

“He’s been doing it all year. It’s just gone unnoticed for the most part,” Stewart said. “Every difficult matchup he’s had, he’s shut it down. It’s not something that a lot of people stop to think about, but we know what he’s doing. We know what kind of defense he’s been

Culpepper plays conquering hero one more time

TONY MEJIA

It was vintage Daunte Culpepper. The same guy UCF fans have been watching for four years hasn’t changed. Having defenders bounce off him, scrambling and breaking tackles, throwing strikes with his right arm, Culpepper was home one last time.

At the same time, it was the beginning of an era as well.

Culpepper played his first game as a professional in the same stadium in which he played his final contest as an amateur. That was the only difference, however, as he completed 8-of-12 passes for 134 yards and walked off the field as the Offensive MVP, leading his team of Floridians to a 17-9 win against All-Stars from the rest of the country.

“This was really special to me. To play here one more time was something I was looking forward to,” Culpepper said. “I really wanted this win for my teammates and fans. We made Florida proud.”

“I look at this as a new beginning, because I am a pro now, but at the same time, I’m sad, because things are different now and I won’t get to play at the Citrus Bowl any-

Undefeated Knights take show on road

Charity Davis should be kicking her heals and Knight fans should be upset. Davis, who leads the UCF women’s basketball team in scoring with 19.6 points a game, tends only four more steals to become the school’s all-time leader in the category.

Davis will likely surpass Marcie Swalley’s 11-year old record of 250 steals this week, but unfortunately, it probably will come on the road. UCF (6-4, 4-0 TAAC) will travel to Jacksonville State on Thursday and Sanford on Saturday, with Davis’s record breaking night likely falling sometime during the trip.

The Knights are off to their best ever start in the TAAC and a 6-0 record by Saturday night would give UCF its first six game TAAC-win streak since 1994.

“I’m glad we’re off to this 4-0 start,” UCF Coach Lynn Bria said. “It’s better than 2-2 or 0-4, but it doesn’t mean we’ve won anything-yet. We’ve got a whole conference season to play and a lot of improvements to make.”

JSU (6-6, 5-1 TAAC) will pose as the first true test of the Knights’ mettle, as two Gamecocks rank among the conference’s top five scorers.

JSU’s Lisa Baswell and Heather Moyes average a combined 38.1 points a game, connecting on a combined 50.2 percent of their field goal attempts. As a team, JSU scores more points than anyone else in the conference (70.3), and leads the league in free throw percentage (70.4 percent), field goal percentage (44.3 percent) and defensive rebounding (25.4 rebounds a game).

Sanford, playing in just its second season of women’s basketball, is struggling at 1-14. The Bulldogs are winless in the TAAC, including blowout losses to nationally ranked Alabama (96-52) and a 101-83 loss to TAAC opponent FAU.

UCF could provide the steady Davis needs to break the record, as SU averages 21 turns a game. Sanford shoot less than 40 percent from the field (39.6) and allows 78.1 points a game, worst in the TAAC.

While this week’s schedule will test the Knights’ durability, missing out on Davis’ record-breaking night will no doubt be a bitter sweet moment for Davis and fans alike.

Kelli Ely continues to hit from long range, providing Lynn Bria added flexibility in the lineup.
