Cash at the wink of an eye

SHELLEY WILSON
STAFF WRITER

A trivia question for all college students out there: What does a flirtatious gesture, a particle in the eye, or a dime's worth of magnetic particles in an automated teller machine do that would cause you to reach for your wallet/purse? The answer is that they all demagnitize a dime on a regular basis, so I would recommend having a fistful of cash all the time to avoid this inconvenience.

At selective locations throughout the United States, a revolutionary concept right out of a science fiction or spy novel, is being made into a reality. The frequently used ATM machine has been improved. In the near future, instead of the normal procedure students must perform to use the machine; fishing that small, easily lost ATM card out of a cluttered wallet/purse, feeding it into the automated teller— with a chance that it may not be returned, and remembering the four digit number; now there may be an alternative.

"ATM cards are an inconvenience to me because I accidentally demagnetize mine on a regular basis, so I would welcome a new method of ATM use," said senior Maggie Westfall, an accounting major. The latest and most technologically innovated automated teller— the school ATM is available 24 hours a day for students, faculty and campus visitors. Her research proved that the expert players are better than beginners and that the skill, known as mental rotation, learned from playing video games, enhances performances in certain mathematical and scientific abilities.

Skills learned while playing video games

NICOLE KING
NEWS EDITOR

A UCF psychologist's study determined that skills learned from playing video games do not enhance the player's mathematical or scientific abilities.

Dr. Valerie Sims conducted research with a wide range of people aged 7 to 35 using the video game Tetris. Sims compared Tetris players, both experts and beginners, on a variety of spatial skills. She used a diverse set of tests from paper and pencil tests to computerized performance measures using the shapes of Tetris.

Valeri Sims began her research in 1989 using the classic arcade game Tetris.

Sims said she chose Tetris because it is nonviolent, requires thinking skills and because it is "simple to learn but difficult to master." The game calls for players to rotate shapes in their minds. The skill, known as mental rotation, was previously thought to be related to enhanced performance in certain mathematical and scientific abilities.

Her research proved that the expert players are better than the beginners only on spatial tasks that use the same shapes as the game. In short, Sims said video game experience does not transfer very far.
He said he wanted to get involved to do what is right for the students, but felt that Senate did not give him a fair chance in comparison to the other candidates that night.

"Change is inevitable. They had nothing to lose, but saw me as change," Smith said.

"As we become a more diverse student body at UCF, we need a more diverse Senate. Senate does not represent the demographics at this university at all now," he continued.

"There are over 400 students from a total of 65 countries who have enrolled this past year at UCF. Although there is no record of nationalities or a demographic report kept on Senate members, Smith would have been the only African-American on Senate this year if he had been voted in.

Some senators view Smith not being accepted as a sign that Senate is not always fair in handling prospective members.

"It’s unfair if someone gets enough courage and effort to come before everyone, answer any questions that are thrown at him honestly, and then get shot down," said Health & Public Affairs Senator Blas Beacham.

"You get abused by your fellow students for no reason and then that message gets back to the students that that’s what we’re here for. After going through or hearing about that, you probably don’t want any part of it, so there’s no wonder students don’t want to become involved," Beacham said.

The UCF Senate has come a long way, however, since it’s beginning in 1968. A group of students met at the home of Gwen Sarchet, dean of women, for a preliminary organizational meeting of Student Senate. Senator Fred Piccolo said he believes that although Senate needs change, students who know Senate have a positive view of it.

"If you’re lucky enough to see eye-to-eye with the majority, you’re in [Senate]. If not, you don’t stand a chance. Instead of senators keeping an open mind about prospective appointments, the confirmation comes down to political affiliations within Student Government."

"Right now, the words Senate and conflict of interest are being used interchangeably. Instead of keeping the best interests of the student body in mind, too often, social, political, and personal affiliations affect senator’s important decisions."

"If you’re lucky enough to see eye-to-eye with the majority, you’re in [Senate]. If not, you don’t stand a chance. Instead of senators keeping an open mind about prospective appointments, the confirmation comes down to political affiliations within Student Government."

"Change is inevitable, they had nothing to lose, but saw me as change. As we become a more diverse student body at UCF, we need a more diverse Senate. Senate does not represent the demographics at this university at all now."

—Senior Robert Smith
Psychology professor believes that video games can be used for educational purposes and research.

Sims said her findings do not prove video games should not be used for educational purposes. "Video games like the non-violent Tetris are fun and motivating," she said. "Motivating materials should be used in educational materials. Video games do not have to be mindless and violent to be fun."

Sims said educational materials designed as video games should be created specifically to train the exact skills that educators want players to learn. "I think that the research suggests that spatial skills are very specific to the domain in which they were learned," Sims said. "And that if we want to train spatial skills, we should really train people to do the exact tasks that they will have to perform at a later date."

She got the idea for the project in 1989 while in college and pulling off schoolwork to play the game. "At the time, I was very addicted to Tetris," she said. "My roommate teased me greatly about playing the game as she reminded me that I really needed to work on a research project for my cognitive psychology class instead of playing the game."

"One day I just looked at her and said, 'Hey, this is my project.' I realized that there was very little research on cognitive abilities and video game playing, and I decided to combine the two things that I enjoy," Sims said. She will write up some of her research for publication, and plans to advance her study by examining the skills of child participants more closely.

"I hope that this research will suggest that we can create games that do teach and motivate thinking skills," she said.

New ATM system will scan human eyes money machines, called Iris Recognition ATM’s, are now programmed to access bank accounts by reading the human eye. The machine identifies a customer by the unique color pattern in their iris, and this is effective identification since research has proven that the accuracy of iris matching is greater than that of DNA testing.

"This appears to be a foolproof system since an eye color pattern cannot be forged, whereas a pin number can," said Richard A. Ajayi, professor of finance. "I believe anything that reduces fraud will have beneficial long term effects."

The method is now being experimented with, and will one day be available to students, through the campus ATM.

There are students, however who are not won over by the idea of the iris identification system on campus. "Though the whole ATM process can be slow and tedious, it is also safer than this 'new improved process,'" said senior David Rhodes, a public administration major. "If my eyes are focusing on a machine and being scanned, I am not keeping a close lookout on my surroundings, and would be less prepared if I were to be mugged. By accepting this new method, we are taking a step backward on the standpoint of safety."

Ron Cohen, executive vice president of Bank United, said the company expects to bring this capability to all of their customers in early 2000.

Orlando’s Guaranteed Lowest Contact Lens Prices Include The Eye Exam!!

Contact lenses and eye exams are provided by Independent Doctors of Optometry located at:

PEARLE VISION

No discounts or other coupons apply. Offer good only at participating locations. Guaranteed to beat or lower local competitive price on same product. Certain restrictions apply. No exchanges on lenses after 30 days. Exams have non-refundable. Present coupon prior to exam. Pearle and Pearle Vision are trademarks of Pearle, Inc. ©1992 Pearle, Inc. The patient and any other person responsible for payment has a right to refuse to pay, cancel payment, or be reimbursed for payment for any other service, examination, or treatment which is performed as a result of and within seventy-two (72) hours of responding to the advertisements for the free, discounted fee, or reduced fee service, examination, or treatment.
Committee to present case to Senate at next meeting in June

"We'll present it in the next Senate meeting and then Senate can question us. Right now, that's the process I'm going to take."

Halscott was unavailable for comment on his contest­ ation hearing or on his affidavit.

Former Attorney General Joseph Smith, who brought an affidavit of impeachment against Jaime Halscott that LJR determined did not hold enough evidence to bring to Senate, made clear his view on Halscott's affidavit.

"This isn't an impeachment. In my opinion, it is his last, pitiful and desperate attempt to gain something he was not elected to by the students of this university. The president's accuser lost. He just needs some time to get over it," Smith said.

Blood Bank asking for donors

The Central Florida Blood Bank and UCF are asking all students, faculty and staff to donate blood in response to a severe blood shortage that has lasted several months.

The Blood Bank has been unable to fulfill hospital requests because of the shortage.

The following are the projected UCF mobile blood drive dates: June 9 – 10 a.m. - 3 p.m.July 6, 7, & 12 –10 a.m. - 3 p.m.Aug. 30 & 31—10 a.m. - 5 p.m.Sept. 8 –10 a.m. - 4 p.m.Sept. 9 –10 a.m. - 5 p.m.Sept. 10 – 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.Oct. 25 & 26 - 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.

The old UCF ID cards will expire on June 30. In order to get a new card, called the UCFCard or the Smartcard, ID and proof of employment or enrollment to UCF is required.

If you have the previous UCFCard and have paid the $10 fee, a new one will be issued at no charge. Otherwise, the fee may be paid at the Cashier's Office. Bring the receipt to the All Campus Card Office to obtain a new card.

The Card Office is located in the Student Services Building, across from the UCF Bookstore, Room 104.Office hours are:

Monday-Thursday — 8 a.m. – 6 p.m.
Friday — 8 a.m. – 5 p.m.
Saturday — 9 a.m. – noon

For more information, call 823-3072 or e-mail ucf­
card@pegasus.cc.ucf.edu

Time is Running Out...
Graduation ceremony sparks different emotions

Taylor Sikes
Assistant News Editor

"I was in the bathroom when they called your name." These were the words filling my head as I sat in my little sister's high school graduation commencement. My sister, Kelley, spoke them two weeks ago when I asked her if she saw me walking across the stage to receive my diploma from UCF. Her response made me laugh, which was followed by her telling me that she and the other women in the bathroom had cheered me on.

Now it was my turn to be there for her graduation from Dr. Phillips High School, which was held at the Orlando Arena. It was my first graduation of someone other than me to sit through. During the ceremony I noticed two distinct emotions floating around; one by the audience, and one by the graduates.

The first emotion of the audience is adoration, which the dictionary describes as a profound love or regard. Family members come to these ceremonies because they love their kids and they are proud of them. They are excited to see them grow up before their eyes. They have a profound regard for what their student has accomplished.

Adoration is the underling theme. I saw it the most in the cheers that followed the announcement of the name of each graduate. It seems as if every student from the "Mr. Popular" class president to the quietest, unknown clarinet player of the band has someone cheering for them. Everybody has a place at a high school graduation, and everybody feels loved.

Love was also seen in the tears of parents and grandparents as they watched their son or daughter, grandson or granddaughter, walk across the stage signifying their growing up and no longer being quite so little. All those corny speeches of "this is the end of one chapter of your life and the start of another," maybe they weren't so far off.

The whirlwind of feelings and thoughts that encompasses the graduates is a wild mix of excitement, fear and aggressive exuberance. In both of my graduation experiences, I can hardly remember what happened other than walking across that stage and getting my diploma.

What I saw at my sister's graduation started with excitement. The kind of feeling that is buried deep inside and that produces a pride so great because you know you have worked hard and completed something. The EPHS class of 1999 was bursting with excitement as they roared with clapping and stomping, and yelling and screaming as the ceremony ended.

I think fear was also in the air. New and strange beginnings, ending life-long securities, and saying goodbye to friends can be scary business. The freedom that comes with graduating is intense. The fist thrust into the air against the instruction of the school.

Walking across the stage and shaking hands with the principal while thinking, "I no longer have to answer to you anymore!"

Graduations are emotional megabombs. And I say to eat it up. Parents be proud of your loved one. Adore them. Students bask in your moment of glory. Be excited and proud of what you have accomplished. Rank in your glory while it's there, because it doesn't come often. Don't miss out on it.

Adoration is the underlying theme. I saw it the most in the cheers that followed the announcement of the name of each graduate. It seems as if every student from the "Mr. Popular" class president to the quietest, unknown clarinet player of the band has someone cheering for them. Everybody has a place at a high school graduation, and everybody feels loved.

Love was also seen in the tears of parents and grandparents as they
June 9, 1999
www.UCFfuture.com

Sabbath Delivers Their Final Appearance

KAMRIO VAZQUEZ
STAFF WRITER

Due to a series of events and miscalculations on my behalf I missed most of the bands on the bill. Such fact did not bother me much since I didn't like most of the bands anyways. The only good band I missed was Slayer. I've seen them twice already so it did not bother me much, besides an outdoor setting at 5 o'clock in the afternoon is not the best place to watch Slayer. When we arrived, the Def-

Rob Zombie. He was scheduled to go on as the front man Marilyn Manson was the Alice Cooper of the 90's. Such fact did not bother me much since I didn't like most of the bands anyways. The only good band I missed was Slayer. I've seen them twice already so it did not bother me much, besides an outdoor setting at 5 o'clock in the afternoon is not the best place to watch Slayer. When we arrived, the Defileons were set to hit the stage. In all honesty, I did not pay too much attention to their set other.

The first group I saw was none other than Rob Zombie. He was scheduled to go on as the sun was about to go down. If you ask me the Ozzfest should have started a little later. I don't see what the big deal was with finishing before 10 p.m.

For a while critics have claimed that Marilyn Manson was the Alice Cooper of the 90's and in all honesty that title belongs to Rob Zombie. Like Cooper before him, he paid his dues in a band that bared his last name. Once the band ran its course he went solo and even married one of his dancers.

Rob Zombie's show is the equivalent of a heavy metal B movie. It's got fire, girls and creepy sound effects gave it a nice feel that went well with the song. The set was big without being excessive. The lights and the props gave it a more intimate touch. It almost felt like being in a small theatre, especially when it was set against the backdrop of a huge Ozzfest banner.

I found this a little odd since this song was from Heaven and Hell the first Black Sabbath album without Ozzy. It would have been odd to see Ozzy doing his best Dio impersonation complete with devil horns.

The set list covered most of the bands essential material including all my all time favorite Sabbath song “Paranoid.” Before “Sabbath Bloody Sabbath” Tommy “Riffmaster” Iommi played the intro of “Neon Knights.” I found this a little odd since this song was from Heaven and Hell the first Black Sabbath album without Ozzy. It would have been odd to see Ozzy doing his best Dio impersonation complete with devil horns.

The song “Black Sabbath” was one of the highlights of the set. The dim lights, smoke and creepy sound effects gave it a nice feel that went well with the song. Of course they played “Iron Man” and finished the set with “Paranoid” a song they played so many times they could do it in their sleep.

A connoisseur’s thirst is never fully quenched and there are a lot of other songs that I would have loved to hear.

I was disappointed that Iommi only played the beginning of “Supernaut” before “Paranoid” but I can’t complain. Sabbath performed a show worthy of their legendary status and when it was over, I went home satisfied.
Even though he is earning mounds of cash for it he had to be a major pain in the rectum cavity for George Lucas to make episode one. Apart from keeping up to its hype. There might be no such thing as bad publicity but there is such a thing as too much publicity. Just ask Jerry Seinfeld.

Even though he is earning mountains of cash for it he had to be a major pain in the rectum cavity for George Lucas to make episode one. Apart from keeping up to its hype. There might be no such thing as bad publicity but there is such a thing as too much publicity. Just ask Jerry Seinfeld.

Most critics and fans would agree that he has to retrace his steps Lucas has a lot of things that movies like Star Wars feels a little too cartoonish for their own good. Even if you were living under a rock on some stranded island off the coast of Antarctica for the last 18 months you probably were aware that some low budget movie about intergalactic warfare was going to be released on the 19th day of the fifth month of the last year of the twentieth century. The problem with a movie of this scale is that it is almost impossible to live up to its hype. There might be no such thing as bad publicity but there is such a thing as too much publicity. Just ask Jerry Seinfeld.

Even though he is earning mountains of cash for it he had to be a major pain in the rectum cavity for George Lucas to make episode one. Apart from keeping up to its hype. There might be no such thing as bad publicity but there is such a thing as too much publicity. Just ask Jerry Seinfeld.

The human actors were well chosen for the most part. Liam “Darkman” Neeson was a perfect choice for Qui Gon Jinn. Obi Wan was little more than a Robin Hood action character development, you know the kind good. Most critics and fans would agree that he has to retrace his steps Lucas has a lot of things that movies like Star Wars feels a little too cartoonish for their own good. Even if you were living under a rock on some stranded island off the coast of Antarctica for the last 18 months you probably were aware that some low budget movie about intergalactic warfare was going to be released on the 19th day of the fifth month of the last year of the twentieth century. The problem with a movie of this scale is that it is almost impossible to live up to its hype. There might be no such thing as bad publicity but there is such a thing as too much publicity. Just ask Jerry Seinfeld.

Even though he is earning mountains of cash for it he had to be a major pain in the rectum cavity for George Lucas to make episode one. Apart from keeping up to its hype. There might be no such thing as bad publicity but there is such a thing as too much publicity. Just ask Jerry Seinfeld.

In the same manner that Lucas overspent that Jar Jar guy I feel he did not use Darth Maul to his full advantage. Sure he only appeared in a handful of scenes there but apart from the fighting sequences he spoke chills went down people’s spine and said about 2.5 sentences. What made Vader so great was not his fighting ability but his imposing presence. When he spoke chills went down people’s spine and when he acted everyone prayed for their lives. They should have made Maul speak for the emperor or the same way Vader did on episodes one and two and have him kick a little more butt.

If there was one area in which the movie did not disappoint it was the effects department. The cities looked so big that they made the L.A. of Blade Runner look like Bithilo. The light saber fights were superior to all the ones in the previous movies combined.

The movie delivers in the action department it’s just that there is a big gap between action sequences. Now that the anticipation is done with it would be nice to appreciate this movie for what it is.

It’s the beginning of a story that sets things up for future episodes. The movie is a promise of better things to come. Maybe the next one could be as good as Empire.

For now, Phantom is a promising star. It is a little bumpy at first but it does the job efficiently.
Chuck Shepherd's
CROUS OF THE WERD

Lead Stories

Students in the pornography course (COL 289) at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., submitted as final graded projects fiction, photography, a video of a man's eyes as he masturbates, and in one case, a bondage performance in which a female beggar to be whipped with a rubber cat-o-nine-tails, according to a May report in the Hartford Courant. Said one student, when asked by a neighbor if his course requirements would reach course on porn: "(They'd) shrug and say, 'That's what kids do these days; they make porn at school.'"

In February, North Korean Woo Yong Gak, 69, was released from prison in South Korea, where he had been detained since 1938 and was the world's longest-held political prisoner. Still 38 years short of that record, in a jail in Bradenton, Fla., Palestinian researcher Mazen Al-Najjar just completed his second year of confinement without being told of the evidence against him. Al-Najjar, a U.S. resident for 15 years with three American-born children, faces deportation for some sort of association with a terrorist group, the nature of which the U.S. Justice Department has repeatedly refused to disclose, citing national security.

In March, for the first time, not only was the Miss Thailand beauty contest televised nationally, but so was the Miss Tiffany Universe contest, which is the equivalent for Thailand's males to Miss America's pageant. An April Associated Press report from Bangkok concluded, after polling many viewers, that at least one of the Tiffany Universe finalists made Miss Thailand look "positively mousey" and that the Tiffany Universe winner was "every bit as feminine" as Miss Thailand.

Latest Religious Messages

In February, Kahr Arms of Worce$t, Mass., a gun manufacturer under the umbrella of the Unification Church of Rev. Sun Myung Moon (who insists he's doing the work of Jesus), announced it had purchased Auto-Ordnance Corp., manufacturer of the Thompson machine gun "(tommy gun)." Kahr (run by Rev. Moon's son) was already prominent for its high-quality line of small, potent handguns, "What's the message?" asked one critic, interviewed by The Washington Post: "Turn the other cheek, or lock and load?"

In February in New Westminster, British Columbia, a court acquitted three of the four Sikhs arrested in a 1997 braw$ at a local temple that began when newer members started sitting in chairs at tables in the dining hall while traditional members insisted on the holiness of sitting on the floor. (In September, in Broward County, Fla., a traditionalist, no-furniture Sikh opened fire in a local temple, killing one man.)

Recent Apparitions: Yuba City, Calif., January: the image of Mary appeared in a knothole in a tree; Wareham, Mass., February: the image of Mary appeared in a knothole in a tree; Lubbock, Texas, in March: the image of Mary appeared in a knothole in a tree; Yuba City, Calif., February: the image of Jesus appeared in white spindle of a dress in an Episcopalian Church; Union City, Calif., March: the image of Jesus appeared in an unfinished concrete wall at the Buddhist Purple Lotus University.

In March, Walter Gene Grassie, 49, a former protestant minister whose eight-year affair with a married Mormon woman had recently ended, was convicted of vandalism at several Mormon churches in New Mexico, causing $2.5 million in damages, apparently because he thought the woman's religion was the only thing preventing her from divorcing her husband and marrying Grassie. Prosecutors said he also wrote graffiti calling the woman a "(Mormon) whore." The two had fallen in love shortly after forming the touring musical act, Peace Valley Yodelers.

Ten days apart in April, Britain's Advertising Standards Authority and the official newspaper of the Catholic archdiocese of Cincinnati, Ohio, issued rulings that miracle and prayer advertisements were deceptive and could no longer be published under their auspices. The British organization spokesman and a church advertising miracles would have to provide proof "just like a company that makes washing powder." and the Cincinnati newspaper banned ads thanking particular saints for answering their prayers.

First Things First

In April, several fire trucks speeding down the Massachusetts Turnpike with sirens blaring and lights flashing, en route to help battle a brushfire around the town of Westfield, were delayed a few minutes when a tolltaker insisted on charging each driver. A tolltaker took an April Fools' Day joke too far, according to police. Similarly, in February, an ambulance rushing a severely burned man from Gibraltar to Seville, Spain, could not escape the $4 toll. — Firefighters in Kawasaki, Japan, freed a 5-month-old girl from a coin-operated, 13-by-13-by-24-inch locker in April after her parents had deposited her there while they had dinner at a nearby restaurant. The parents were reprimanded, but not arrested.

In Lubbock, Texas, in March, a bomb being made by Robert Keith Hill, 24, intended for an abortion clinic, exploded in his lap, killing him. And in Tampa, Fla., in April, a 28-year-old man in the passenger seat of a pickup truck was killed after he decided to open the door and climb to the back of the truck at 55 mph; he fell and was crushed under the rear wheel. And a 15-year-old boy at the prestigious Enon College in London (attended by Princes William and Harry) was killed in February while playing the "fainting game" between supper and prayer time; the object is for kids to put a cord around another kid's neck and tighten it slowly until he faints. Say the anecdote was left out of the transcript.

In Lubbock, Texas, a bomb being made by Robert Keith Hill, 24, intended for an abortion clinic, exploded in his lap, killing him. And in Tampa, Fla., in April, a 28-year-old man in the passenger seat of a pickup truck was killed after he decided to open the door and climb to the back of the truck at 55 mph; he fell and was crushed under the rear wheel. And a 15-year-old boy at the prestigious Enon College in London (attended by Princes William and Harry) was killed in February while playing the "fainting game" between supper and prayer time; the object is for kids to put acord around another kid's neck and tighten it slowly until he faints. Say the anecdote was left out of the transcript.

In Lubbock, Texas, a bomb being made by Robert Keith Hill, 24, intended for an abortion clinic, exploded in his lap, killing him. And in Tampa, Fla., in April, a 28-year-old man in the passenger seat of a pickup truck was killed after he decided to open the door and climb to the back of the truck at 55 mph; he fell and was crushed under the rear wheel. And a 15-year-old boy at the prestigious Enon College in London (attended by Princes William and Harry) was killed in February while playing the "fainting game" between supper and prayer time; the object is for kids to put acord around another kid's neck and tighten it slowly until he faints. Say the anecdote was left out of the transcript.
Although Gamma Ray has been at it since the day Kai Hansen left Helloween some 10 years ago, their brand of power metal has been largely ignored in the US. Now thanks to the efforts of labels like Century Media, Noise and Metal Blade bands like Gamma Ray are finally getting a chance of exposure in the U.S. Their mixture of fast riffs, larger than life melodies, high-pitched vocals and lyrics with occasional Christian undertones was considered for a long time to be too cheesy and uplifting for metalheads in the U.S. that preferred to listen to evil music with cookie monster vocals. The few people that did like this kind of metal were forced to spend tons of money ordering import CD’s. Powerplant is the work of a band that is on top form and dying for the almighty breakthrough record. The band has successfully evolved their style to appeal to a wider audience without pulling a “Metallica” on their loyal following. Even with its darker than usual intro, “Anywhere in the Galaxy” is classic Gamma Ray that could appeal to all of them Star Trek geeks. “Heavy Metal Universe” sounds like child of Manowar and Gamma Ray. “Short as Hell” is what Metallica would sound like if they didn’t have the charisma of 78 year-old retired guidance counselors. By far the biggest surprise on the CD is their cover of “It’s a Sin” by the Pet Shop Boys. I’m as fed up as the next guy of hearing bands like the Pet Shop Boys. If they were signed to a major label instead of an indie “It’s a Sin” would be a hit for sure.

Powerplant is heavy metal for the next millennium and proof that there is more to Metal than four balding washed up mascara wearing, cigar smoking wannabe rockers from San Francisco that haven’t made a great record since their old bass player died in 1986.

—RAMIRO VAZQUEZ

The purpose of this CD is to raise funds to help preserve our national monuments, so what they do is gather a bunch of popular artists from the past and present singing patriotic songs.

The CD includes artists ranging from Frank Sinatra to Neil Diamond. The sentiments on the songs are noble and since this really isn’t my cup of tea I will admit that I found the selection here to be listenable, but with twenty one songs a stinker was bound to pop out. I simply cannot stand Paul Simon’s “Graceland.” Listening to that song is as fun as watching a Real World marathon.

Spangled Banner. If Hollywood ever makes a Mr. Ed movie they should cast Cher as Mr. time. Then there is the ever annoying little brat called Leann Rimes.

—RAMIRO VAZQUEZ
HELP WANTED

LOCUM TENENS MEDICAL

OPENINGS AVAILABLE IN ORLANDO

ASSISTANT NURSES

Local and Travel

Immediate Openings .

Contact Mike Kenan at 813-787-6222

For information call France Realty

For sale

Vacation Home - Chateau de la Mer

9225 Old Tampa Bay Dr.

Largo, FL 33770

For Sale

Contact Mike Kenan at 813-787-6222

WANTED

Tubing for large sump pump

Tools and Material

Call 727-779-4646

For Sale

FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Townhouse

USF - Near Pinellas Park

$950/month

San Diego, CA

Call 619-568-6646

For Rent

WANTED

Nanny, Babysitter, Home Help

Call 366-2545

For Sale

CAMPAIGN FOR FLORIDA:

OLDEST CONTINUING THEATER IN THE STATE

CAMP TAKAJA

FOR BOYS

ORLANDO, FL

366-1539

For Sale

IN THE NEWS

DIESEL AND GAS ENGINE REPAIRS.

FLORIDA ELECTRICIAN

20 YEARS EXPERIENCE

CUT Adam Smith

644-4690

For Sale

FLORIDA ELECTRICIAN

Cable, Wire, Sump Pumps, Narcotics

CUT Adam Smith

644-4690

For Sale

FURNISHED 2 BED/2 BATH

$585.00

UCF

3 bed/2 bath

$560.00

UCF

JUNE 9, 1999

HELP WANTED

Babysitter needed for 2 boys after school hours.

Tuscaloosa neighborhood. Monday - Friday.

Call 407-366-1539

For Rent

Furnished apartment with loft.

$1,000.00 up-front for 3 months.

Call (407) 926-5475

For Sale

WANTED

Female, non-smoker, side driver with own car. M-F afternoons 1-6, light housekeeping, some flexibility.

Experience reference req'd, downtown Orlando. 813-396-4565.

For Sale

HELP WANTED

- Vest Parking Attendants needed.

- Clean driving record and the ability to work under strenuous physical conditions are a must.

- Must be at least 25 years and must be in excellent physical condition.

- Call 244-5600 for an interview.

FOR RENT

3 Bedroom Townhouse

3 bed/3.5 bath

$2,500.00/month

San Antonio

Call 210-990-6255

For Sale

2000 Chrysler Concorde

Blue, 4 door.

New tires, ac & brakes.

$8,400.

Call (407) 987-5030 M-F 9-5.

For Sale

AVAIL.

3 bedroom

2 bath

$385.00

UCF

21-AUGUST

For Sale

FOR RENT - Condo in Springwood Village on Hwy. 434 in Longwood (behind Jacobson's)

3 bed/2 bath $585.00.

Walk to school, utilities included.

Call (407) 898-6590.

For Sale

Babysitter needed for 2 boys after school hours.

Tuscaloosa neighborhood. Monday - Friday.

Call 407-366-1539

For Sale

Help Wanted - Vest Parking Attendants needed.

Clean driving record and the ability to work under strenuous physical conditions are a must.

Must be at least 25 years and must be in excellent physical condition.

Call 244-5600 for an interview.

INSTRUCTION

HELP WANTED

Corporate Express, a worldwide leading distribution based in Orlando. Computer skills are necessary. Under other experiences in a plus. Apply in person at 1800 E. Colonial Drive, Orlando, FL 32803. Great working and background check required. EOE/MP/DY.

Passed Florida, non-smoking mother to take care of two children in my home. Usually 8:30 am for breakfast.

Fax resumes at (407) 503-7008.

Open 24 hours.

Fax resumes at (407) 503-7008.

pas to, Saturday. 8:30 - midnight.

Fax resumes at (407) 503-7008.

Fax resumes at (407) 503-7008.
UF claims TAAC conference all-sports trophies

UCF claimed the Trans American Athletic Conference's all-sports trophies for both men's and women's sports for the 1998-99 athletic seasons, the second time in four years that Golden Knights athletics shined brightest among TAAC schools.

UF won the Sherman Day Trophy as the top women's program in the conference, tallying 217.5 points to take second-place Florida State (187.5) and third-place Florida State (154.5). Each of UF's men's teams claimed a conference title, but there were strong showings from basketball, soccer and tennis (all finishing second) and baseball (fourth).

UF now has won both all-sports championships for the second time (1995-96, 1998-99).

This is UF's third men's championship (1995-96, 1994-95) and third for the women's (1996-97, 1995-96).

"Competitively, we probably had the best year we've ever had," Sloan said. "We also had a very good year academically. You'd like to have success but you also want to have meaning. I hope that the athletes are having a good experience here. I know the coaches are working hard and doing a good job."

Sloan says UF's success in its minor sports should not be taken for granted. He said it's important for UF to "be successful across the board to make it more attractive to a larger conference."

This is part of our plan to at some point in time advance to another conference," Sloan said. "You want to be successful in the visible sports like football, but when you also have an all-around program, men and women that also presents a good picture to a future conference; that you're highly successful and that you can compete on a regional and national basis.

UF players drafted to MLB

ROBBIE NEISWANGER
INDIPENDENT FLORIDA ALLEGATOR (c. OF FLORIDA)

Three UF players or signees in the first round, two in the second and seven total through the first seven rounds.

Also, the list of Gators continued to grow at last year's Major League Baseball Amateur Draft when Derek Nicholson, Todd Johannes and Tommy Bond were cleared off the board in rounds 16, 23 and 25, respectively.

By the time the draft was over, 17 UF players or recruits had been drafted. Still, someone was missing. Through three days of drafting there had been no mention of Greg Catalanotte.

"I'm going to go into the (draft) not really expecting much, but when it happens I'm going to be pretty happy," Catalanotte said. "It's my life goal to play pro baseball, and all I can do is wait and see what happens."

However, Catalanotte was not alone among a few of his teammates, headed by pitcher Matt McClendon, and several of UF's 2000 recruiting class will have an opportunity to move on to the next level.

McClendon, who is coming off of a recent injury to his pectoral muscle, is rated No. 46 in Baseball America's Top 100 draft prospects list.

UF is ready for the next level, and its up to a professional pro baseball, and all I can do is wait and see what happens.

NU's Donald takes NCAA title from Big Ten rival McLean

ROBBIE NEISWANGER
MINNESOTA DAILY (U. MINNESOTA)

Lake Donald is not James McLean. Donald didn't hit towering drives, he's not from Australia. The only thing he beat was Yale, on the eighth, when he took that double-play.

And the former Boston Red Sox prospect from White Plains, N.Y., knows that he didn't even place him. Lake just hit a lot of good shots.

Donald finished 3-under par at Hazeltine National Golf Club, three strokes ahead of Austrian Andreas Hauser, who won the team championship. McLean, who won the tournament at New Mexico last year to punch his ticket for the second straight year, it almost wasn't to be.

Starting the day 4-under par, McLean putted on a sparkling display of golf to get close. McLean shot a 5-under-par 35 on the final side to pull even with Donald.

The steady Donald responded by hitting a birdie putt on the 11th hole to regain sole possession of the lead. McLean wouldn't get no closer. He finished with a 67, the low round of the tournament.

Through it all, it just had an awful lot of good shots and just being smart," Donald said.

After Donald holed in his par putt on the 18th hole, he walked off Hazeltine with a title and his father gave him the title run, which won the Big Ten title.

Donald's game is different from Hazeltine. Donald had an advantage because they were familiar with the challenges posed by Hazeltine.

"I have no idea how it feels like all the greens. He didn't hit the grow­ing dr­ ses, or just on piments around the greens. He didn't break the arms on every hole都市ized on a solid putting style," the only signee leaning to bypass his college eligibility.

"I'm not very worried," Donald said. "When Ryuji (and Tony) Kelly (of Chapman) caught me, I didn't think too much. It kind of got me going. It fired me up."

"I'm kind of a matchplay type of a guy," Donald said.

This is Donald's second year, it almost wasn't to be.

Donald finished at 4-under par at Hazeltine National Golf Club, three strokes ahead of Austrian Andreas Hauser, who won the team championship. McLean, who won the tournament at New Mexico last year to punch his ticket for the second straight year, it almost wasn't to be.

Starting the day 4-under par, McLean putted on a sparkling display of golf to get close. McLean shot a 5-under-par 35 on the final side to pull even with Donald.

The steady Donald responded by hitting a birdie putt on the 11th hole to regain sole possession of the lead. McLean wouldn't get no closer. He finished with a 67, the low round of the tournament.

Through it all, it just had an awful lot of good shots and just being smart," Donald said.

After Donald holed in his par putt on the 18th hole, he walked off Hazeltine with a title and his father gave him the title run, which won the Big Ten title.

Donald's game is different from Hazeltine. Donald had an advantage because they were familiar with the challenges posed by Hazeltine.

"I have no idea how it feels like all the greens. He didn't hit the growing dr­ ses, or just on piments around the greens. He didn't break the arms on every hole都市ized on a solid putting style," the only signee leaning to bypass his college eligibility.

"I'm not very worried," Donald said. "When Ryuji (and Tony) Kelly (of Chapman) caught me, I didn't think too much. It kind of got me going. It fired me up."

"I'm kind of a matchplay type of a guy," Donald said.

This is Donald's second year, it almost wasn't to be.

Donald finished at 4-under par at Hazeltine National Golf Club, three strokes ahead of Austrian Andreas Hauser, who won the team championship. McLean, who won the tournament at New Mexico last year to punch his ticket for the second straight year, it almost wasn't to be.

Starting the day 4-under par, McLean putted on a sparkling display of golf to get close. McLean shot a 5-under-par 35 on the final side to pull even with Donald.

The steady Donald responded by hitting a birdie putt on the 11th hole to regain sole possession of the lead. McLean wouldn't get no closer. He finished with a 67, the low round of the tournament.

Through it all, it just had an awful lot of good shots and just being smart," Donald said.

After Donald holed in his par putt on the 18th hole, he walked off Hazeltine with a title and his father gave him the title run, which won the Big Ten title.

Donald's game is different from Hazeltine. Donald had an advantage because they were familiar with the challenges posed by Hazeltine.

"I have no idea how it feels like all the greens. He didn't hit the growing dr­ ses, or just on piments around the greens. He didn't break the arms on every hole都市ized on a solid putting style," the only signee leaning to bypass his college eligibility.

"I'm not very worried," Donald said. "When Ryuji (and Tony) Kelly (of Chapman) caught me, I didn't think too much. It kind of got me going. It fired me up."

"I'm kind of a matchplay type of a guy," Donald said.
Former players making names for themselves as MLB farmhands

STAFF WRITER

Since 1982, forty-eight UCF baseball players have played in the minor league including 29 who were drafted. Only 14 players are currently on minor league rosters, all with the final goal in mind to some day play in the majors.

Outfielder Chad Mottola and pitcher Joe Wagner were the only former Knights to be selected in the first round. Mottola was taken by the Cincinnati Reds in 1992, and Wagner was picked by the Milwaukee Brewers the following year.

Wagner no longer plays baseball, but Mottola has still kept his dream alive after getting a taste of the majors. After being traded to the Texas Rangers last year, he signed as a free agent with the Chicago White Sox and currently plays for Charlotte, Chicago's AAA affiliate.

He was hitting .295 with seven home runs and 34 RBIs as of June 5. He was an All-America selection June 9, 1999.

Outfielder Adam Johnson is the only other position players in the minors. Both Johnson name has a few ties with the Knights staff with his blazing speed.

Although, he has struggled at the plate with a .196 average, he has stolen a league-leading 32 bases while only reaching base 66 times.

Adam), and playing every day is not easy, Efik Johnson said. "Seeing his (Adam's) lifestyle while he was in the minors helped me a lot, and he told me that it's all about survival."

He was hitting .233 with 11 stolen bases but has committed 15 errors.

Erik has had the luxury of playing alongside a former UCF teammate, pitcher Kevin Gordon, for their first two years in the minors. Gordon has been on the disabled list for the past month with a sore arm, after only throwing seven innings in two games this year.

Two other players have been teammates for the past two years. Pitcher Travis Held and outfielder Eric Snead played together in New Jersey last year before moving up the A-ball Potomac in the St. Louis Cardinals organization.

Snead has caught the eye of the Cardinals staff with his blazing speed.

"Seeing his (Adam's) lifestyle while he was in the minors helped me a lot, and he told me that it's all about survival. Erik has had the luxury of playing alongside a former UCF teammate, pitcher Kevin Gordon, for their first two years in the minors. Gordon has been on the disabled list for the past month with a sore arm, after only throwing seven innings in two games this year.

Two other players have been teammates for the past two years. Pitcher Travis Held and outfielder Eric Snead played together in New Jersey last year before moving up the A-ball Potomac in the St. Louis Cardinals organization.

Snead has caught the eye of the Cardinals staff with his blazing speed. Although, he has struggled at the plate with a .196 average, he has stolen a league-leading 32 bases while only reaching base 66 times.

Held had a solid rookie campaign last year going 5-5 with a 4.05 ERA, but has had a slow start this year and is currently in the bullpen. He is 0-4 with 6.48 ERA with 35 strikeouts in only 33.1 innings.

Pitcher Mike Maroth and John Foran have had the best seasons thus far. Foran, a 1995 draftee who now plays for A-ball Rancho Cucamonga for the San Diego Padres, is 6-3 with the league's ninth best ERA (3.24). Maroth had a strong rookie campaign last year in the Boston Red Sox organization, and he plays for A-ball Sarasota. He is 6-3 with a 3.51 ERA in 10 starts.

Outfielder Will Croud and pitcher Matt Lubozynski are both with the Anaheim Angels and play for Cedar Rapids and Lake Elsinore, respectively. Croud is hitting .281 with 17 RBIs, and four triples. After starting the year on the disabled list, Lubozynski has recorded two saves in eight appearances with a 3.00 ERA this year.

Shortstop Eric Rigs and catcher Brad King are the only other position players in the minors. Both players have had their share of struggles this year at the plate. Rigs, who plays for the Los Angeles Dodgers Class A team in San Bernardino, is hitting .233 with 11 stolen bases but has committed 15 errors.

King is playing for West Tennessee, AA for the Cubs, and hitting .309 in a platoon situation.

Pitchers Lester Victoria and Todd Bellhorn pitching in the minor leagues after also being offensive threats at UCF. Victoria plays for Quad City, A-ball for the Minnesota Twins, and is 1-1 with a 5.13 ERA in 22 appearances.

Bellhorn, who was a starter at UCF, is in the bullpen with Columbia, A-ball for the New York Mets. He is 1-0 with a 4.76 ERA in 15 appearances.

The Central Florida Future will keep you updated about how UCF's alumni is doing in their quest for a major-league roster spot. Look for more stories and updates in upcoming issues as we add Brent Spooner, Tim Booth, and Troy Satterfield to the list of players to keep an eye on.
Hartley expected to be a key figure for UCF women's golf

Championship with a final round 72, but finished no higher than 24th in any other event until the Trans America Athletic Conference Tournament, where she tied for seventh. After an opening round 80, she finished 75-73. In five tournaments, Hartley had a 78.08 scoring average.

Her improvement is a trend Fjelstul expects will continue.

"She had a slow start, but she turned it on in the end," Fjelstul said.

"She's been playing really great golf, and I expect a lot from her next year."

Also, Kristen Putman, who played at UCF from 1992-96, finished tied for 101 with eight other players and did not qualify for the final two days. She finished 5-over after shooting 75-74-149.
Sloan looking to fill openings with the right people

It's now Athletic Director Steve Sloan's job to replace them.

“We've always been involved in a lot of searches, but never quite this many," Sloan said. "It's a process you have to go through and a lot of times the process is fairly lengthy.”

By the end of the week, Sloan is optimistic UCF will have finalists for its women's basketball and women's soccer coaching openings.

Sloan said UCF has narrowed its list of women's basketball candidates to 37, but expects that to be cut to 10-12 after the search committee meets again. The women's soccer coach list is at eight and will be cut to three finalists.

There lies the problem. The changes must be made soon in order for the new coaches to adjust to their new surroundings and begin preparing to adequately fill the shoes of their predecessors.

"We've gone through all the time frames you have to go through to advertise the jobs and the criteria the committees have to establish to get down to the final group," Sloan said. "This is a time of year that's kind of in-between, so people are available. We need to get them hired before they get involved in next year.'

Then, the challenge is to keep this batch of coaches around. If UCF makes the right choices, and these new coaches are able to keep the Golden Knights winning and take them to the next level, there must be a plan in place to keep them from jumping ship. That's Sloan's next step, get UCF into a higher profile conference, and keep his new coaches from using their positions as a stepping stone for something better.

Football coach Mike Kruczek has already spurned an NFL job and has had his name rumored as a possibility for other jobs. That's what success will do for you. He's stayed because he can see the future can be bright. But how long will he wait. Hopefully his patience is equal to his coaching prowess.

Jay Bergman is a legend, one of the best baseball coaches in the collegiate ranks and UCF is lucky to have him and associate head coach Greg Frady, who should assure that the Golden Knights will be set in the dugout for quite a while.

Kirk Speraw has made great things happen for UCF already, and could have his best unit ever next season. Ditto for men's soccer Coach Bob Winch, women's golf coach Jill Mansur-Wentworth.

Volleyball has already undergone a coaching change with Magi Fitzgerald replacing Miriam Ochoa, and will look to be one of the coaches the Golden Knights are going to want to keep around for a long time. This will be the first time UCF will have separate coaches for men's and women's tennis.

Gail Falkenberg resigned before this season after coaching both sports since 1991. Michael Dublin coached the squads this year but only on a voluntary basis for one season. UCF also hopes to finalize its list for a men's tennis coach by next week.

The next challenge is the highest profile conference, and keep his new coaches from using their positions as a stepping stone for something better. That's what success will do for you. He's stayed because he can see the future can be bright. But how long will he wait. Hopefully his patience is equal to his coaching prowess.

Jay Bergman is a legend, one of the best baseball coaches in the collegiate ranks and UCF is lucky to have him and associate head coach Greg Frady, who should assure that the Golden Knights will be set in the dugout for quite a while.

Kirk Speraw has made great things happen for UCF already, and could have his best unit ever next season. Ditto for men's soccer Coach Bob Winch, women's golf coach Jill Mansur-Wentworth.

Volleyball has already undergone a coaching change with Magi Fitzgerald replacing Miriam Ochoa, and will look to be one of the coaches the Golden Knights are going to want to keep around for a long time. This will be the first time UCF will have separate coaches for men's and women's tennis.

Gail Falkenberg resigned before this season after coaching both sports since 1991. Michael Dublin coached the squads this year but only on a voluntary basis for one season. UCF also hopes to finalize its list for a men's tennis coach by next week.

In the meantime, UCF has made final offers to coaches for men's golf and women's tennis, but cannot make an announcement until final paperwork granting approval from the state is received.

Kipp Minter has been replaced as men's golf coach after leading the program on a volunteer basis.

"This is the first time budgetary wise we could have two tennis coaches and a men's golf coach," Sloan said. "We've needed to do that but we just haven't been able to afford it. But now we can at least afford that as much, so we'll have a coach for each sport other than track. We're glad to be able to move to this point.'

UCF has made progress, with a lot of it coming as a direct result of people like Richter and Bria, who did all they could for the program. Now, its time to move to another level, with new people, who hopefully will make this university a magnet for talented coaches to jump to, instead of jump from.
Brisson mulling over decision to go pro whether or not they would be able to sign him in the later rounds.

"I was happy to get drafted, but I told them that I want sixth or seventh round money and right now the difference is way off, Brisson said. "I'm gonna tell them what it's gonna take for me to leave UCF.

Brisson has said that he would consider returning to UCF for his senior year, but the lure of professional baseball causes players to toss and turn about the idea. Brisson is in that predicament right now.

"The Mets still have a chance, and it's not a question of my ability, Brisson said. "Now it's a question of whether they can pull me away from UCF.

UCF also had a pair of players who completed their eligibility get selected by the pros. The Anaheim Angels took second baseman Tim Boeth in the 33rd round, and the Pittsburgh Pirates picked left-handed pitcher Troy Satterfield in the 37th round.

"Nothing pleased a coach more than seeing seniors get drafted, Frady said. "They'll now have a chance to further their careers after giving everything they had for four years.

Boeth battled injuries this season, but only missed six games for the Knights. While batting in the leadoff spot for most of the season, he hit .361 with 45 stolen bases. He also scored a team-high 60 runs and added three home runs and 39 RBIs.

Satterfield had a disappointing senior season after finishing 5-3 with a 3.65 ERA in 1998. He started 15 games with a 4-6 record and a 6.06 ERA, yielding 18 walks while striking out 43 in 78.2 innings, but allowed 109 hits as opponents hit .331 against him.

But often times, pro teams will take a chance on left-handers. Satterfield also is big at 6-foot-6, and has good control with a strong arm. Those are two qualifications scouts look for.

Frady said that 11-12 players have been signed for next year, including four from the early signing period in January. Of those four players, David Lemon and Matt Allegra were drafted. The Chicago Cubs selected Lemon, who played at Eustis High School, in the 28th round. After committing to UCF in January, Allegra was taken in the 16th round, but has decided to play in community college instead.

Football signee Ellis Debrow, a wide receiver from Pensacola's Woodham High School, was taken in the 22nd round by the Boston Red Sox, but is not expected to sign and may play both football and baseball for UCF next season.

Debrow is a left-handed pitcher and outfielder/first baseman and is a terrific athlete that has the coaching staffs of both sports teams eagerly anticipating his arrival.

The Knights can now look forward to next year with at least five starting position players returning.

Jason Arnold will be back as the closer.

"We still feel that we're gonna be very strong next year, Frady said. "We'll have more pitching and more depth, but we're still unsure about all of our incoming players.

Jason Arnold will be back as the closer.

"We still feel that we're gonna be very strong next year, Frady said. "We'll have more pitching and more depth, but we're still unsure about all of our incoming players.
Hartley competes in 1999 U.S. Open

TRAVIS BELL
STAFF WRITER

It was quite a week for UCF freshman golfer Olivia Hartley. After Kelli Kuehne, who had already qualified for the Open, won the LPGA’s Corning Classic on Sunday, Hartley received a call to fill the final qualifying spot for the the 1999 U.S. Women’s Open, played June 3-6 at Old Waverly Golf Club in West Point, Miss.

“I’m really excited for her and I’m proud of her,” UCF coach Jill Fjelstul said. “She’s only been with us since Christmas, so this is a great experience for her.”

Hartley failed to make the cut after two rounds put her at 24 over par. Still, the experience was one that she’ll likely never forget.

Hartley, a native of New Zealand, was the top amateur during a U.S. Open regional qualifying round at the Legacy Club at Alaqua Lakes on May 11 with a round of 74. She was one of 12 amateurs to make 150-player field.

Hartley tied for 147th place out of 150 golfers and needed to shoot even par to advance. Hartley shot nine-over 81 on Thursday and a 13-over 87 on Friday and finished 10th out of the 12 amateurs who played in the Open.

Hartley is expected to be a key figure in UCF golf for years to come. She finished tied for 10th in the inaugural UCF Women’s Golf Open.

HARTLEY, Page 13

BRISSON, Page 15

Junior catcher Brent Spooner headed up a group of four UCF baseball players selected in the Major League Baseball First Year Draft. Despite a love and loyalty for his university and teammates, Spooner has decided to sign with the St. Louis Cardinals, who selected him in the 12th round.

“It was tough to leave because I loved playing here,” Spooner said. “I owe the coaches a lot because they helped me become a better player.”

Hartley, a native of Johnson City, Tennessee in the Appalachian League.

“We weren’t surprised at all that he (Spooner) got drafted because we thought he would go between the 12th and 20th rounds,” Assistant Coach Greg Frady said. “He felt that coming to UCF would help put him in a good position to get drafted, and playing professional baseball has always been one of his goals.

Spooner batted .306 with five home runs and 39 RBIs, starting all but two games for the Golden Knights after transferring from Tallahassee Community College. He was most important behind the plate as he handled a young pitching staff while throwing out 24 of 55 attempted base runners.

Despite Spooner’s departure, the Golden Knights should return most of its nucleus from this year’s squad that finished 38-21. Only one other underclassman, Dustin Brisson, was among the draftees, a far cry from the seven that left early last season.

Arguably the best news from the draft for as far as UCF is concerned is that Brisson slipped to the 24th round. The New York Mets took Brisson, a 6-foot-3 left-handed power hitter, who led the team with .388 average, 17 home runs, and 76 RBIs.

“Dustin getting picked so late was the surprise of the draft for us,” Frady said.

Brisson and sophomore left fielder Matt Bowser posed a threatening 1-2 punch to opposing pitchers this year, and he felt teams began to worry about both going forward.

COACHING CAROUSEL continues at UCF

TONY MEJIA
SPORTS EDITOR

Fast forward with me five years, maybe 10. Karen Richter has led Auburn’s struggling soccer program to national prominence, becoming synonymous with success on the women’s soccer competing for national championships on an annual basis. Lynn Bria, after dominating the MAC for a couple of seasons at the helm of Ohio University, accepts a position directing a WNBA franchise.

Now try to tell me I’m way off base.

Unfortunately for UCF, you can’t because my scenarios aren’t that farfetched. Although I won’t claim to be Nostradamus, both these events are within the realm of possibility for two personable, talented coaches who got their start right here. However, as painful as it was for them to break ties with UCF, both went on to better situations and have every opportunity to achieve such lofty goals.

SLOAN, Page 14