Florida One ends up “the one”

JANE ELLIOT speaks about racism to UCF

"Racism is taught. We need to unteach racism." This was Jane Elliot’s message to the audience that had the privilege to hear her speak at the UCF Arena on Feb. 15.

Elliot has been fighting against racism since the past 35 years. Her 1968 experiment, Blue-Eyed, Brown-Eyed was an effort to help her third-grade class understand racism, and all its effects, after Martin Luther King, Jr., killed. She separated the students based on their eye color and then taught them what racism was all about.

What Elliot did not know was what effect her experiment would have on her, her family and the future of the children she taught. She spoke of the terrible ways that the citizens of her town reacted.

"If I had known how the experiment would end, I never would have done it," said Elliot with tears in her eyes.

Elliot’s children were discriminated against, her parents lost their business and she was alienated from the other teachers in the school, all because she refused to do the right thing and teach children that it was "okay to be white."

But on a positive side, Elliot has since spoken with the students that were in her class back in 1968, and they have said that their lives have forever been changed and that they would not be who they are today if it was not for this experiment.

UCF’s CREOL professor honored

Peter Delfyett, Jr., a researcher and professor at UCF, was honored at the Black Engineer of the Year Awards Conference in Baltimore on Thursday, Feb. 17. The event was sponsored by the Lockheed Martin Corporation.

Delfyett teaches Optics in CREOL, UCF’s School of Optics, Electrical and Computer Engineering and Physics. Dr. Delfyett has discovered a method of fitting 165 gigabytes per second into one laser beam, which is enough for up to 32,000 television stations. Cable and Communications Systems Companies will be able to use this new discovery.

Tyrone Taborn, chairman and publisher of USBH and Information Technology magazine, says that this prestigious award is given yearly to candidates demonstrating excellence in performance and whose qualifications place them among the nation’s highest achievers in technology.

Dr. Delfyett is from Queens, New York and earned his Ph.D. from The City University of New York. Currently, he teaches primarily in CREOL and has a joint appointment with the department of Physics. He continues his research which includes high speed optical communications, photonic networks, optical information processing, ultradiffraction phenomena and optical physics and spectroscopy. He is also the executive editor of IEEE Photonics Technology Letters.

"I love being here at UCF. I love the people around me," said Delfyett. He has been at UCF since December of 1993. He enjoys being part of UCF and feels that he can "grow and expand with it." Dr. Delfyett considers UCF to be "more dynamic" than other older universities.

UCF’s CREOL in a graduate school for optical science and engineering education and research. It offers state-of-the-art technology, light sciences, photonics, and nano-photonics.

2nd annual Knight Images Awards double awards, sponsorships

BECKI PANOFF STAFF WRITER

The Knights Images Awards (KIA) to be held April 8th at 2pm, gives communications undergrads a chance to show their talents and expose themselves to prospective employers.

"We wanted to create a venue to showcase these talented students, to create an event that could showcase their talents in front of the community as well as future employers," said Rachelle Lucas, KIA director. "We also want to make a scholarship eventually."

This second annual award showcase gives students the unique opportunity of displaying their talent in twenty categories.

Universities will also be partnering with local middle and high schools that are rated D or F schools within the top twenty percent of their senior classes would be admitted. The program however does not work this way. In fact it only adds on to the many different programs that the state already has in place. Many who attended the meeting on Thursday were in the frame of mind that the plan would decrease minority enrollment in the university system. This however is untrue as well. The plan will in fact increase minority enrollment.

"At Florida State University, we embrace the plan to bring more minorities to undergraduate education," said President Talbot D. Alemberet of FSU. The programs which the Board of Regents voted in will not only increase diversity, but will also provide approximately $20 million more in government funding and financial aid for low income families.

...The addition of $20 million in need based financial aid will increase access to those people who need it most to improve their own lives, regardless of their race," said Piccolo.

The One Florida plan is designed to improve college preparatory programs as well, such as the funding of the PSAT (Preliminary Scholastic Achievement Test) to increase scores on SATs, increased availability of AP or Advanced Placement courses and making recommendations for eliminating inequities in grades kindergarten through the twelfth grade.

Universities will also be partnering with local middle and high schools that are rated D or F schools. These 'Opportunity Alliances' will help minority recruitment and preparation for college. These universities will also step up their recruitment efforts in these low end performing schools to help the students raise their hopes and aspirations for their continuing education.

"No longer can we as Floridians start students off the block with a weight tied around their leg, whether that is race, socio-economic condition, or the fact that their school is not able to prepare them properly," stated Piccolo. "The greatest thing this program does is give hope."

Programs such as these are very important to the One Florida plan. In president Hitt's final words he stated firmly that he hoped that the BOR would vote for the plan as a whole and not just for pieces of the One Florida plan, and this they did. He made it very clear that he felt the plan could only work correctly if it were put into action intact.

"It deserves a chance to be tried and perfected. Carping about an idea without giving it an opportunity to work is the worst kind of racism," stated Myriam Marquez, a columnist with the Orlando Sentinel.

"My initiative ends racial preferences, racial set-asides, and race-based university admissions, not affirmative action properly understood," said Bush. "The One Florida Initiative transcends traditional notions of affirmative action and increases opportunities for Floridians of all racial backgrounds in ways that unite us, not divide us."

Delfyett discovered a method of fitting 165 gigabytes per second into one laser beam. Technology and students and professors alike study optics, the properties of light and lasers in order to develop a broad range of cost-effective advancements to be used in communications, computer technology and medicine for the future and the "next generation Internet."

"This is a very exciting and prestigious award," Delfyett said of this new honor. He is pleased that his potential has been recognized and commended. He would like to acknowledge Lockheed Martin and his colleagues here at UCF for their support. Dr. Delfyett was first honored in 1993 by U.S. Black Engineer magazine and since has earned a Presidential Early Career Award for Scientists that included a grant for a half-million dollars. He was also selected from hundreds of nominees to win the Outstanding Alumnus Award. Dr. Delfyett calls this award "a tremendous honor."

Apart from loving his job here at UCF, Dr. Delfyett is happily married and enjoys swimming, playing basketball, chess and the drums.

Elliot shows the audience how the world maps used in classrooms are not correct in scale and geographical placement by comparing it to the new world maps she said should be used for learning. "Don’t you choose your clothes based on color? Don’t you buy your food based on it’s color? You can’t tell me that we should live in a color blind society," said Elliot. "We are all part of the human race. And we should be proud of what we have worked for and achieved. Racism is not genetic. It is not hereditary. It is a learned response. And we need to unlearn all that we have been taught," said Elliot.
GREEK BEAT

Cow Pattie Bingo
Kappa Delta sorority is currently holding a philanthropy called "Cow Pattie Bingo." Squares are being sold at $3 per square or $5 for two squares to be donated to the Children's Hospital of Richmond, Virginia. Those contestants who buy squares have a chance of winning up to $1000. The object of this contest is to have cows go to the bathroom in the squares contestants have purchased on a field divided into squares that the ladies have created for this event. Squares are being sold outside of the Student Union.

Diversity Dinner
Delta Delta Delta and Sigma Gamma Rho will be hosting the Diversity Dinner on Wednesday, Feb. 23 at 7pm. All sororities and fraternities are invited to attend this potluck meal which will cater a variety of foods. The purpose of this event is to provide all Greeks an opportunity to get to know one another.

Pikes for Tikes
Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity will host their first annual "Pikes for Tikes" philanthropy event on Feb. 26 at 7pm in the Education gym. Each participating sorority is required to enter a dance team and pay an entry fee of $75. The proceeds from entry fees will benefit the Arnold Palmer Children's Hospital. Seven sororities will participate in this year's event, and will be judged for a cheerleading or dance routine performance. Trophies will be awarded for first, second, and third place teams, as well as a spirit award for the sorority with the most women supporting the event.

New Angels
Six ladies have plans to be initiated into Pi Beta Phi sorority on April 7 through April 9. Christina Bostron, Alison Brendel, Melody Collins, Mackenzie O'Bannon, Kerri Sheridan and Crystal Harding will attend meetings for the next eight weeks, to learn about Pi Beta Phi and the entire Greek system. Upon initiation, they will be named "New Angels."

Flaggin Down the Fun
Alpha Delta Pi's philanthropy, Flagging Down the Fun tournament, held on Feb. 12, awarded first place to the Sigma Phi Epilson fraternity and the Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Volleyball Victors
Pi Beta Phi sorority defeated Kappa Delta in a final volleyball tournament held Tuesday, Feb. 15. The intramural volleyball season began in mid-November, and sororities competed against each other twice a week during their ten week long season.

ANNOUNCEMENT
The Panhellenic meeting will be held at the Pi Beta Phi house at 5pm on Wednesday. Inter Fraternity Council meetings will be held at 4pm the same day.

Students can pick up applications in room 238 in the Communications building; the application deadline is Friday, March 3rd. There is an application fee of $5 per entry, and there are unlimited entries.

The KIA’s are the College of Communications largest event because they include all of the communications majors and gives them a chance to show their work to esteemed professionals in the Orlando area.

“This is not only an opportunity for the students to be recognized for their talents,” said Dr. Bob Davis, Instructor and Head of the Advertising/Public Relations Department, “but also a chance for potential employers to take a peek at the prospects headed toward their field.”

Last Year, an estimated 34 awards were given to communications students with awards in each category for first, second and third places and one student received the “Tony” Nicholson Award, which is awarded by Tony Nicholson, the Orlando homebuilder who is the benefactor of the School of Communication. This year the awards have doubled, with 60 to be presented.

“We are hoping to have over 100 participants” said Lucas. “We have tripled our amount from last year (in sponsorship donations.)” There have also been more sponsors added to the event. Some of this years sponsors include the Florida Public Relations Association, Public Relation Society of America, the Orlando Sentinel, Fry Hammond Bar, Church Street Station, Bitter.com, Sea World, Tony Nicholson, as well as others.

Another new feature of the awards is the Hall of Fame inductees that will be presented by the School of Communications Alumni. These will also be presented during the awards.

There will also be an interactive video show during the awards, and networking opportunities that will begin an hour prior to the festivities, at 1pm during a reception.

Anyone who would like to get involved is welcome to come to Quotes, which is held at 3pm on Wednesdays in Comm 101, or can contact Dr. Davis at 823-2829.
Campus News Briefs

What do you think about the "One Florida" plan?

"Students should be allowed into Universities based only on scholastic aptitude."
~ Ali Slankard, junior, Journalism major

"I think the SAT is a good system for rating everyone on an equal scale and this plan takes away from that."
~ Ryan Chalmers, freshman, Business major

"The plan should not have anything to do with the type of school you go to but instead on the basis of need."
~ Juan Quintana, junior, Paramedics major

"I think the plan is unfair because I went to a pretty good high school and students that need help there wouldn't receive it under this plan."
~ Mara Buchalter, sophomore, Elementary Education major

"The students that get into state schools because of the plan will experience a culture shock because they will not be college ready."

Slight Rise In Minority Enrollment, Graduation Rates: Report

WASHINGTON (TMS) — More minority students attend and graduate from college today than a decade ago, according to a report released this week by the American Council on Education.

The numbers released are based on minority student enrollment between the fall of 1996 and the fall of 1997. They are the latest available.

According to the report, minority enrollment in institutions of higher education increased 3.7 percent, a slight jump -- 3.2 percent -- over minority enrollment reported between the fall of 1995 and the fall of 1996.

The report also noted an increase in the number of minority students earning degrees. The number of bachelor's degrees awarded to minority students rose 8.6 percent from 1996 to 1997, and the number of master's degrees rose 6.4 percent.

The council's president, Stanley O. Ikenberry, said the study's findings suggest efforts to boost minority enrollment are beginning to produce results.

"The new economy requires a higher level of education," he said. "And this reminds us of the importance of the crucial need for access."

Where has all of the activism gone?: what happened to the activist student

BETH SHAW
STAFF WRITER

I know that some of you were aware that the Board of Regents (BOR) was coming to UCF to vote on Bob's One Florida Plan on Feb. 17. However, I also know the more of you did not know. At least I hope that more of you did not know. I hope this because the lack of involvement was so meek that I was a little embarrassed to be a college student.

Part of the reason I am embarrassed is because college students are supposed to stir up controversy and be active. The other reason is because, as it seems to me, the BOR chose UCF for a simple reason, it is a passive campus. The most controversy I have seen has been on the annoying Free Speech Green which brings mostly Christian speakers who have frankly become common place and are losing any appeal that they had.

A massive e-mail went out to all UCF students warning of traffic problems. I broke with the intentions of seeing the streets bumper to bumper on campus, but just wasn't so. I know that the photographer for the Central Florida Future was looking for a great photo opportunity, but it just never arrived.

I remember being in high school and wanting to graduate. Sure it was for parties and freedom but also for the chance to be an activist. Where has all of the activism gone? Some of my professors are just as bewildered as I am. They constantly try to encourage students to get more involved. Involvement can be many things ranging from joining a political group on campus to signing a petition. A new way to get involved is to write to your favorite UCF newspaper. I am a little biased to that one.

In the 1960's, all the people who wrote about was protests and rallies and marches. Today we are lucky if anyone writes a letter. Sometimes writing a letter to a congressman can be just as effective as a protest.

In an article in the Orlando Sentinel on Feb. 18 staff writer, Jeff Kunerth wrote of the meeting of the BOR, "From the looks it UCF is where controversy come when they don't want to draw a crowd." Wow, if that doesn't make UCF look like a second rate push-over of a college don't what does.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder: a look at long distance relationships

BECKI PANOFF
STAFF WRITER

Long-distance relationships. Inevitably being in college you probably know someone in one or, if you're like me, are in one yourself. Everything you have heard about them is true. They take an abundance of work, time and patience. They make seeing other couples together heart-wrenching and patience. They make seeing your friends from home even more lonely than if you weren't with them. Everything you have heard is probably true.

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder." The cliche is true. The more time my boyfriend and I are apart, the more I miss him, but it's more than that. The distance makes more aware of the time you see the one you love and now we're lucky if it's twice a month. You learn to budget your time a little more wisely. You used to see each other every day, and now we're lucky if it's twice a month. You learn to budget your time a little more wisely.

I won't say this isn't hard, in fact it's probably one of the hardest things I have done. The conversations about whose turn it is, to make the 2 1/2 hour trip to see the other one can get repetitive. You can only argue about which one of you can afford to miss work so many times. It's also hard to have someone one be such a big part of your life and be so far away. When something wonderful happens to you, don't have the person that you want to tell near you. It makes turning on the radio and hearing a love song bittersweet, because you have no one around to share it with.

Most of my friends here have never met this person who I always refer to, to them he is "the boyfriend," he doesn't have an identity because he isn't here to create one for them. I feel like I have two lives, the Orlando me and the West Palm Beach me, and neither the two shall entwine. When he comes up, it's almost like seeing both of these lives colliding.

Some long-distance relationships don't work, some make the relationship stronger. It all depends on both people's confidence about making it work.

Sometimes that time apart makes you realize what you have in the first place, and reminds you not to take what you have for granted.
The Good, The Bad, and the Ugly: scam artists take advantage of tragedy

JOSHUA MURDOCK
STAFF WRITER

First comes the bad. Recently a tragedy hit the Orlando area, specifically the Orlando Police Department. Emannuel Jimmy Saint Nattis shot Officer George DeSalvia in the head, killing him during a traffic stop. Nattis also shot Officer Edward Diaz in the back. 3 times. Officer Diaz is now in Atlanta receiving physical therapy to regain the ability to walk after the horrifying attack.

The very men and women that protect our communities daily, were victims of a horrifying crime that would shock any community. Every man, woman, and child could feel the loss to the community and to the family that let their loved one risk his life for his community.

Next comes the good. After these terrible tragedies happened, the community seemed to pull together and best I went out to both the officers and their families.

The very next day, the Orlando Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 25 established trust funds for the families of officers George DeSalvia and Edward Diaz at First Union National Bank. Donations may be made at any branch of that bank.

Many fellow and former police officers, community members and businesses donated to this trust fund. Helping the family through hard times and their terrible loss, many people donated what they could to this cause and never knew of the officers. Local radio station XL106.7 donated a total of $1000 to the fund, $500 to each family.

The donations might not make the pain ever leave the minds of the family, but could help them forget about all of the monetary trouble that come with losing a family member.

Finally we get to the ugly. A few low life scumstubs have been using this terrible tragedy to their financial advantage.

Someone recently reported to the police by a family member of the Orlando Police Department that a person called asking for a donation to the family of the late Officer Diaz.

The first mistake was that Officer Diaz was not the officer killed in this tragedy, it was Officer DeSalvia. The other mistake was that the family member knew that only fund raising of money for the officer was through the First Union National Bank and no soliciting calls were being made.

If you ever pick up the phone and someone is trying to fund raise for a cause don’t believe him or her for a second. Always check sources out on anyone asking for money on the phone. Scammers are out there to use the good hearts in society for wrong reasons.

If anyone calls asking for the donations to the slain officer’s families, play along with their act and get a phone number and address so police can put the scam of the earth where he or she belongs.

Encourage everyone to help these officers families and donate your extra money to their trust fund at First Union National Banks, any branch.

Harmless term adopts offensive identity

KRISTA ZILIZI
STAFF WRITER

The English language is undoubtedly one of the most complex languages in the world. Slang, jargon, and ‘botched grammatical phrases only add to the complexity of our universal language. This standard of English, particularly slang, has become so common today, especially among America’s youth, that the majority is oblivious to the fact that these terms are not “Standard English,” but only a creation of rather creative individuals.

Like scandalous rumors, slang terms and phrases spread and catch on like wildfires, fueled simply by word of mouth. The promotion of slang language is far more successful and influential than any advertisement or broadcast through any one media form.

Phrases such as, “what’s up, chill out, my bad, he goes, she was like, chicks, dudes,” and so on, are so carelessly thrown around, we often don’t realize we’ve even said them. Of course the list of slang grows significantly longer concerning drinking and sexual behavior.

Moreover, when we use these slang phrases in everyday language, they are rarely ever relevant, which becomes most evident when the young try to communicate with elders, grandchildren and articulate individuals.

So perhaps I’ve suddenly grown old before my time, but I realize for the first time, I am unfamiliar with certain slang phrases. Apparently the once seemingly harmless term “tool,” has taken on a double identity. No longer can it simply be defined as an instrument to be used by the hands (according to Webster); the term tool has also become a highly offensive insult as well.

What precisely is the accepted definition of this innovative phrase, used in its offensive context? Moreover, when did it join the ranks of other common slang like “cool” and “chillin’?”

“Tool is a tool is a band,” says freshman Shelley Marmor. “Have you ever heard of them?”

“A tool is a moron, loser, someone without common sense-its all lumped together,” explains freshman Josh Villanueva.

It seems no one is absolutely certain of this all-too-modern slang and what its appropriate context may be.

“Tool apparently means different things to different people, because some find it more offensive than others,” says sophomore Mimi Gagne.

For future reference, be wary of using this word negligently, for your ignorance may cause you to insult towards highly enlightened individuals.

It’s Mardi Gras time again and for everyone who won’t be able to make to New Orleans this year there is a way you can continue the party with City Walk, which has several different types of clubs.

Even after the park closes you can continue the party with a walk over to City Walk, which has several different types of clubs.

If you still in the Mardi Gras mood you can visit a bar right out of New Orleans, Pat O’Brien’s, with various drink specials you get can keep the glass the drink is served in.

The authentic features, great concerts, and awesome clubs will make you feel like you’re there.

While Universal hosts the celebration they will be serving Cajun and Creole cuisine. Bowls of gumbo and plates of crawfish will be in various restaurants throughout the park.

After you have experienced a day of rides, parades, and good food make sure that you stop by the stage in the center of the park. While the attractions shut down at eight, the park will stay open until ten o’clock for some free concerts! Friday night,

A great concert that will make you feel like you’re there.

Pizza’s still college bestseller

Patty Canedo
STAFF WRITER

At the heart of any college student’s diet is, of course, pizza. Yet often the consumption of pizza can have a dramatizing effect on our wallets.

For the last nineteen years, Michael’s Italian Restaurant has been serving not only great pizza but other authentic Italian dishes as well.

Michael and Theresa Tardungo opened up their restaurant when Alafaya Trail only went as far as Colonial and the only other thing further east than their restaurant was Cocoa Beach.

Today they have become one of the most popular Italian restaurants in the UCF area.

There are several secrets to the success of Michael’s, such as that all the ingredients used in the appetizing dishes are shipped in from Italy.

As well as being the owners of the restaurant, Michael and Theresa are two of six chefs that prepare every dish from scratch.

This charming restaurant provides beautiful Italian music and charming paintings with a casual atmosphere.

The friendly crew at Michael’s asks for your patience as they cook your food to order but as you wait you can enjoy a variety of imported Italian wines, California wines several types of beer, and some delicious appetizers.

Michael’s caters to both lunch and dinner with a great variety offered for both meals.

Every meal offers a hearty portion from the meatball subs to the chicken romana.

As a matter of fact Michael’s large pizza is sixteen inches, when a sixteen inch pizza found in other restaurants is considered an extra large.

Not only is the food fantastic but the prices for a meal is hard to believe.

Erlbe Wold, a chef at Michael’s, said that a couple could have a full meal with leftovers for next day’s meal for only $20.

But one can’t forget the most important part of the meal, dessert!

Michael’s makes their own cheesecake, which is so good you’ll forget to worry about calories; as well as offering other types of great desserts.

There are several secrets to the success of Michael’s, such as that all the ingredients used in the appetizing dishes are shipped in from Italy.

Have you ever wanted to simply leave this world and journey to some unknown land? Many people consider reading a captivating novel a way of escaping reality. For those of you who prefer to spend free time in the pages of well-written fantasy rather than watching mind-numbing sitcoms, Edge of Eternity is sure to spark your imagination.

Author Randy Alcorn, of such best sellers as Deadline and Dominion, tells the story of a man at a crossroads in his life. Written in first person, the journey of Nick Seagrave begins when he awakens in a cave in the middle of the night with no memory of how he had arrived there. The cave seems to be located in a world known as Skathuros, "the window of darkness."

Nick starts out as a self-centered independent businessman on a quest to return home. Along the way, he meets different people and travels various roads. At first, Nick thinks he can figure things out well enough to make it on his own. Yet, throughout the book, Nick spends little time alone. Shadrach, an aged traveler Nick initially despises, continually encourages him to travel the Red Road. Unfortunately, the Red Road is a way of escaping reality. For those of you who prefer reading a captivating novel a way of escaping reality, this tale reminds me of Alice in Wonderland, written by Lewis Carroll. As the book progresses, each chapter continues to add to the fantasy, but it can be described as a fable as well.

As the story progresses, Nick begins to change in small ways and questions his motives and thinking more.

The first fifty pages of this book seem to be the least interesting. As the book progresses, each chapter continues to add to the wonder, confusion, suspicion and delight that comes from reading a well written story. This tale reminds me of Alice in Wonderland, except that Alice is a middle-aged man who has destroyed his family life and become set in his ways. Yet, the way the author depicts the protagonist in this book seems closer to reality. Nick's thoughts of himself, his life, his companions, his present situation and the possibility of completing his goals contain a familiar aspect, representing the thoughts of many people as well as the view held by society in general.

Much use of symbolism, as well as many areas useful for entertainment can be found. I encourage anyone with an open mind to consider reading the book and contemplating its meaning.

LEAD STORIES

- The Mellowing of the American Cowboy: "Holistic herding" or "low-stress livestock handling," is "changing the whole face of the West," according to a U.S. conservation official, quoted in Canada's National Post in December. Cattle are happier, healthier and more obedient, he said, if they are not shocked at or subjected to stress but, as one rancher put it, allowed "to make up their own minds (where to go)." Not surprisingly, more-toughed cowboys avoid ranches that have adopted the change. And in January, nearly 8,000 cowboys attended the 16th annual Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko, Nev., before submitting their verses, entrants had to prove to a screening committee that they are real cowboys.

- According to a February Wall Street Journal report, Terminal Milking, a national milking competition between college teams for the national championship of dairy sniffling, crawls with corporate recruiters seeking to sign the nation's top five reclamation talent, at starter salaries of up to $40,000. Mississippi State's three-person squad won the 1999 contest in October, winning "ice cream" (by coming the closest in agreement with professional judges as to sensory quality), finishing second in "cheddar" and "yogurt," third in "cottage cheese" and "milk," and fifth in "butter." Police Blotter

- Two off-duty police women running a prostitution sting in Dothan, Ala., in October declined to arrest a pickup-truck-driving john, around age 70, despite his three attempts to procure their services. He first offered to give the women the three squirrels he had just shot, but they ignored him (too much trouble to store the evidence). A few minutes later, he added to the offer the used refrigerator in his truck, but the officers again declined (same reason). On the third trip, he finally offered cash: $6, but without the squirrels and refrigerator. The officers again declined but said they would arrest him if he returned, but he did not.

- Texas Bomb Squad Follies: In November, a patrol officer in San Antonio confis­ cated two live bombs and nonchalantly took them across town in his squad car to the drug property house, having mistakenly identified them as elabor­ ate marijuana bongs. Two weeks later, police in Cedar Park (near Austin), responding to a check­ cashing store's report of a "pipe bomb," sent only an animal control officer to the scene because the 911 operator had instead understood "python."

- Little Rock, Ark., police officer Carlton Dickerson's 57-day suspension for sleep­ ing on the job was upheld by a city commission in October despite his claim of the disability of sleep ap­ oca. In his four years on the force, he has been caught asleep six times and has wrecked five patrol cars. (Dickerson once denied to internal affairs investigators that he was asleep even after two fellow officers said they needed to rap on his desk for 15 minutes to wake him.)

- Campaign to Help Police Recruiting: In August a judge in Halifax, Nova Scotia, ruled that undercover police could legally touch prostitu­ tes' private parts if it were necessary to effect the crime. And in November, the Arizona Republic newspaper revealed that police guidelines in Mesa, Ariz. (contrary to virtually all departments' guidelines in the United States), permit undercover offi­ cers to receive massages while nude in the course of a prostitution sting operation.

Uh-Oh!

- In its November findings after a year­ long study of correctional institutions around the world, Canadian prison officials recommended that nearly all of its facilities be made to resemble its most lenient, including eventually removing razor wire, bulletproof glass and guard's guns, and giving all but a handful of the most heinous inmates control over the keys to their cells so as to establish "a culture of respect."

- In a long-classified report on the World War II era, released in October, Britain's Special Operations Executive warned spies should know themselves better psychologically in­ aterially in order not to compromise their missions. For example, careless destruction of code materials shows a castration complex; getting captured reveals masochistic tendencies; and fear of parachuting responds to the unconscious reproduction of the traumas of birth.

Recurring Themes

- News of the Weird reported in 1997 on how Palm Springs, Calif., airport authorities felt the need to issue layman regulations for taxi dri­ vers serving arriving passengers, including requir­ ing regular toothbrushing and daily showers with soap. In January 2000, the chief executive of Dublin (Ireland) Tourism told the Irish newspa­ per not to bathe daily and change clothes regularly in order to quell recent tourist complaints, although many drivers maintained the odds in their cabs came from previous passengers.

Nothing Can Go Wrong

- On the heels of the loss of the Mars Climate Orbiter in September due to engineers' failure to standardize readings between metric and the English system, a U.S. government report in December revealed that a 1998 test of mock nuclear warheads failed because a contractor had accidentally installed a "wrong" computer program and was not able to detect the error. Nonetheless, at a speech in February in Albuquerque, the manager of the Canisini interplanetary cruiser now heading for Saturn dismissed his program's apprehensive critics, even though his spacecraft blasted off with 72 pounds of plutonium in 1997 and approached Earth again in August 1999.

Undignified Deaths

- A 58-year-old man was killed when his small construction truck accidentally fell into a 25-foot-deep hog-manure lagoon near Lavern, Okla., in December (though divers could not find the body in the mud for 18 days). The same fate befell a 23-year-old man in December when his out-of-control pickup truck smashed through a fence in Orono, Maine, and landed in a 400,000-gallon tank of raw sewage. And a 57-year-old man accidentally asphyxiated in D无锡, Minn., in December; his body was found stuck head-first in a sump drain in his basement.

Also, in the Last Month...

- After two white police officers shot a black colleague, Providence (R.I.) mayor Vincent Cianci called on the city's poet laureate to help the community heal. An imprisoned Minnesota arson­ist legally changed his name (at taxpayer expense) to G.Q. Fires. Courthouse employees in Rome, Italy, found papers on 700,000 open criminal cases accelerometer, a device that sent a signal to a government contractor to reprocess to antifreeze.

Dear Nancy,

I work with this girl who is really hot. I mean every time I work with her guys come in and give her compliments about how beautiful she is. Anyway we kind of have this flirty thing going on and the other day she snuck a note into my jacket. It was this poem all about love and how her heart is aching to be with me, how she has all this pain over me, etc. I’ve only known her about a month from work and I know she sounds like a freak but she’s really like I said good looking. I’d kind of like to get with her. What do you think, is it THAT bad of an idea?

—Restless over romance

Dear Restless,

If you don’t mind coming home to your pet bunny boiling on the stove then I say “Go for it!” But if you think you’re restless now, look out! This girl has got it bad, in the head that is. This situation sounds like it could turn into an after school special, teaching kids not to get involved with someone who sneaks a “love” poem into their coat. Let me guess, she wrote about how her heart is bleeding on the floor where you left it when you forgot to say bye to her when you left work the other day, right?

The way you mention how fine this girl is to you, makes it sound like you want a little nookie. Well if you think it’s worth the chance you could try but it doesn’t sound like it’s going to be easy. You’ve hardly been around her and already she’s talking about the pain you’ve caused her. Who knows what she’s capable of? You could kiss her once and she’ll be naming your unborn children and scraping the paint off your car when you’re five minutes late to work.

There are plenty of beautiful girls in the world and if this one’s interested in you I’m sure there are others that are too. I would think long and hard about this before making any moves at least until you find a new job.

—Dear Nancy

My roommate is in one of my classes but she never gets up in time to go to it. So when I get back from class she asks for my notes and what she missed in class. I thought it was okay the first few times but now she’s driving me over the edge. How do I get her to stop or even better tell her that this bothers me and that she should go to class herself?

—Dedicated Roomie

Dear Roomie,

When you lay down like a mat, you can’t be surprised when people wipe their feet on you. Why should your roommate bother getting up for class when she already has someone doing it for her? And I suppose that you’re extra quiet so you won’t wake her. Well- start slamming the door! Turn your alarm clock up a few notches. Blow dry your hair in the room while sitting on her bed. You’re making it too easy for her to take advantage of you. Get up off the floor. Stop giving her the notes, tell her you didn’t take any. Tell her you fell asleep in class so you have no idea what’s going on.

Ideally (for me anyway) you could make a plan so that one day you sleep in and she goes to class then the next time-vise versa. That way you’ll both be sharing, caring and loving roommates who are equally devoted and dedicated to one another. Then you can stop worrying about her muddy shoes.

—Central Florida Future
‘Boiler Room’ is predictable, cliche

Lonnie Harris
THE CAMPUS

First-time writer and director Ben Younger based his new drama “Boiler Room” on the actual inner workings of a corrupt brokerage firm, where a 21-year-old stockbroker can make $100,000 in less than a month. He probably would have been better off just making up something more interesting.

The story of a young man’s discovery that making money comes at a horrible price is trite, cliched and horribly predictable.

Seth Davis (played rather limply by Ribisi), desperate to make a lot of money quickly to impress his tough-as-nails judge father, has spent the last year fostering a covert gambling business out of his tiny apartment.

Then a friend tells him about a new company called J.T. Marlin where a young guy can make a million dollars in a few years. Sounds too good to be true, and of course, it is.

It turns out that Marlin, populated with slick, charismatic guys like Chris (Diesel), cheats its clients out of their life savings and passes the dirty money to its employees.

After starting the world’s least probable romance with the company secretary (played by Long), Seth decides to bring the company down with the help of the FBI.

All of this material is extremely tiring. John Grisham has written several novels that develop just like this, and it’s easy to be reminded of “The Firm” throughout “Boiler Room.” The film even intentionally recalls other, better movies in its same genre such as “Wall Street” and “Glengarry Glen Ross.” Instead of using these pop culture references to give the film a hip feeling, they remind the audience of films that worked better.

Younger can’t decide whether to revel in his characters’ ridiculous, high-wire antics or decry their activity as reckless, inappropriate and horribly selfish. The film, schizophrenic in its approach, shuttles back and forth between a celebration of the excitement of the boiler-room lifestyle and a declaration of the evils of the self-involved outlook permeating ’90s culture. The film leaves the audience without a clue about how to feel toward its major players, and without much interest in their ongoing attempts to evade prosecution.

His attempt to blow the lid off modern greed and make a young, hip “Wall Street” degenerates into just another piece of formulaic Hollywood fluff without real emotion or an idea in the entire running time.

Boiler Room chronicles the rise and fall of Seth Davis, an enterprising college drop-out who, determined to prove his worth to a demanding father, takes a job at a small brokerage firm.

Fu Manchu's guitar sound has been described as fuzzy-rock, as the guitars have a low, buzzy, fuzzy, sound that distinas metal in the '80s.

Another evolution in the band's development is the vocals of Scott Hill.
While Hill's guitar work has always been excellent on previous releases, at times his vocals have been hesitant.
On King Of The Road, however, its sounds as if Hill has finally relaxed and

It is a rare thing to be able to

Kenny W. Shepperd
Live ON

The Kenny Wayne Shepherd Band's latest release offers a variety of blues-based numbers from Delta-blues slide guitar to razor-edged rock.
"Live On" is a masterpiece of the 22-year-old Shepherd's guitar playing supported by an excellent band and fresh tunes. From the number one rock hit "In 2 Deep" to the soulful pure-blues track
"Was," Shepherd shows his virtuoso not only as a player, but also as a writer and arranger. Noah Hunt's vocals combined with Shepherd's riffs on "Nevermind" create an image of Z Z Top meets Jimi Hendrix.
The influence of Shepherd's idol,
the late Stevie Ray Vaughan, can be heard throughout the disc due in part to the contributions of three of Vaughan's former band members. Drummer Chris Layton, bassist Tommy Shannon and keyboardist
Reese Wynans formerly of Double Trouble contributed to the project. Other notable musicians offering their talents include guitarist Warren Haynes of the Allman
Brothers, Third Eye Blind bassist Arion
Salazar and Les Claypool of Primus.
Shepherd wrote or co-wrote 11 of the disc's 14 cuts. In addition to the origi-inals, the band does an exceptional cover of Buddy Miles' "Them Changes" and a blistering version of the Fleetwood Mac classic "Oh Well."
"This is my third album," said
Shepherd. "People are appreciating me more as an artist."
Shepherd's first release
"Ledbetter Heights" yielded three Top 10
rock singles and held the number one position in Billboard magazine's blues chart for five months. The record also caught the attention of a young musician's toughest audience, that of other musicians. The Godfather of Soul, James Brown, called Shepherd "one of the wonders of the world."
In 1997 his second release, "Trouble Is," topped the Billboard chart for two years and contributed three No. 1 singles including the most played rock single of 1998, "Blue on Black."

With all his success in the studio the Shreveport, La., native still prefers playing live. Over the past few years the band has toured with the Rolling Stones, the Eagles, Van Halen and Bob Dylan. They are currently on their first-ever college tour. Past tours have concentrated on arenas and stadiums.

"To walk out on stage every night and watch the fans sing along—it's total fulfillment. It's what playing music is all about," Shepherd said. Coinciding with his current tour, Giant Records, Fender Guitar, Guitar Center and Launch magazine have announced the "Jam with Kenny Wayne Shepherd Contest."

Beginning Feb. 18, contestants can download "In 2 Deep" minus the guitar solo, add their riffs and upload it or send their version on tape. Shepherd himself will pick the two winners who will get to play on stage at the House of Blues. In addition, the winners will receive an exact replica of Shepherd's 1961 Fender Stratocaster guitar. The song can be downloaded at Launch.com, kwsguitar.com, Fender.com, guitarworld.com and guitarcenter.com.

The college tour begins Feb. 17 in Shreveport, La., and includes stops in Knoxville, Tenn., Athens, Ga., and Charlottesville, Va., among other college-market cities before concluding with the Los Angeles show.

The band is scheduled to play Five Points South Music Hall in Birmingham Feb. 23. The Birmingham show will mark Shepherd's second appearance in the area in the past four months. The band played a concert on the Quad in conjunction with homecoming activities last fall.

Strike 9
Nasty Little Thoughts

The theory of the self-made man is not dead yet with the emergence of Strike 9's new album, "Nasty Little Thoughts."

The group members, based out of San Francisco, Calif., brought their radio-ready sound out of the woodwork through their own sweat, talent and determination. The band self-released two other albums: "Boy Meets Girl" in 1993 and "Bumper To Bumper" in 1995. It created its success through promoting their North American tour in 1996, even though it was virtually unknown.

"Nasty Little Thoughts" is a modern rock recording resembling the sounds of the Gin Blossoms, Third Eye Blind and Train. What makes these musicians different is that their harmonies are so perfectly in sync. Listening to "Nasty Little Thoughts" is like opening a young adult's journal, complete with stories on lovesick searches for a worthy relationship and stories dealing with the pains of working hard for success.

Other tracks may help find solace in bad relationships.

"Are You In This" croons about indecision in young relationships and feeling used. "Not Nothin'", a tune with a Barenaked Ladies-style pop-folk melody, is a very upbeat song even though it has sad lyrics. This song discusses how you can't control certain circumstances in relationships.

"Tail of the Sun" has a folk beat and addresses the issue of trying to get over someone.

Overall, this album may be key to those with bitter feelings who feel they are getting the short end of the stick regarding relationships.

The band members put their feelings out in the open and lay a weepy-eyed story before the listener, combining classic guitar strumming with a twist of twang. But in no way is this album a collection of sappy love songs. It is full of high-energy, emotion-filled anthems for those who deep down really are the strong at heart.

Stroke 9 is a band that is sure to be on the rise in the coming months, and maybe even here to stay.

UCF women lose pair of games, first-round bye

DAVID WINBERG
STAFF WRITER

The UCF women's basketball team will now be playing for pride during the rest of the regular season, and have to make a Cinderella run through the TAAC Tournament to get an NCAA Tournament bid.

With losses to Jacksonville and Stetson last week, the Golden Knights were eliminated from contention for a first round bye in the conference tournament, and will have to win four games in four days to repeat as TAAC Champions.

In the two losses, UCF (6-18, 3-12 TAAC) continued a season long trend of falling behind by a wide margin in the first half and being forced to make big second half comebacks to have a chance. The Golden Knights fell behind 37-19 to Jacksonville at halftime and 33-24 to Stetson.

Forwards Khaliah Guillory and LaToya Graham were the lone bright spots for UCF, combining for 62 points and 36 rebounds in the two games. Center Camille Howard, who was expected to return to the lineup for the first time in over a month against Stetson, dressed for the game but did not play.

The return of Howard, the team's leading scorer and rebounder, will likely be a gradual one now that the Golden Knights are out of contention for the first round bye.

UCF coach Gail Striegler will work her into the lineup slowly, but doesn't think that the team's strategy will undergo any drastic changes along the way.

"(Howard's return) probably won't change a lot of different things," said Striegler. "We just need to execute the things that we have better and do a better job of stopping other teams on defense. Everyone will be back, but people aren't used to playing with each other so you can't make a lot of changes. Even when the whole team is healthy, we still only have 11 players, so its not like it's a huge bench anyway."

This week, the Golden Knights will play conference road games at Troy State (8-14, 5-9) and Mercer (11-11, 6-7). In their first meetings this season, UCF defeated Troy State 78-70 and lost 50-36 to Mercer. Both TSU and Mercer are among the teams fighting for that first round bye, and TSU beat Mercer 56-49 last week.

The two teams are a contrast in style, as Troy State is one of the conference's top offensive teams, averaging 72.1 points a game, and Mercer is the TAAC's top defensive team, giving up just 58.6 points a game. UCF's main advantage against both teams will be rebounding, as the Golden Knights are the best rebounding team in the conference, while Mercer and Troy State rank seventh and ninth, respectively.

TSU will be without Abby Boone, who was suspended indefinitely two weeks ago for a violation of team rules. The junior forward was leading the Trojans in scoring with 16.9 points a game. TSU is now led by Tomekia Golatte, who averages 10.8 points per game, and point guard Sharin Milner, who leads the TAAC with 7.23 assists per game. On the defensive end of the court, 6'4" center Sarah Degrandi is second in the conference with 1.82 blocks per game.

Mercer does not have a player ranked in the TAAC's top 15 scorers, but sophomore forward Tracy Henry is second in the conference in rebounding and third in steals. The Bears are one of the conference's worst offensive teams, averaging just 57.5 points a game. Freshman guard Jo Shaw is the team's best outside shooting threat, averaging 1.23 three-pointers per game.

The remaining games on UCF's schedule probably won't mean much as far as the regular season standings go, but could be a spring board for a run at the TAAC Championship. Coach Striegler still expects the team to win every game it plays, but she knows the Golden Knights will have an uphill battle to reach their goals. "We're just going to have to come to play every night, do whatever it takes to win each ballgame," she said. "You can't look too far ahead, you've got to prepare for each one individually and try to win it."
Four to Glory

The UCF women's basketball dropped two games last week, eliminating them from any chance of getting a first-round bye in the TAAC Tournament. This means they will have to win four games in four days to earn a trip to the NCAA Tournament in March.

The Golden Knights (6-18, 3-12 TAAC) began the week with a 61-54 loss to Jacksonville. JU guard Lexie Richards scored 24 points, and tied a UCF Arena record with eight three-pointers. Khaliah Guillory led UCF with 14 points and eight rebounds, but shot just three of 12 from the field. LaToya Graham added 14 points and seven rebounds, but shot only two of 11. The Golden Knights shot 26.4 percent from the field in the game. The team followed their loss to Jacksonville with a loss to another in-state rival, Stetson.

Nicole Knappmiller and Cher Dyson led six Knights in double figures with 12 points apiece, as Stetson earned a 72-67 victory over the Golden Knights. The kids do a good job of never killing us," said Coach Gail Striegler. "We're just going to have to come to play every night, do whatever it takes to win each ballgame," said Striegler. "You can't look too far ahead, you've got to prepare for each one individually and try to win it.

Second Half Team

The Golden Knights have established an unfortunate trend this season of falling behind very early in games and having to come back from large deficits in the second half to even have a chance for a win. In last week's two losses, UCF trailed Jacksonville 37-19 at halftime and Stetson 33-24 at halftime. They were able to get back into both games, but neither comeback resulted in a victory. The Golden Knights were a different team in the second half, outscoring Jacksonville 35-24 and Stetson 43-39.

"It's my responsibility to have them playing from start to finish, and I can't get them to," Striegler said. "We had a very good game plan, but we just didn't come out and execute in the first half. We weren't mentally ready to play. The kids do a good job of never giving up, but the first half is killing us."

One reason for the team's lack of scoring in the first half has been the play of their main post players, Guillory and Graham. Against Jacksonville, the two combined for eight points on two of 14 shooting in the first half. In the second half, their shooting percentage only improved marginally, but they got to the free throw line a combined 18 times and made 14 of their attempts.

Howard's Return Won't Bring Drastic Changes

The return of center Camille Howard to the lineup, which did not happen against Stetson as expected, will bring change to UCF's strategies, but not as many as one might think, according to Coach Striegler. "(Her return) does and doesn't bring changes," she said. "Everyone will be back, but people aren't used to playing with each other so you can't make a lot of changes. A lot of people have been playing a lot of minutes at different spots. Erin will go back to playing more guard; she's been playing post because Camille's been out. Nancy will get some more minutes."

"It changes some stuff around, but we really can't add to many things. Even when the whole team is healthy, we still only have 11 players, so it's not like it's a huge bench anyway. It probably won't change a lot of different things, we just need to execute the things that we have better and do a better job of stopping other teams on defense."

Before she was injured, Howard was leading the team with 11.2 points and 7.4 rebounds a game. She dressed against Stetson, but didn't play in the game, and will probably see minimal playing time until the TAAC Tournament.

Howard Undergoes Knee Surgery

Junior guard Nancy Richter, the team's top three point shooter, underwent knee surgery on Feb. 21. The surgery will not cause her to miss any time, but could not be avoided as she has been playing in tremendous pain over the last few games.

"Nancy's going to get her knee scoped again," said Striegler. "She's got some cartilage in there, and that's why she's only playing about 15 minutes per game. She's only being able to play about 15 minutes a game because her knee flares up so bad. It is very painful to be playing that way," Richter has been averaging 5.6 points and 2.1 rebounds per game, and is second on the team with 63 assists.

Nothing cures the ills of a trying stretch like a sound win.

"It has been a tough week, but the girls went out and took care of business today," said first-year head coach Patricia Allison after her Golden Knights' 8-1 victory against Barry University on Feb. 19 at the UCF Tennis Complex.

The Golden Knights, the three-time Trans America Athletic Conference champions, struggled at the outset against the Buccaneers from Miami Shores but later cruised to a comfortable victory.

"We really stepped up in the second set in most of the games and put them (Barry) away in the way we needed to. I'm proud of the girls efforts because we played a very good Division II team in Barry," said Allison who improved to 4-2.

After its season-opening victory against Jacksonville, UCF traveled to New Orleans, La., for non-conference tilts with Tulane and Southeastern Louisiana on Feb. 12-13. The Golden Knights fell victim to a 5-4 decision against Tulane, ranked 45th on the WingspanBank.com Collegiate Tennis Rankings, despite wins by each of their top three players in singles action.

No. 1 Veronica Widyadharma defeated the nation's 62nd ranked player, Anna Monhartova, in straight sets, 6-1 and 8-0. Swedish Ann-Jeanette Svantesson, playing at No. 2, made up for last year's loss against Maiko Cook, topping the Green Wave player 6-3, 7-6, while Maritek Gunawan, squeezed by Annelie Axsater at No. 3, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4. The tandem of Widyadharma and Gunawan recorded UCF's lone doubles point, serving an 8-0 decision at No. 1.

"The team competes very hard and for me that is everything," said Allison. "That to lose 5-4 against a 45th ranked Tulane is frustrating when we are so close."

The Golden Knights wasted no time dispatching Southeastern Louisiana 7-0 on the second day in Louisiana. Gunawan, Gaelle Gouttefarde, and Daniela Okal set the early tone for UCF by winning their matches without dropping a single game. Widyadharma, Svantesson and Sonja Prokopec rounded out the singles sweep for the Golden Knights.

"This was a top-75 opponent that was still upset after losing to Tulane," Lions head coach Dan Silverstein said.

"They got off to a fast start and were too much for us today." With little time to prepare, the Golden Knight squad returned to action on Feb. 16 against host South Florida at the USF Tennis Complex.

The Golden Knights gave the Bulls, ranked 40th in the nation, all that it could handle before losing 6-3 in Tampa. Widyadharma improved to 4-0 on the dual season after downing Katherine Tessier 6-2, 5-7 and 7-5. Gouttefarde gave UCF its second win by topping Natalie Schwartz 7-6, 2-6, 6-3 and Widyadharma and Gunawan upset 40th ranked duo Tessier and Tina Harrison 8-6 for UCF's third point.

"We know what we want to do to achieve a top 40 ranking, but it's not instructive yet," said Allison. "We have shown (against Tulane and South Florida) that we have the talent, no doubt about it."

The Golden Knights showed their talent against the Stetson Hatters at the Mandy Stoll Tennis Center on Feb. 18, in yet another road game. Behind victories from Widyadharma, who dismissed 1999 TAAC Player-of-the-Year Taryn Lynn, Svantesson, Gunawan, Gouttefarde and Prokopec, UCF ran away with a 6-1 win.

The Golden Knights return to action against Rollins on Feb. 25 at the UCF Tennis Complex. Match time is set for 2:30 p.m.

Patricia Allison after her Golden Knights' 8-1 victory against Barry University on Feb. 19.
UCF volleyball coach Meg Fitzgerald compiled a 19-12 record in her first season as the Golden Knights coach, despite having no previous head coaching experience at the Division I-A level. Fitzgerald, who coached Rollins College to a 14-16 record in 1998, served as an assistant coach at Colorado and UNC-Charlotte after a distinguished college playing career at the University of Florida. The Knights completed a 10-0 record in the Trans America Athletic Conference regular season for the team’s longest TAAC winning streak in two seasons.

Despite the strong regular season, the Knights went 2-1 in the TAAC Tournament, losing a chance to go to the NCAA Tournament in the TAAC title game. Florida Atlantic beat UCF 7-15, 13-3, 13-15, 15-9, 11-15 in the TAAC title game to earn the automatic berth to the NCAAs.

Fitzgerald is engaged to Roy Colado, a local banker at the National Bank of Commerce in Winter Park. She recently signed three players to scholarship with the Knights and spoke with the CFF to discuss her first season.

CFF: What did you tell your team after the loss to FAU in the TAAC Championship?
A: Well, we didn’t meet our ultimate goal, but certainly we did some things that we’re all very pleased about. Certainly going through the conference undefeated was a huge deal for us. It was really neat to go through that with the kids that we had that had gone through so many different coaches in so many different years. It was really good and hopefully it was satisfying for them to go through a season like that. They were playing really well for a good stretch there, we struggled a little bit there in the beginning, but I wasn’t really too surprised by that.

It’s a new team, it’s a new coach and there’s a lot of young kids starting a new system. I was pretty pleased with the way things turned out.

CFF: Did the season live up to your goals without winning the TAAC title?
A: Yeah, I felt I was really happy with the season. I really did. You always want to go to the NCAAs, but going undefeated in the conference was an incredible accomplishment.

CFF: Looking at the NCAA Tournament this year as it was going on, did you ever think you could have beaten some of the teams that were playing?
A: Sure. We played Florida A&M the weekend of Thanksgiving and they went to the tournament and we beat them in three. So that’s frustrating, but it’s just the NCAA rolls out and how conferences work.

CFF: What did you tell the team after losing in the TAAC Championship?
A: Well, I told them not to hang their heads. What they accomplished this year more than surpassed what most people thought. Coming into this with a new coach and for two of those players it being their third coach in five years, that’s not an easy thing to do. I congratulated them for making it through the season and for keeping a positive attitude. They took in what I had to say and that they handled the adjustment very well. I put them in positions that most of them were not used to, and I thought that they all handled it with class.

CFF: Who do you look at as the leader for this team next year?
A: Well, we look at our ‘senior class’ and our seniors. We look at Sam [Andisso] to give us some offensive power and certainly some defense. She did a fabulous job for us this year in that role. We look at Piper [Morgan], she’s our big kid in the middle. We look at Shelly as being one of the strongest players on our team physically. We look at each of them to lead in a different way. I think come training camp, people will emerge. Certainly, you always look to the oldest players. I think people find [leading] on different days and they do it in different ways. They also do it in the weight room. When it emerges on the court, it’s going to be scary.

CFF: Was there anything you saw that kept you from winning the TAAC Championship on the court that you can point to specifically?
A: Ball control. That’s what we’re recruiting and that’s what we need to fix.

CFF: What have you added to the off-season conditioning program for the players?
A: We’ve added a lot (laughing). For the first six weeks, they worked out four days a week at 6 a.m. Then, they came in here [UCF Education Gym] and had individuals (individual drills) for one hour twice a week. Starting on Monday [Feb. 21], it’ll be team practice (two hours, every day of the week). And they’re going to lift three days a week at 6 a.m. We have seen such a difference physically already. Casey Kerner actually has leg muscles now. We weren’t sure she had any. But everybody has taken a big leap in their strength, and that’s what we’re looking for. We’re looking to get bigger and stronger and that’s what we’re doing. Looking at the kids we have now and comparing them to the kids we have last year, it’s leaps and bounds of improvement. They’ve really worked hard in the first part of the season.

Two seasons ago at Rollins College, volleyball coach Meg Fitzgerald stayed on the Winter Park school's campus to recruit. Facing the prospect of coaching a team short on players, Fitzgerald practically scoured every corner of Rollins' campus in search of players to fill her roster.

But two seasons later, the coach of the UCF volleyball team has found three new Knights by getting away from Orlando.

Jenny Frank from Colorado Springs, Col., Shelly Kreger from Germantown, Wi., and Lindsay Whalen from Kalamaazoo, Mich. highlight the latest recruiting class in the Knights' second year coach.

After falling short to Florida Atlantic in the TAAC Championship game, Fitzgerald said UCF's lack of ball control offense against FAU pointed out a glaring weakness in the Knights' offense.

"All the kids that were recruited, especially the two outside, have incredible ball control and good defensive skills," Fitzgerald said. "We have a feeling we're going to be using our middle [blockers] a little bit more next season."

Frank, a graduate of Coronado High, played in 224 games, 485 kills, 845 assists, 307 aces, 45 blocks and 671 digs. She was inducted into the 1999-00 class of the CHS hall of fame and was an All-State Magazine Super 75 selection. She was twice named all-state for her efforts in leading Coronado to three Metro League championship titles and two state championship playoffs.

Fitzgerald says she plans to play Frank as a setter along with current standout Becca Saldana. Saldana led the TAAC in assists and assists a game average, but Fitzgerald says Frank should find a way to challenge the Knights No. 1 setter.

"Jenny Frank is one of the top setters coming out of Colorado. She's incredibly athletic and incredibly quick," Fitzgerald said. "She played on a fantastic club team and was really well trained. It's going to be two different types of setters and we look to them to challenge each other in a variety of ways.

"We need to bring in someone who will challenge her in a different way. Becca gives stuff than Jenny, so it'll be a fun battle to watch."

As the Knights recruit with junior college experience, and 1,261 kills, earning all-region and all-Collegiate Conference of Central Illinois honors.

Shelly Kreger is the other outside hitter, she was an All-American, she led her team in digs. She's a real good defensive player and has good ball control," Fitzgerald said.

"She'll be another good outside hitter for us. She brings tons of energy to the court and again, ball control. We're really looking to get our middles involved right from the beginning."

Joining Kreger at the outside hitter position is the recent Parchment HS graduate Whalen. She was twice selected to the All-KVA Conference first team and the All-Michigan State team. She helped PHS to three conference, two district and two regional championship titles, and carried them to the 1999 Michigan State Final Four. Also a member of the 1998 conference, district, and regional championship basketball squad, Whalen earned all-conference honors her sophomore and junior years.

"Lindsay is an outside hitter from Kalamaazoo and she has incredible ball control," Fitzgerald said. "She's a die-hard volleyball player, she loves to be intense and really draws her team into it. Her's going to see her challenge for a position right away."

All three of Fitzgerald's new additions should see considerable minutes as the Knights lose seniors Susan Rosenberger, Brandi McCollom, Stephanie Noesisse and Lisa Lujanquist Riemann. Kreger, Whalen and Frank are the types of players that Fitzgerald describes as the ingredients for the future of UCF volleyball.

"We're looking for everyone to play this year, and I'm not exaggerating. I have an idea of where I want the program to go and these are the type of athletes that I think are going to take us there," she said. "They fit the mold of what I think positions will be."

"They compliment the players we already have, too. They fit into the system and also fit in with the players that i do have, That's what's recruiting is all about."

While the Knights have one more scholarship to potentially offer, due to NCAA restrictions, Fitzgerald is tight-lipped about whether or not she'll use it. If she decides to not use the scholarship this season, UCF would have four scholarships to offer next year.

Spring Break!

You've been looking back at good times and stories around all summer. Now's the time to lighten the load and take a break. Spring Break, that is! Spring Break is certainly a great time to get away with the family, see the sights, or just relax by the pool. As long as you don't pack your problems away and you don't overdo it, Spring Break can be a fun and relaxing period.

Wear a pad - it can feel like a diaper.

Wear Playtex Gentle Glide - all you feel is comfortable.

Spring Break is only as good as the preparations you made for it. If you don't have the right stuff, it could be a real downer.

Coach Meg Fitzgerald turned around a struggling UCF volleyball program and got it back in the right direction in her first season at the helm.

Kramer played two seasons at Parkland CC and won a national championship. As PCC, her team was 54-9 in her final season and won the NJCAA Division II national championship. The Illinois native and outside hitter was a first team junior college All-American, she led her team in digs.

While the Knights have one more scholarship to potentially offer, due to NCAA restrictions, Fitzgerald is tight-lipped about whether or not she'll use it. If she decides to not use the scholarship this season, UCF would have four scholarships to offer next year.

Fans everywhere want to see the fancy moves of the Sacramento Kings' Jason Williams, but Kings' faithful would probably rather see JFW take a cue from Utah Jazz point guard John Stockton and lead his team to the NBA Finals instead of a permanent spot on "Plays of the Week." UCF fans are currently getting a taste of this debate; only it is taking place between players on the same team. Senior Cory Perry and freshman Al Miller have been the yin and yang of the UCF point guard position this season, combining their talents to try and lead the Golden Knights to an NCAA Tournament berth.

Perry is the quintessential team player, making his mark at UCF as an extremely versatile point guard. His 490 career assists are second all time for a Golden Knight, but passing the basketball has been only a small part of his role. He is a defensive stopper, can score when he has to, and his four rebounds per game lead all guards on the team. In UCF's Feb. 17 win over Jacksonville State, the 5' 11" Perry led the Golden Knights with 17 points and 14 rebounds. That's right - 14 rebounds, a Rodman-esque number, for an undersized point guard. It was the best rebounding performance by a UCF player this year.

"I just had to get down there and help the big guys out," said Perry. "We only had one big guy in at a time, so somebody else had to get some rebounds. I figured I'd go down there and get some. Ever since I've been here I've been able to get rebounds... Tonight it was just coming to me - I just wanted it more than the other team."

But Perry hasn't had the smoothest of senior seasons. The team has been inconsistent, not living up to the expectations of an appearance in the TAAC Championship game just a year ago. Two of his fellow seniors, Mario Lovett and Roy Leath, are out for the season with injuries, subtracting a great deal of the experience the team thought it would enjoy. Perry himself has played through injury this year, being forced to sit on the bench early in the season because of a recurring high ankle sprain. Perry saw much of his playing time being given to Miller as he nursed his injury, and when he was healthy enough to return, Miller had developed into a player too valuable to keep on the bench. So UCF coach Kirk Speraw decided to play them both, often putting them on the court at the same time.

"We've played them a lot together, and it's a tough matchup for people," said Speraw. "They've got great quickness. Cory's always been a very good defender and Al's improving as a defender."

Unlike Perry, Miller has been the beneficiary of UCF's injury-plagued roster. He is the highly touted rookie in the equation, with great potential but no experience. While Perry was seeing limited minutes because of his injury, Miller was taking advantage of his chance to play. His ball-handling ability has captured the attention of fans, coaches, and especially opposing players trying to defend him. Under the tutelage of Perry, his knowledge of the team's offense and his decision-making has improved throughout the season. He has made the transition from high school star to freshman understudy remarkably well, and is now ranked eighth in the TAAC in assists. Miller attributes much of his early success to the influence of Perry.

"CP's taught me a whole lot," he said. "When I first got here, my intentions were to fight him for his position, but now that we're on the same team, we have to be on the same page. Yeah, we compete, but at the same time it's more like a learning experience. I'm taking everything I can get from him because he has a lot to offer." Miller isn't the only one benefiting from this student-teacher relationship, however, according to Speraw.

"I think (Al) has learned a lot from Cory - the way he understands how to run things and how to run plays and the way he defends and hopefully Al is picking those things up," he said. "But Al's been good for Cory as well because some of the things that Al does, Cory doesn't do as well. It's been a good combination between the two of them."

Now that Perry is healthy and Miller is maturing as a player, the team is benefiting from their dual presence on the court. Speraw frequently plays the two together, giving the team two point guards on the floor at the same time. They also are able to give each other much needed rest during games.

When Perry had to leave the game against Jacksonville State momentarily with leg cramps, Miller was able to come in and maintain continuity on both offense and defense.

"If he gets (the ball) he can go and I can take the wing, or if I get (the ball) he can go and take the wing," said Miller. "It kind of speeds up the pace of the game. It might not help us as much offensively as it does defensively, though, because we can pressure the guys real well. And defense leads to offense."

Perry has relished his role of mentor, and appreciates the presence of Miller on the court with him.

"I think we work good together," said Perry. "I'm trying to teach him as the season goes along. When coach calls a play, I'm trying to direct him to tell him which way to run it. He helps me out a lot - I don't always have to have the ball, and he gives me breaks when we are being subbed for each other."

The two put together perhaps their best performances of the season in the 68-64 win over Jacksonville State. Along with Perry's 17 points and 14 rebounds, Miller added a career-high 15 points, including a half-court shot at the end of the first half. Despite their individual performances, however, what will stand out from that game is what they did in the game's final minutes.

Flashback to Jan. 10, UCF at Jacksonville State. The Golden Knights held a slim lead nearing the end of regulation. Perry was fouled and had a chance to ice the game with two free throws. A 75% free throw shooter, he missed both. On the next possession, Miller was fouled and given the same opportunity. He missed both of his free throws, which enabled JSU to force overtime and go on to a 90-83 victory.

Back to Feb. 17, and the Golden Knights were once again leading JSU late in the game. Perry was fouled and once again given the chance to cement a win, but once again he missed both free throws. Following his second miss, Perry fought for and got the rebound. He passed the ball to 85% free throw shooter Jason Thornton, who passed the ball to Miller instead of allowing himself to be fouled. Miller was then fouled, putting the freshman in the exact same situation that he faced the first meeting between the two teams. This time, however, there was a different outcome. With some encouraging words from Perry, Miller stepped to the line and sank both free throws, putting the exclamation point on what may have been the team's most important victory of the year.

"It was like deja vu," said Perry. "After I missed my two and then he got fouled, I went up to him and said 'Don't let it happen like it happened up there. Just help me out - don't let me go down like that.' And he came through for me. The student teaching the mentor before his own education is complete? The future will be bright.

It's Miller Time

In last week's 68-64 win over Jacksonville State, freshman point guard Al. Miller scored a career high 15 points and hit two free throws with 22 seconds left to seal the victory. Neither of those feats, however, were his most memorable of the night. With time winding down in the first half, UCF trailed JSU 38-26. Miller took the ball down court, and hit a half court shot as the buzzer sounded. Much to his and the crowd's delight, the shot went in, hitting nothing but net.

"Jacksonville had the momentum in their way, and when I hit the shot it kind of let us know that we still had a shot," said Miller. "Believe it or not, I've hit that shot a lot in my career. When the buzzer sounds and I've got a half court shot, I can kind of like time it real good."

Miller also hit a half court shot at the end of the first half in UCF's 77-57 loss to Ohio University on Dec. 13. Ironically, those are Miller's only two three-pointers of the season.

Leath Out for Season

Senior forward Roy Leath will likely miss the rest of the season due to a pinched nerve in his leg. He has missed the last five games, and has not made significant progress recovering from the injury. This is yet another big injury for Coach Kirk Speraw's team, who will now need someone else play Leath's minutes in the post. Leath had started every game in which he played this season, and was averaging 22.5 minutes per game.

Fellow senior Davis Granberry is the likely candidate to get more playing time, along with freshman Ikechi Nnako. Paul Reed, the other starting post player, will have to increase his 25.9 minutes per game. "It's just another huge blow to our basketball team. Now three of our best post players are out for the year. It really has depleted us," Speraw said. "Davin came in and gave us a huge lift but he didn't practice two days last week because of his shoulder. We're just trying to get by and find ways to survive."

UCF has already been without forwards Mario Lovett and Benoni Simms all season, who both would have played significant roles this year. "Beronti and Mario would have been starting forwards this year," said Speraw. "And we didn't have them for a game. Roy has been our starter for most of the season, and now we don't have him. It really has depleted us. We're going to have to scramble around, and hopefully we can make the adjustments down the stretch."

Perry Sets Career High

In last week's 68-64 win over Jacksonville State, senior point guard Cory Perry set a career high with 14 rebounds. Perry leads all guards on the team with 4.0 rebounds per game, despite playing limited minutes due to a recurring high ankle sprain.

"I just had to get down there and help the big guys out," said Perry. "We only had one big guy in at a time, so somebody else had to get some rebounds. I figured I'd go down there and get some. Even since I've been here I've been able to get rebounds. Tonight it was just coming to me. I just wanted it more than the other team."

He also scored 17 points in the game, one shot of his career high of 18, set in 1997 against Western Kentucky. Along with the points and rebounds, Speraw praised Perry for his all-around game.

"Cory gets 14 boards, and just a lot of tough, tough plays and a lot of things defensively," he said. "He was covering up for people and helping people out, and just flying all over the place. He just had an outstanding game."

UCF Holds on to Win 2 of 3 From Tech

Justin Pope and Matt Bowser made sure that UCF would break even last week with a 2-2 record. They helped spoil the return of former assistant coach Mike Mauck and his Tennessee Tech Golden Eagles, as Pope led UCF to a 9-1 victory Sunday and a series win.

"Justin Pope established himself on the mound that he was going to win that game, and he went out and did it," Coach Jay Bergman said. "We got some hits at the right time, and we got a lot of guys in the ballgame. I think that shows the versatility of our ball club when we're playing 14-15 guys."

Pope threw 7.2 innings with 12 strikeouts and no walks as he mowed through the Tech lineup. With a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning, Bowser hit a towering two-run home run into the Citrus Bowl for a 3-0 lead on route to a five-inning run.

The win followed a terrible loss Saturday, in which UCF stranded 12 runners on base and gave up 10 runs over two innings for a 14-8 loss. Bowser and fellow shortstop Dustin Brissett didn't start for Bergman in all right-handed hitting lineup.

David Ranke battled to a 3-3 tie in the sixth, but gave up the lead run before getting pulled. The bullpen allowed the floodgates to open, as four relievers combined to allow eight runs on 11 hits with four walks in the final four innings.

"When you look at what's happened to us it's been our relief pitching. It has been poor," Bergman said. "We have not been locating curve balls for strikes and we're just sitting on fastballs. Bottom line."

UCF tried to make a comeback with five runs in the final three innings, but the Golden Knights five errors helped end it as Tech scored five unearned runs. David Jackson shut down UCF, going 6.2 innings allowing only three earned runs.

The loss on Saturday was a complete surprise because the Golden Knights had come back from a 7-3 deficit for a 10-7 win Friday night. After Casey Kennedy got knocked out of the game in the fourth inning, three relievers combined to allow only three hits in the final 5.1 innings with eight strikeouts.

"It was the first time that we had a chance for a comeback win," Bergman said. "We didn't panic and we let ourselves get back in the ball game, rather than letting this game get away from us." UCF cut the deficit to 7-6 with three runs in the fifth and added two more in the sixth for an 8-7 lead. The Golden Knights took advantage of Tech's three errors, but did not help themselves with four of its own.

Nearing the Mark

Junior closer Jason Arnold earned his first save of the season Friday night during a 10-7 win over Tennessee Tech. He threw three scoreless innings with five strikeouts to earn the 21st save of his career.

"It was the first time that we had a chance for a comeback win," Coach Jay Bergman said. "We didn't panic and we let ourselves get back in the ball game, rather than letting this game get away from us." UCF cut the deficit to 7-6 with three runs in the fifth and added two more in the sixth for an 8-7 lead. The Golden Knights took advantage of Tech's three errors, but did not help themselves with four of its own.

Dominant

Sophomore starter Justin Pope has appeared in four games, including three starts, and he has dominated the competition. After allowing four runs on six hits in six innings against Wake Forest January 29, Pope has thrown 16.1 innings, allowing only four runs on 12 hits with 20 strikeouts and only three walks.

Pitcher Mike Fox was the leader on offense against Tennessee Tech, going 7-for-10 in the series. He recorded four doubles, five RBIs, two runs scored, two sacrifice flies, and a sacrifice bunt.

Stranded

The Golden Knights have had no problem getting runners on base and even in scoring position, but during the past week it struggled severely to drive those runners in. During the three games prior to Sunday's victory over Tennessee Tech, UCF left 55 men on the base paths. The 12 runners stranded during a 6-5 loss at Bethune-Cookman were a major factor in the loss. UCF was fortunate to win a come-from-behind 10-7 win Friday over Tech despite leaving 12 more on base. Eleven more runners failed to score in Saturdays disappointing 14-8 loss to Tech.
Graham trades in Kentucky
Blue for Black and Gold

TRAVIS BELL

Sophomore outfielder Jason Graham had a difficult decision facing him during his first season at the University of Kentucky last year. He could either stay at the Southeastern Conference school with the potential of facing some of the best teams in the nation, or he could return closer to home and make an instant impact at a Florida school. After some time debating, he realized that he had gotten caught up in the excitement of playing for a SEC school rather than making the decision that was right for him.

"It was the hype of the SEC and all the benefits that come with that, I wasn’t ready for the weather though, and that’s why I ultimately left," Graham said. "Anytime you’re in the SEC or ACC, you’ve got a good chance to go somewhere. But it just didn’t work out that way."

But all the decision making for Graham wasn’t done yet. After going to high school only 15 minutes from Florida Atlantic, he decided that he didn’t want to be that close to home. So he chose UCF for one major reason: familiar faces.

He grew up playing all levels of baseball with Justin Pope, Pete Cavallini, Dustin Brisson, and many other players from the South Florida area. "I grew up with those guys, and it was big because I knew what kind of ballplayers they were," Graham said. "Going to Kentucky I didn’t really know what I was getting myself into as far as how everybody else competed. It’s worked out great and I feel like this is my home and I couldn’t be happier."

But one player that Graham didn’t know growing up was Matt Bowser. However, the two became roommates shortly after Graham’s arrival and Bowser knew that Graham would be able to fit in. "I had heard a lot about him before he got here, and I figured that he had a chance to come down here and do some good things," Bowser said. "So I wasn’t surprised when I saw what kind of player he was."

However, doing some good things is a drastic understatement when talking about what Graham has done since joining the Golden Knights. After not playing in the season opener against North Carolina, he got to start against Wake Forest and hasn’t looked back since.

In the 18-game stretch that Graham has been starting, not only is UCF 7-2-3, but he has yet to go one game without a hit. He is batting .421 (16-for-38) with five extra-base hits and 11 runs scored. He also has four RBIs and an impressive .476 on-base percentage.

"He’s been a pleasant surprise, but not a surprise with a capital ‘S’ because we knew he could play after the full practices," Coach Jay Bergman said. "(Assistant) coach (Greg) Frady has done an excellent job with him as far as his hitting is concerned."

Graham gives Frady even more credit because he says he used to be a free-swinging that struck out a lot. Now that Frady has got him in the correct mindset, he feels like he is my home and I couldn’t be happier."

Graham knows that he has taken advantage of his opportunity because someone else could replace him if he begins to slack. That’s why commitment is such an important concept for him.

"I’m at the field early every day, and I usually stay late," Graham said. "Being prepared definitely doesn’t hurt. If you’re prepared that builds your confidence, and if you have confidence then that’s hard to beat."

Graham also feels that playing in the SEC helped his confidence, and he’s brought that positive mindset onto the field. He also says he realized that the competition level isn’t much different between the SEC and UCF.

He quickly recognized the depth in the outfield for the Golden Knights, and he says that that depth is why he came to UCF and what makes being here so enjoyable.

"It’s a lot easier to come to the ballpark and play when you’ve got the competitions at each position like we do," Graham said. "In the outfield there’s five guys that can start every day. That one day that you don’t show up, you’re spot could be gone."

That’s why Graham stays late and come early because he doesn’t want to one day lose that spot.

Men's basketball ends regular season on the road

At least UCF is getting preparation for a tournament-type atmosphere now, playing in highly competitive games against teams that have been coming in playing their best basketball of the season. Last week, UCF ended JSU's three-game winning streak and Samford's five-game winning streak, showing a competitive spirit Coach Kirk Speraw has been hoping for all season.

UCF will have two more games to tweak its game before the conference tournament, playing at Campbell on Feb. 24 and at Georgia State on Feb. 26.

The Camels and Golden Knights will enter their showdown tied for the fifth place in the TAAC standings, with both teams hoping to make a run at a top four seeding. UCF won the first meeting between the two teams, 90-63, at the UCF Arena.

Both teams are just one game behind Samford, who close against Mercer and Jacksonville State this week.

The Golden Knights aren't worried about what their opposition is doing, instead concentrating on their own business.

The Knights will close the season against a Georgia State team that may be playing for the regular season title and the tournament's number one seed. The Knights beat the Panthers in Orlando, 72-67, in their only meeting this year.

Golden Knights take act to Alabama

TRAVIS BELL

Traveling on the road in college baseball is a difficult enough task, but making your way to a Southeastern Conference stadium could arguably be the most difficult trip imaginable. For the second consecutive year, UCF will get the opportunity to show what it is made of in front of a hostile SEC crowd.

UCF will visit Tuscaloosa, Alabama for a three-game series against No. 3 Alabama beginning Friday at 7 p.m. It's a problem that should not arise but making your way to a SEC-type facility. The Golden Knights did get to home at a neutral site for those conference victories against Samford and Jacksonville State, the Golden Knights are one win or a Mercer loss away from avoiding the four games-in-four days scenario that currently faces Stetson, Jacksonville, and Florida Atlantic if it plans on making a run to the NCAA Tournament.

The team will spend more time in scrimmage situations at the end of practice on Feb. 23 and all morning on Feb. 26.

Men’s basketball ends regular season on the road

UCF's goal of avoiding a first round play-in game in March's TAAC Tournament has nearly come to fruition. Following last week's home victories against Samford and Jacksonville State, the Golden Knights are one win or a Mercer loss away from avoiding the four games-in-four days scenario that currently faces Stetson, Jacksonville, and Florida Atlantic if it plans on making a run to the NCAA Tournament.

Four wins in four days has never been done.

The Golden Knights certainly don't want to try to make history in that regard. In this case, the high road is definitely the easier one.

However, it isn't like the road will be all that easy. Even if UCF does get a top-six seed, it will have to go through one of the other teams with a top-six seed in the quarterfinals, and each of those teams should have at least 16 conference victories.

UCF's offense, but will have the surgery as soon as it concludes and will return for the 2001 season leaving this year's competition for the job to Mack, Howard, Baker, and incoming freshmen Alex Haynes and Gerard Jackson.

"This is Eddie's fifth year so he should feel comfortable and do pretty well. It's going to be a real battle ... I think. (All of the tailbacks) each bring a little something different to the game and we're going to come out of this thing with a starter at the end of 15 days, I hope."

In other aspects of the scrimmage, Vic Penn completed three of seven passes for 23 yards and was picked off by Darian Demp's. Brian Miller completed two of four passes for 80 yards, including a 70-yard touchdown to Thad Ward. Defensive ends Elton Patterson and Don Page combined for a touchdown for the defense. Patterson knocked the ball into the air on a sack of Penn and Page caught the ball and ran 30 yards for the score. Not content with that, Patterson later had a fumble recovery and Page knocked down a pass at the line of scrimmage.

"This offseason we spent an awful lot of time on strength development and not a whole lot of time on conditioning," Kruczek said. "We're working practice at a pretty rapid pace and you can tell the guys are kind of tired. But that's part of the philosophy. I want to find out who can push through the tedium and find a way to get things done when they get tired."

SPECIAL TO THE FUTURE

True to his word, UCF coach Mike Kruczek made the running game the focus of practice and an abbreviated scrimmage on Feb. 19. Kruczek, who has earned the reputation having a pass-oriented offense, stated he would emphasize the run during the spring. Running plays outnumbered pass plays nearly two-to-one during the 35 minute scrimmage.

"I thought the intensity was good," Kruczek said. "There's always improvement technique-wise and I think the kids are willing to do it."

Tailback Edward Mack led the way with 50 yards on five carries, followed by red-shirt freshman Corey Baker with nine carries for 23 yards. Fullback Dwight Collins picked up 18 yards on three carries. Omari Howard had four carries for seven yards and a fumble and Terrance Williams had two carries for 6 yards.

"Eddie looked good, I think Corey will look good," Kruczek said. "He's got to learn what he's doing first. Once it becomes instinctive and he lessens his natural ability take over, he's going to be a great football player."

The logslam at running back got a little cleaner with the announcement that Williams will have surgery to repair a loose ligament. Williams had sprained his ankle during last year's fall camp and re-aggravated it in UCF's sixth game against Nicholls State and wasn't the same the rest of the year.

Williams will participate in spring practice as a way to increase his knowledge of UCF's offense, but will have the surgery as soon as it concludes and will return for the 2001 season leaving this year's competition for the job to Mack, Howard, Baker, and incoming freshmen Alex Haynes and Gerard Jackson.

"This is Eddie's fifth year so he should feel comfortable and do pretty well. It's going to be a real battle ... I think. (All of the tailbacks) each bring a little something different to the game and we're going to come out of this thing with a starter at the end of 15 days, I hope."

Senior Dustin Brisson is at the heart of a UCF lineup that has been very productive early this season, keeping the Golden Knights in games where their pitching falls them.
