Students get hands-on experience at 'murder' scene

Becki Panoff Staff Writer

An exercise in learning became a foray into the world of forensic science on campus this month. Two bodies were buried on the grounds of UCF, and it was up to an anthropology class to figure out the circumstances of the "murder."

The bodies were those of pig carcasses, buried by professor Dr. Toshia Depree, and they were for her class of 26 students to study forensic science. The premise of the exercise was this: the students were to figure out the circumstances of the "murder."

Students by a serial killer. The students were given a piece of the killer's journal, which didn't tell them where the bodies were. The Emerging Knights is an extra-curricular program designed to provide both first-year and transfer students with the valuable opportunity to learn about themselves and what they are capable of accomplishing, according to the Office of Student Activities.

The program is directed by Julie Erlandson, who serves as their peer mentor. There are many goals for the Emerging Knights mentors, such as creating a welcoming atmosphere each student fits the incoming students, but it also creates an environment of growth and learning through the mentoring process, she said.

During the interview sessions, the Emerging Knights Executive Board held interviews for the 22 hopeful mentor applicants. The overall impression of each applicant helped to influence each board member's decision. After much debate and thorough thinking of each applicant, the Emerging Knights Executive Board announced their new mentors on Thursday, April 13.

Choosing who would become an Emerging Knights mentor was tough for the executive board. The mentors were selected based upon an evaluation score that each board member filled out about each of the candidates. Every student 'knocked socks off' during their interview and I wish we could have taken everyone, but in reality we could not,' said Stevens.

There are many goals for the new Emerging Knights mentors. Student Director Heather Stevens wants to make the program thrive. 'Above and beyond, I want the Emerging Knights program to become a staple in the UCF experience. We are meant to be a friendly and useful point of contact and support for the new Knights. Finally, I want to promote rewarding relationships between the mentor and the mentee, since interpersonal relations is what makes this program thrive,' she said.

Other questions about the Emerging Knights program can be directed to the Office of Student Activities at 823-6471 or stop by Student Union room 215.

Phil McDaniel named Student Director

The Campus Activities Board is a student-run organization for the UCF community.

To CAB Advisor Laura Waltrip, who has been with the board since Homecoming 1998, the Campus Activities Board is important to her. "CAB is important to me, personally, because it's my career and interest. I love working with CAB students in helping them fulfill their goals and ambitions, as well as in providing them leadership opportunities as they learn to plan and coordinate the programs they choose."

The 1999-2000 CAB Director, Kristen E. Murphy, is returning to CAB as the new Dance Marathon Director. Murphy, who is a sophomore at UCF majoring in Advertising and Public Relations, was also the 2000 Dance Marathon’s Director of Morale. Kristen Murphy is responsible for putting together a board of directors and committee that will plan out the annual 24-hour Dance Marathon event. This director does this annual event to raise funds in conjunction with Children’s Miracle Network.

"I chose Dance Marathon because it will have the most effect on people. It won’t just effect the children, it will effect the participants as well. Ever since I participated in my first Dance Marathon I knew one day I wanted to lead it and now I have the opportunity to lead the FIRST Dance Marathon of the century! It’s exciting because these children are so important to our future and now I have the opportunity to save part of our future. My goal for the year is to pass on the excitement. I want to sign up more dancers committed to this cause and make people more aware of what we’re trying to accomplish."

As for Student Director McDaniel’s goals, he wants to bring what the student body wants to UCF.

"My goals for next year’s board are to bring more diverse programming to UCF, and to build and expand on our present programming. (I also want) to work together with our clubs and organizations, bringing in events that the student body wants, and to have more people notice CAB and recognize the events we put on."

If student’s are interested in participating in one of the 12 committees that make up the Campus Activities Board, call 823-6471 or stop by the CAB Office at SU 215.

Students gain leadership experience with Volunteer UCF

Volunteer UCF is an informational and referral source that is dedicated to community service. This organization helps students and student organizations link up to the various community service agencies. Volunteer UCF also matches projects to interests and interests.

The 2000-2001 Student Director for Volunteer UCF is Renee Blanchard, who has been on the VUCF board for the past two years. "VUCF is an agency that is dedicated to getting UCF students involved and getting them into a position to make a difference in the community. VUCF allows the community to see all that we as students have to offer. We also bring important issues onto campus and spread valuable information to the students," she said.

There are several special events that VUCF sponsors throughout the year, such as the Hunger Banquet, the Get Carded Banquet and the Volunteer Expo. Students can volunteer for an agency that suits their needs. There are also numerous monthly volunteer projects that students may participate in, such as SPARK (a volunteer program that offers different service projects once a month) and Habitat for Humanity. Students can also choose to experience volunteerism by joining one of VUCF's numerous committees to help plan and staff events. Several events that VUCF's committees take part in are the Hunger Banquet and the Are you My Type Blood Drive.

The fourth way that VUCF encourages students to get involved with the student-run organization is by taking part in the VUCF Board of Directors. There is an application and interview process that takes place during the spring. The VUCF Board of Directors has already been chosen.

The 2000-2001 VUCF board is:
* Student Director: Renee Blanchard
* Graduate Assistant: Ryan Lovett
* Kenny Calder
* Ryan Engineer
* Sarah Kureshi
* Larry Macon
* Ricky Middaugh
* Carina Morales

The previous VUCF Student Director, Ricky Middaugh, has been involved with the board for the past two years as Special Projects Coordinator, Assistant Student Director, and then Student Director. Middaugh, along with the interviewing panel, was looking for certain qualities in each of the six applicants.

"When we interviewed each person, we were looking for leadership experience, past volunteer experience, teamwork ability, and people skills." We were looking for students that (were) interested in gaining leadership experience. We want(ed) people who are dedicated, hard working, and who simply want to make a difference on campus and in the community. We also looked for good people skills and the ability to get along with a diverse group of students," Blanchard said. "I think we were very lucky. All of the people we had applied were great and had a lot to offer the board. Luckily we had a place for everyone that applied."

I have high expectations for the new board. The group we have heading the new board are all very intelligent, hard working, and have great hearts. I have no doubt in my mind that this group will be extremely successful and will produce some of the best projects UCF has ever seen."

Students may contact Volunteer UCF at 823-6471, or stop by the GSA Office at Student Union room 215, or visit their website at http://pegasus.cc.ucf.edu/~vucf.

Students experience 'killer' final

Students in the Spanish honors class got a chance to do detective work for part of their final exam. These students were part of a "murder mystery." They were given clues to find the "dead bodies" and had to come up with a motive and killer. The hard part of the exercise is that they were only allowed to speak in Spanish. "There is a specific phrase for 'I wonder' in Spanish, and I want the students to get that down," said Spanish professor Alice Korosy, who teaches the honors class. "A few years ago, I was thinking about the "murder mystery" dinner, and I came up with this.

This exercise is in its fourth year of existence, and has evolved from the first time it was used as the class final.

"One year, there were bodies left by the reflecting pond, and in the elevator. People were a little disturbed, riding up the elevator with someone who had been "shot" in the head," said Korosy. She says theatrical makeup to make the dead bodies seem more realistic.

"They have to go out and find those bodies, and tell who did it," said Korosy. They have to report back to her at the end, with a sort of "debriefing." "What I want the students to get out of this is that they do understand the lesson, that it makes it come alive. Usually if you do something like that, students have something that they can come back to (when they need to use it)," said Korosy. There were eight students who participated in this exercise, they were in two groups of four to look for the class and bodies. This was done during second semester so the students have the background of Spanish to speak it.

Next year, Korosy said that the exercise will include 3 continents. Students have also been asked to be able to participate as "victims."

Judge rules student newspaper won't have to reveal unpublished work

TMS CAMPUS
A California student editor will not have to hand over unpublished photographs and records from his college newspaper, a judge has ruled.

Sacramento County Superior Judge Gerald S. Bakarich quashed a subpoena of the records on April 7.

"This is a very good day for journalism," said David Sommers, editor in chief of the "Sacramento State Hornet" at California State University-Sacramento.

An attorney representing a man arrested at a school football game had wanted the newspaper's witness contact information and "all newspapers, clips, films, videos, photographs, or other documents" related to the arrest.

Bakarich originally denied Sommers' motion to quash the subpoena and then held Sommers in contempt for refusing to hand over the material. An appeals panel refused to review the contempt ruling.

Sommers' attorneys renewed their motion once they learned that local television stations had supplied defense attorney Lisa Franco with videotapes of her client's arrest. Sommers' attorneys argued that Franco could go to other sources to get the information she wanted from the "Hornet."

Bakarich ruled that Franco had not exhausted all other ways to get the information. "If he (Sommers) thinks it's over, he's wrong," said Franco.

Professor Tosha Dupras discusses the crime scene with the Forensic Anthropology class. Students got to work first hand with the realistic "murder" site, as well as deal with the media and police.

"It took a lot of work, a lot of people were involved and it went extremely well, the students learned a lot that they wouldn’t have otherwise," said Dupras.

"The students got experience working in groups, and got real life experience as well."

"I want the students be ready to go to real crime scene, and they have to know how to handle themselves," said Dupras.

New ideas play key role in dorm construction project

SCOTT POWERS
KINGFISH TRIBUNE

It's not an apartment -- all he's got to cook with is a microwave oven -- but you won't find freshman Chris Jordan complaining about his dorm room at the University of Central Florida. "There are a lot of nice apartments," observed Jordan, a business student from Fort Walton Beach who lives in UCF's Citrus Hall. "But they don't have the advantages that we have."

Nor did his predecessors at UCF a generation ago. Nor will Jordan have some of the advantages being planned for UCF's next wave of residence halls, which should start opening for the fall 2001 term. University leaders broke ground Tuesday for a new complex of residence halls that should add 1,600 beds to the campus over the next two years.

The new residence complex will scatter clusters of small and medium halls into two distinct communities on former recreation fields in the southeast part of campus. The first phase, to open by fall 2001, should add 800 beds. Nearby will be a new recreation center and a retail and food complex. Other features could include such things as wireless Internet technology, allowing students to take their laptops computers outside and stay on-line.

"The projected cost: almost $65 million. That means every new bed will cost about 70 percent more than those the university built 10 years ago, even after inflation is factored.

"This represents the largest construction phase UCF has ever undertaken," said William Merek, UCF vice president for administration and finance. "UCF plans to finance the project by selling bonds and paying them off with student room and board fees."

"We view this project as not trying to leverage great size, but to enhance student learning," said Tom Huddleston, vice president for student development and enrollment services. "Student learning begins in the classrooms, but there is another type of student learning -- student life, including residence life."

Research shows that students who live on campus at least one year are less likely to drop out, he said. And they are more likely to plug into other student activities, increasing school spirit.

Another reason UCF wants more residence halls: much of the surrounding community has lost patience with sprawling, private apartment complexes notorious for loud, rowdy students. On Tuesday the Orange County Commissioners passed an ordinance limiting apartment complex construction in the area.

New residence halls on campus should help, Huddleston said. Through 1992, UCF had only 879 dormitory and 392 Greek house beds, enough to house about six percent of the students. In the 1990, the university added 2,163 more beds. By 2,002 the dormitory bed total should top 4,600, enough to house about 15 percent of all UCF students.

Meanwhile, UCF has gradually attracted more out-of-town students. "We always have far more applications for residence halls than we can accommodate," Huddleston said.

Attracting freshmen is easier now that the dorm rooms are set aside for them.

"My parents said 'You're going to live on campus for your freshman year," said Denise Burns of Indialantic.

UCF wants to see more upperclassmen and graduate students living on campus as well, and for that the school must offer inducements such as private baths and high-speed internet access.

‘This represents the largest construction phase UCF has ever undertaken,’ said Merck

Burns, for one, opted to stay on campus. Now a senior, studying molecular- and micro-biology, she lives in UCF’s Lake Claire Apartments. She and other upperclassmen said they prefer the convenience of being near classes and the library, the campus spirit and the chances to remain active in campus life.

But she offered a reminder that on-campus housing shouldn’t get too loaded down with extras.

“Most of us are poor college students, so we can’t afford a lot anyway,” she said.

The truth about "Mary Jane"

BETH SHAW

Lately the topic of legalizing marijuana has come up and it has often left me pondering whether or not this drug is as harmful as some claim. Like the good investigative reporter I am, I decided to do a little research.

The majority of my information came from a report by Edward M. Rubin, a Psy.D. in a report called 'Some Facts About Marijuana.' I found this report on the website Addiction and Recovery posted by America On-Line.

As it turns out, marijuana has been around for centuries, actually it dates back to 2700 BC where it was used in China medicinally and disgustingly dirty. In the summer when it's either ninety-five degrees outside or raining, it's almost impossible to play in those courts. It amazes me that a university the size of UCF doesn't have decent facilities for the sport. If a small school like Valencia Community College can manage to provide quality, indoor, air-conditioned racquetball courts to its students, why can't UCF?

The original plan for the expansion of the athletic facilities near the Recreational Services building included the construction of indoor courts, but somebody decided there wasn't enough money for it. In addition, due to that construction, the old racquetball courts are being torn down. Racquetball on this campus is becoming a victim of finances. This is why I am completely agitated that UCF and Student Government are spending $500,000 on upgrades to the Reflection Pond.

This university can't justify spending money on decent racquetball facilities, but they can spend half a million dollars on something that absolutely nobody on this campus can actually use. There is some very interesting logic at work there.

UCF may be growing rapidly, but as long as this type of logic prevails, UCF will continue to remain a second rate school.

Sincerely,

—Andrey Krywonos

Holocaust denial debunked by Emory professor

THE EMBRY WHEEL
EMORY UNIVERSITY

This week, Deborah Lipstadt, professor of modern Jewish and Holocaust studies, and one of the world's leading authorities on the Holocaust, came out on the winning end of a major setback. Lipstadt, professor of modern Jewish and Holocaust history, and one of the world's leading authorities on the Holocaust, I found this report on the website Addiction and Recovery posted by America On-Line.

It amazes me that a university the size of UCF doesn't have decent facilities for the sport. If a small school like Valencia Community College can manage to provide quality, indoor, air-conditioned racquetball courts to its students, why can't UCF?

Some studies have shown that people who smoke marijuana for an extended period of time often have chronic bronchitis and respiratory problems. These long-term users often lose drive and energy and have impaired memory and infantile thinking. Man, when are they going to start selling pot in those handy cigarette machines? I know I can't wait. In the Addiction and Recovery website, it says that a few researchers have found that marijuana used chronically (par-take in the pun) can include chromosomal damage, reduced levels of male sex hormone in the body, reduced body defenses against infection, and brain and liver damage. Unfortunately, an Institute of Medicine review said that these effects didn't usually occur.

Several other sites I found on the web said the while marijuana is one of the "weaker drugs" what ever that means, it still has detrimental effects to people who use it frequently. It has been proven that marijuana can be addictive and people who have mental illnesses don't get better after tilling it.

So why all the controversy? I don't get it. I am sure that there are many drugs that have positive effects on people as well as detrimental ones, so why don't we just legalize those too? The idea that legalizing marijuana would somehow make the world a happier place by helping tax payers and schools is laughable.

Sure that we lived in a perfect society and we could legalize drugs without them getting out of hand then I would say give it a try. But we don't. There are enough legal drugs screwing people up to add a new one to the list.

As far as saving money goes, I would rather pay tax money to be sure that my children (future children that is) are not faced with the harmful effects of drugs. Sure, as long as this type of logic prevails, UCF will continue to remain a second rate school.

Sincerely,

—Andrey Krywonos

HOLOCAUST, Page 35
Monday, April 3. It was one of those wonderful, lazy days that occur about as frequently as the full moon. I had crammed a full-body workout, studying for a full course load and working 8 full-time hours all into one weekend. I awoke around noon to find myself with a wholly vacant schedule. I opened my blind and gazed upon a picture - perfect representation of a spring day.

Although it occurred to me to use the entire day tanning by the poolside, I knew my conscience would never allow me to enjoy such opulent indolence, and I had to run at least one errand to consider it a productive day. I decided that grocery shopping would satisfy that criterion.

Upon arriving at Publix, I circumvented old ladies in moo-moos and navigated the grocery curt obstacle course before docking my car. Crossing the parking lot I kept a careful look-out for the macho jerks on Japanese motorcycles and the sorry debauchees in late-model dad-bought cars who made it into a university but can't read speed limits or stop signs.

When I reached the curb, the access ramp was cordoned off from end to end by an SUV as big as a beached blue whale. The SUV's owners had docked their rigs in a truck in the fire lane simply to avoid the 20 foot walk to the ATM machine. With the ramp blocked off, an old man with a cane had to hobble up the curb. As he passed the two girls at the ATM he tactfully chided them, "People need to use the ramp that your car is blocking, you shouldn't be so inconsiderate." These two blockheads were obviously suffering from an advanced case of shamelessness, a quality which the playwright Euripides referred to as "A disease, the worst of all kinds." Rather than rectify the act of inconsiderate idiocy they had committed or even acknowledge that they were in the wrong, the girls responded with a nasty "whatever.">Central Florida Future • 13 www.UCFfuture.com
American weaponry underneath German uniform. The soldier informs his captain. The captain orders his men to fire their weapons. And in a classic example of high-action cliché, the Germans misfire badly and the Americans kill with incredible accuracy.

The Americans secure Enigma. Mission accomplished. Now, all they have to do is get back to their vessel and go home.

But what action movie would be complete without the predictable plot twists? A Nazi destroyer torpedoes the American submarine, and the crew is forced to escape in U-571. Their first problem is a big one: all of the control panels are written in German. Of course, there is the sovereign hero, the American soldier fluent in German who translates the language for the crew.

That’s the formula for the rest of the movie. The Americans are faced with a problem. They resolve the problem. Another dilemma emerges. Another solution.

The final sequence of the film yields no surprises. Because of the structure of the script, we’ve been conditioned to anticipate success no matter how bleak the situation may seem to be.

At tempting to recreate the underwater excitement of “Das Boot” and “The Hunt For Red October,” Mostow, who also wrote the screenplay, packs every scene with so much action that little room is spared for character development. There are no personalities aboard U-571; the characters exist only to drive the plot forward. Says Captain Dahlgren (Bill Paxton) to Lieutenant Tyler (Matthew McConaughey), “You can't hesitate. You have to act. If you don’t, you put the entire crew at risk.” In other words: act first and think later.

In “Das Boot,” Wolfgang Petersen makes a concerted effort to get us to know his characters. As the film progresses, we are able to ascertain their distinct and distinguishable personalities. We are encouraged to “listen in” on their conversations— and at times we’re so engaged we forget we’re watching a film. Suspense is constructed upon the characters’ emotional responses, and because we’ve had adequate time to observe their habits and identify with their situation, the tension feels very real.

Unable to engage the audience at a personal level, the tension in “U-571” feels contrived. Suspense is entirely action-driven. We’re constantly reminded that indeed we’re watching a film.

Surround sound in “U-571” is like nothing I’ve heard before. Gunfire whizzes overhead. Leaky pipes drip nearby. The movie theatre rumbles with every explosion. Essentially, however, sound is meaningless to the narrative; it functions solely as a “shock device” for the audience’s enjoyment.

“U-571” uses the same elements of irony and pastiche that made last year’s “Deep Blue Sea” implicitly entertaining. Both films draw upon the works of master texts—”U-571” vs. “Das Boot”: “Deep Blue Sea” vs. “Jaws”—and in a way it’s fun to watch the present emulate the past. “U-571” can only be appreciated in mindless entertainment. Purposefully constructed for a movie theatre audience, the film is clichéd and predictable and will probably make a boatload of money. Now that’s an enigma.

Jonathan Mostow’s “U-571” succeeds as an exercise in formulaic filmmaking, but fails ultimately to transcend the conventions which define and de-authenticate the submarine war genre. The dialogue is stale, the characters are purely functional, and the film lacks the plausibility needed for a based-on-a-true-story text.

The story sinks initially and never recovers. The final blasts of action, accompanied by a healthy dose of ironic humor, recall the closing moments of “Jaws,” but lack the urgency that movie possessed. Characters are killed off in a series of predictable and meaningless set pieces.

The story of U-571’s mission to seize Enigma is clearly familiar to the audience. The film’s raison d’être is not to educate us about the history of U-571, nor to humanize the cast members, nor to ground the film in any sort of historical reality. Mostow’s film is a fun action picture, but one that is ultimately disappointing for its lack of originality and invention.

Dear Nancy,

My friend calls me five times a day, which is fine but she doesn't have anything to say. I've started screening my phone calls because I don't know what to say to her. I don't want to hurt her feelings, but I think it's a waste of time to be on the phone with her so much. What should I do?

—Annoyed

Dear Annoyed,

Screening your calls works fine for a short-term plan but it will eventually cause more harm than good. You're going to have to lie to her when you do talk to her. Because she'll probably ask where you were the four out of five times you didn't answer your phone. And that will lead to more problems in your friendship.

I would come right out and say what's on your mind—in a nice way of course. When she calls for the second or third time say, "I just talked to you, what could have possibly happened since then?" Try to sound like you're joking and play it off like that for awhile and see if she gets the hints.

If she doesn't get it try yelling 'prank caller' into the phone each time she calls. And if she still calls, get a new number and a new friend with a life.

Dear Nancy,

I have a problem with guys—every time I meet someone I like I act like I don't want anything to do with them. I just can't bring myself to let someone know that I like them. Maybe I'm afraid of rejection or not confident enough. I don't know, what do you think?

—Confused

Dear Confused,

You're not confused, you figured out your own problem. Now you just have to do something about it. I say you start working on that self esteem problem of yours. Go to the gym, keep a journal with all of the things you like about yourself, watch Oprah—find out what makes you feel confident and do it.

I'm glad to hear you're not throwing yourself at every guy you meet. It means you have self-dignity. You're actually lucky with your problem—you could be the other way around. Guys probably see it as playing hard to get anyway, and that never killed anybody.

Universal beefs up attractions

PATTY CANEDO
STAFF WRITER

It's summer time again and what does that mean to us, the inhabitants of Orlando? Besides sweltering heat, tourists! The ever-expanding theme parks that neighbor UCF attract thousands upon thousands of guests every year. But what keeps the people returning year after year? In the quest to attract the most patrons, the theme parks are constantly coming up with the most innovative and futuristic attractions.

Of course, the most recent demonstration of these attractions would be the building of the latest theme park, Islands of Adventure. Offering the latest in 3-d adventure, thrilling roller coasters, and immense fun, Islands of Adventure promises to be one of the busiest hot spots this summer.

Along with the new theme park, Universal Studios has been improving upon its original park. Your mission is to save the streets of New York from the invading aliens while your vehicle spins out of control. If you succeed in saving the earth you too can become one of the Men In Black. The Men In Black Alien Attack just open this past April and was inaugurated by the MIB stars Will Smith and RiRi Torni. But Universal is not the only park to keep its guest on its toes. Disney has just recently announced the construction of a new attraction at the Epcot Center. In the place of the Horizons ride will be a new space adventure. Now you don't have to be an astronaut to experience the thrill of a space shuttle launch. The new attraction will simulate a shuttle lift off as well as simulating the feel of re-entering earth! Unfortunately, the ride will be under construction till 2003. But until then you can experience the latest ride the test track. Feel the intensity of a 50-degree curve going 60 miles an hour, hairpin turns all the thrill of a test track but on this ride you're the test dummy.

Although the theme parks only attract more tourist causing traffic congestion, longer restaurant waits, and so on; the bright note is that with the growth of these theme parks comes more jobs. These parks supply a great number of students with well paying, beneficial employment.

He can’t heal your sins or save your soul but his music can get you dancing. The Reverend Horton Heat has released his latest CD, Spend A Night In The Box.

Jim Heath, guitars and vocals, Jimbo Wallace, bass, and Scott Churilla, drums, are the thriving force behind the success of the irrefutable outlaw pontiff of punkabilly. Straight out of the heart of Texas the band has seven, including the latest, CDs released and has even made a few acting appearances; including a role on “The Drew Carey Show” in 1998 and the independent film “Love and a .45.”

The Rev’s latest CD was recorded at Willie Nelson’s Pedernales Studio and produced by Butthole Surfers guitarist, Paul Leary. The CD is a mix of rock and swing thrown together in a funky combo. With searing guitar licks and growling vocals Spend A Night In The Box features several distinct tracks, such as a catchy trucker anthem, Speed Coach Driver. The Speed Racer-styled song has a toe tapping beat and infectious lyrics.

But not all of The Rev’s songs are as upbeat as the trucking song. The Girl In Blue is a heartbreak ballad straight out of a cocktail lounge, with an incredible guitar solo and “cool cat slapping bass”.

Overall, Spend A Night In The Box has a fun swing, rock, danceable, rhythm with catchy, toe tapping lyrics. Accompanied with skilled guitar and drum playing, makes for great listening.

Although the band has a rather unusual, clergy like name they do produce some blistering stage performances and musical prowess. So where did the name come from? “There used to be this guy who ran this place in Deep Ellum, Texas who used to call me Horton- my last name is Heath.”

Oddly enough, the crowd started to chant “Yeah Reverend” and eventually the bar owner who made the suggestion became a preacher.

For more information on the band and touring dates you can hit their website, www.reverendhortonheat.com or www.timebombrecordings.com.

Thousands crowded the streets of downtown Orlando for 101.1 WJRR’s Earth Day Birthday concert on April 22.

This is the seventh annual Earth Day birthday, and it has steadily grown in popularity over the years. Earth Day Birthday seven promised to be the best ever, showcasing top selling artists like Doubledrive, Full Devil Jacket, Jimmy’s Chicken Shack, Our Lady Peace, Caroline’s Spine, Three Doors Down, One Minute Silence and Sevdust.

A local stage at club Cairo also showcased Orlando’s local top bands.

In between sets, WJRR’s Taco Bob, Pat Lynch, The Razor, and Larry the cable guy added funny commentary to keep the crowd’s spirits up.

After a set, fans could walk down to the signing booth and purchase stuff to be signed by their favorite bands.

This was Doubledrive’s second appearance at an Earth Day show, and judging by the cheers from the audience as they took the stage, they have developed a large following in the span of one year.

The acoustics were much better this year than years past. Most of the bands played flawlessly and with very little audio problems.

Our Lady Peace stole the show with excellent performances of their hits, “Clumsy,” “One Man Army,” “Starseed,” and “Is anybody Home.”

Full Devil Jacket got the hard rock fans in the crowd warmed up for Sevendust, while Three Doors Down and Double Drive provided the melodic, southern rock that Florida has embraced.

This was Full Devil Jacket’s second appearance at Earth Day Birthday as well.

Last year they were playing the local stage. This time they got to play with the big boys. After going on tour with Coal Chamber and Type O Negative, FDJ was happy to return to their adopted city of Orlando.

Last year, the headliner, Godsmack rocked the streets of downtown Orlando. This time it was, Atlanta’s own, Sevendust’s job.

Sevendust’s metal sounds sent the crowd into a frenzy. Some of the crowd’s favorites were the singles “Denial” and “Waffle” off of their most recent album, Home. This was one of many awesome performances by Sevendust in Orlando over the last year.

All in all, this year’s Earth Day Birthday concert was great. This concert helps to expose many budding rock bands to the masses.

Judging by the popularity of veterans Doubledrive and Full Devil Jacket, Earth Day birthday is doing it’s job of keeping us informed of what rocks.

LEAD STORIES

A group of athletes and administrators of the traditional Turkish sport of oil wrestling (gazipasa) protested to the government in April when they discovered that an organization of gay men was planning to attend a major tournament in July near the city of Edirne to ogle. (According to a Reuters news service reporter, "Putting a hand down the opponent's trousers to get a better grip is a common tactic.

The chief justice of oil-rich Brunei ruled in March that Prince Jefri, the 46-year-old brother of the Sultan of Brunei, was entitled to an allowance of about $300,000 a month while awaiting trial on the Sultan's lawsuit that Jefri misappropriated $15 billion while in charge of the country's investments. A preliminary audit showed that playboy Jefri had bought himself $2.7 billion worth of toys in 10 years, including 17 airplanes, 2,000 cars, and a huge yacht that he named "Fis." And whose two dirhams he named "Nipple 1" and "Nipple 2.

An Urban Legend Comes to Life

Two years ago, in a bogus Internet news story, a South African hospital with a high fatality rate had discovered that a cleaning lady had been plugging her floppy floor polisher in each night by briefly unplugging an appliance that was, unknown to her, a life-support machine. In November 1999, Chicago's TV Channel 7 lost sound for 25 minutes on the final night of the crucial ratings "sweeps" week when cleaning-service personnel plugged a floor buffer into the station's master control outlet, overpowering an audio circuit and driving away 40 percent of the prime-time audience.

Government in Action

After Ivory Coast's soccer team was eliminated from the African Nations Cup in January, the country's military ruler, Gen. Robert Guei, had the team arrested and put in a military prison for two days. Addressing the players, Guei said, "I asked you to go home because I knew that you reflect a part of the African people. Next time if you play badly you will stay there for military service, until a sense of civic pride gets into your heads.

In January, a Philadelphia city-funded community organization published a pamphlet on health and safety tips for prostitutes, which recommended always getting on top, negotiating price before getting into a car, and getting the money in advance.

Also in January, a member of the Canadian Parliament released a list of recent pamphlets privately funded by the government, including "How to Communicate With the Dead," "How to Stimulate the G-spot," and "How to Understand and Enjoy an Orgasm."

Despite many anti-smoking programs sponsored by the U.S. government, a Senate subcommittee found last year that the Department of Housing and Urban Development spent $4.2 million since 1996 to help American Indians build discount cigarette stores as part of the federal community block-grant program. (In April 2000, legislation was introduced in the Senate to end the practice.)

In January, a New York state administrative law judge ruled after four hearings in three years that Krystyna Maliszewska, 51, of Brooklyn was not eligible for worker compensation because she had not provided the proper "medical evidence" that her leg had been amputated (even though voluminous hospital records were in her file). Maliszewska attended each hearing and could have shown her artificial leg and the stump that ends at her right knee but was never asked even to speak. (After a February New York Daily News story, the state quickly reopened the case.)

People With Issues

-Wynema Faye Shumate, 65, was arrested in Ladson, S.C., in March on two charges of mishandling a dead body. The case began when a 27-year-old Englishman flew to America to marry Shumate after a hot Internet romance but discovered that Shumate was not the age-30ish woman she had portrayed online. According to police, when the man asked Shumate if she had other surprises, she told him about the carved-up body in the freezer, which was that of her male former housemate, who Shumate said had died the year before of natural causes. Shumate was cleared of causing the death, but, according to the Englishman, the wedding is off.

-In a case unique among women who keep too many cats at home, a judge in Fairfax County, Va., told U.S. Navy program analyst Kristin Kierig in November that she could keep the 104 cats that share her Annandale, Va., townhouse because the house is apparently clean and the cats groomed and in good health. Kierig produced a court-ordered medical records on the cats, showed that she cleans the 101 litter boxes twice a day, and keeps the 15 water bowls and 20 food bowls stocked, and said she can recognize each cat by name that she did confess that her house might have an "odor."

Inconsistent Trojans look to play spoiler

Junior Bill Oakley said, "This is a really equal conference this year, and in the past it hasn't been that way. Now a lot of teams are going to be real close."

TSU is seventh in the TAAC with a 9-12 record, and they have seen a very up and down season, including a nine-game losing streak that has left TSU with a 20-26 record. But the Trojans have some important players that could provide UCF with some trouble.

Junior shortstop Casey Smith leads TSU with a .411 average and he is second with seven home runs and 39 RBIs. Junior infielder Jonathan Smithers (.340-8-41) and senior infielder Derrell Kirkland (.327-6-41) have been the only other consistent players in the TSU lineup.

TSU has been searching for starting pitching, and Jason Bernard (5-5, 5.11 ERA), Aaron Kirkland (2-5, 5.18), and Cale Wright (2-6, 5.78) have all filled the rotation as of late. However, none of them have found any consistency on the mound.

The Golden Knights run to the TAAC title begins this weekend, and TSU is the first team in the way. The Trojans pitching staff should be wary.

New coach a tough grader

McFarland said a good grade for a lineman on his scale is an 80 percent, although that can be a difficult grade to attain. McFarland calls himself a tough grader, adding that one good individual performance won't carry as much weight with him as five good performances.

"The lowest you can grade is still graded as a winner, but I just don't grade individuals, I grade as a group," he said. "I tell them that as an offensive line that they want to grade out great because that'll probably mean we'll be winning football games. If you have one grading 80 and the rest grading 60, we don't win football games."

"It can't just be one individual or two or three or four; it's got to be all five. Sometimes, you're going to have a game where a guy has an incredible game and grades 72-76, they can be picked up by their teammates. I grade them as individuals, but I grade them as a line and as a unit we have to perform at a certain level."
Rest season looks promising for surging Knights

With a series victory over Florida Atlantic last weekend, UCF regained first place in the Trans America Athletic Conference baseball standings. But now with only three weeks remaining in the regular season, UCF has its destiny in its own hands.

“We’re in first place and we’re not going to look back,” Coach Jay Bergman said. “Nobody’s going to catch us from here on out. We hold our own destiny and that’s the bottom line.”

And the bottom line is that UCF plays two of its final three conference series at home, so the Golden Knights have the advantage on its side. But more importantly, UCF is only seven wins shy of 40, which has always been the benchmark to receive a NCAA Regional bid.

After not playing in the NCAA Tournament the past two years, all the players and coaches have said all year long that anything less than a regional bid would be a severe disappointment.

Here is a look at what UCF has to face in the final three weeks.

Troy State
(April 29-30)
Tinker Field

UCF’s productivity from behind the plate has been critical to the team’s play this season, often making the difference between victories and defeats.

Mercer (May 4-5) Tinker Field

After finishing in a tie for third last year in the TAAC, with UCF, the Bears have had nothing go right all year. Mercer began the year with five consecutive losses, and they have managed only a 14-28 overall record, including a 6-15 mark in the TAAC.

However, they have still managed to have a few good wins, which UCF needs to avoid falling into that category since the Golden Knights only hold a one-game lead over FAU and Stetson. Mercer defeated both FAU and Stetson once during their series, and they also have beaten South Alabama, which is annually a NCAA Tournament participant.

But Mercer has not put up impressive numbers at the plate or on the mound. They are hitting only .260 as a team, and they have a 7.31 ERA.

But more

Brent Magouirk (.347-9-51) is the only starter with anything less than a solid season, and they have a 7.31 ERA.

The Bears have a problem sweeping the Bears at home.

At Campbell (May 12-13) Bales Creek, NC

The Camels have been the biggest surprise in the TAAC. After being predicted to finish ninth in the preseason poll, Campbell is currently in fourth place with a 12-9 TAAC record, but they could be in for a tough road with FAU and UCF on back-to-back weekends to end the regular season.

Campbell has not had a winning record since 1999. Brett Jarrett and Jason Page are the only pitchers with more than one win. Jarrett is 5-5 with a 6.04 ERA, Page is 4-6 with a 7.55 ERA. This is a much different team than the one that beat UCF two out of three in Macon last year and beat the Golden Knights in the first game of the TAAC Tournament.

With only a 4-15 road record, Mercer shouldn’t provide much of a challenge. However, UCF can’t afford to take the Bears lightly with such a slim lead in the conference. But UCF shouldn’t have a problem sweeping the Bears at home.

to their 27-16-1 record.

They have gotten solid pitching and good hitting, despite not having much power in the lineup with only 16 home runs. Tony Della Costa leads them in all categories with a .360 average, five home runs, and 34 RBIs. Five other starters are hitting over .300.

The Camels rotation has been decent, but the bullpen is the most stellar part of Campbell’s team. Wes Hepler (6-4, 4.07), Corey Byrd (3-4, 5.68), and Matt Klemmo (3-0, 5.79) anchor the rotation, but Byron Batson (4-1, 2.25, 2 saves) and Daniel Hall (3-2, 3.86, 6 saves) are the mainstays in the bullpen.

UCF needs to avoid a slipup late in the season against Campbell because first place in the TAAC could come down to the last weekend. Fortunately, UCF is undefeated (11-0) all-time against Campbell, and the Golden Knights will hope to continue that trend in the final weekend.

TAAC Tournament (May 17-20)
Jacksonville, FL

UCF, FAU, and Stetson have separated themselves from the pack in the TAAC regular season, and the tournament champion will be more than likely one of those three teams. If the season were to end today, UCF would face Jacksonville in the first round but with three weeks remaining anything could happen.

If UCF can avoid facing Dan Jackson (FAU's No. 1 starter) or Lenny DiNardo (Stetson’s No. 1), who both shut down the Golden Knights lineup, then the Golden Knights could be the favorite to win the tournament. After winning three in a row from 1995-97, however, UCF has slipped up the past two years and missed a NCAA Tournament bid.

If the Golden Knights reach 40 wins before the TAAC tournament, then it shouldn't have to worry about missing the NCAA tournament this year. But with all three teams battling for first and all three nearing 40 wins, pulling off a couple victories in the conference tournament should be necessary.

Nevertheless, UCF has put itself in good shape for the final stretch of the season, and it should be the favorite to win the TAAC, especially after winning the showdown with FAU last weekend on the road.

UCF TAKES 2 OF 3 AT FAU

Matt Bowser and Dustin Brisson for the better part of a year and a half had carried UCF, but on Saturday some surprising players carried the Golden Knights to sweep No. 25 FAU in a doubleheader to win the series. Junior Bill Oakley was the biggest surprise as he provided a pinch-hit, two-out, two-run single in extra innings to win the finale 12-10.

"That's been my role for the last few years, and I've had a couple situations (this year) where I've had a chance to do something," Oakley said. "It was glad to be able to finally cash in in a big series against FAU."

Zach Sutton earned his first career save in the ninth, but not without some excitement. With two outs, Matt Meath dropped a routine fly ball to put runners on second and third, but Sutton got an infield pop out to close out the victory in relief of Jason Arnold, who blew the save opportunity after allowing three runs in the fifth.

"Somebody has to make a big play because we rely so much on Bowser and Brisson to make big plays," Coach Jay Bergman said. "He (Myers) got a chance, and he came through (in a big way)."

UCF used a five-run ninth inning rally to overcome a 4-3 deficit in the opener. Matt Meath tied the game with an inside the park home run in the third, then used two times previously, fresh­man catcher Robert Sullivan made a throw anyway to first in the dirt by Jason Arnold and slapped on purpose.

UCF jumped out early with a five-run third inning against FAU starter Petersen Benjamin. Pete Gasillan hit a first-pitch home run to give UCF a 2-1 lead, and UCF settled into a groove as it reeled off six hits to force Benjamin from the game.

The Golden Knights scored two more in the fourth and one in the fifth for a comfortable 9-3 lead, but UCF starter David Rankin ran into trouble in the fifth. Rankin allowed four runs before Von David Stertzbach came in to record the final out to end the FAU rally that cut the UCF lead to 9-7.

"If there was ever a check in the season - what the coaches would call a gut check - it was right there today," Coach Jay Bergman said. "People came off the bench and did a great job, and we got somebody else to get somebody out besides Arnold to win a game."

A lot of people played a very important part in this game."

With two outs in the bottom of the ninth on Friday and the score tied 1-1, Jason Sullivan was on first and Anthony Mongelluzzo was on third for FAU. Sullivan faked toward second after a pitch in the dirt by Jason Arnold and slapped on purpose.

A designed play that has been used twice previously, fresh­man catcher Robby Von Kirk made a throw anyway to first baseman Matt Bowser, and Mongelluzzo broke toward home. A wild throw by Bowser allowed Mongelluzzo to score the winning run.

"I don't know what happened on the final play," Coach Jay Bergman said. "We knew when we went out there that we weren't going to contest him (Sullivan) running. I think Robby, as being a young man catcher, just lost his composure about what he had been told to do. It's just one of those things."

The botched play negated a comeback by UCF in the top of the ninth. Dustin Brisson led off with a single and was followed by a Rich Wallace double. With one out, Andy Johnson plated Brisson with the tying run.

However, UCF shouldn't have needed a ninth inning rally, except the Golden Knights could not lay down a bunt to advance runners into scoring position in the sixth and seventh innings. But FAU starter Dan Jackson, who threw a complete game, three-hitter with 12 strikeouts, was the main reason why UCF struggled as he took a no-hitter into the sixth inning.

"We had a chance to win offensively, and didn't cash in on them," Coach Jay Bergman said. "We should have never gotten ourselves into that particular situation (at the end of the game)."

The loss negated an outstanding performance by UCF starter Justin Pope. He allowed only one run in the first innings. Pope scattered four hits over 7 1/3 with 11 strikeouts and got himself out of a bases loaded jam in the fifth.

"We had the game where we wanted it," Bergman said. "It was a heck of a ballgame, and it's a shame that somebody had to lose."

Bergman hoped his baseball team would forget about the unfortunate 2-1 loss Friday night and concentrate on winning the first game Saturday. Sophomore shortstop Mike Myers must have heard Bergman's words loud and clear.

He responded with a game-winning grand slam with two outs in UCF's final at-bat to win the opener 8-4 over FAU. Then he had three hits and three runs scored in the second game to help give UCF the big early lead.

"Somebody has to make a big play because we rely so much on Bowser and Brisson to make big plays," Coach Jay Bergman said. "He (Myers) got a chance, and he came through (in a big way)."

Senior pitcher Casey Kennedy was sold against FAU, and continues to be a stabilizing presence in the rotation.

The Golden Knights scored two more in the fourth and one in the fifth for a comfortable 9-3 lead, but UCF starter David Rankin ran into trouble in the fifth. Rankin allowed four runs before Von David Stertzbach came in to record the final out to end the FAU rally that cut the UCF lead to 9-7.

"If there was ever a check in the season - what the coaches would call a gut check - it was right there today," Coach Jay Bergman said. "People came off the bench and did a great job, and we got somebody else to get somebody out besides Arnold to win a game."

"Somebody has to make a big play because we rely so much on Bowser and Brisson to make big plays," Coach Jay Bergman said. "He (Myers) got a chance, and he came through (in a big way)."

UCF used a five-run ninth inning rally to overcome a 4-3 deficit in the opener. Matt Meath tied the game with an RBI single. Then with two outs, Myers got a 1-2 fastball and hit it over the left field fence for the win.

UCF jumped ahead 3-0 in the second inning when it scored three unearned runs, but UCF starter Casey Kennedy made two mistakes that squandered away the lead. He allowed two-run home runs to Ryan Withey in the third, and then gave FAU a 4-3 lead when Zack Roper also hit a two-run shot in the fifth.

Kennedy, however, followed up the seventh inning rally by shutting the Owls down to secure the victory. He scattered eight hits with no walks and four strikeouts en route to his fourth complete game of the season.

"This was probably the most emotional series I've ever been in," Myers said. "I'm drained and every player on the team is drained. It was a wild one."

UCF MOVES ON TOP

The doubleheader sweep of FAU (34-12, 13-5) helped UCF (33-14, 14-4) regain first place in the Trans Atlantic Athletic Conference. The Golden Knights now hold a one-game lead over FAU and Stetson. The second place teams play a three-game series next weekend in Deland. "We're in first place and we're not going to look back," Coach Jay Bergman said. "Nobody's going to catch us from here on out. We hold our own destiny and that's the bottom line."

Doctors cleared sophomore Jeremy Frost to play nearly two weeks ago, despite the fact that his lower jaw is still wired after being hit in the face against Stetson. However, he had only played in one game before the FAU series. After pinch running in the game Friday night, he started both games of the doubleheader in right field. After struggling in the first game with a 0-for-4 performance, he responded with a 3-for-5 game in the finale with a solo home run, two runs scored, and two RBIs.

"It felt great," Frost said. "I'm still a little bit timid, and that's why I'm not hitting the outside pitch very well. I'm close (to being where I want to be)."

Svantesson takes on another challenge en route to NCAA's

David Winberg

Ann-Jeanette Svantesson had no idea what she was getting into almost two and a half years ago, when she came to Orlando to attend the University of Central Florida. "I didn't really know what to expect when I first came here," said Svantesson who hails from the little picturesque town of Kalmar in the southeastern part of Sweden. "I thought of staying a semester and try it out, but after five (semesters) I'm still here."

Svantesson, a junior, came to UCF in January 1998 and made an immediate impact, contributing with over 20 singles wins in the No. 2 and No. 3 slots on a team that won its second straight Trans America Athletic Conference title later that spring. In the championship game, Svantesson clinched the victory for the Golden Knights defeating Georgia State's Nina Janssen for the second time during the season.

"It was a nice feeling to win the TAAC during my freshman year. That is something that I will always remember," Svantesson said.

It felt so nice, Svantesson and her teammates went out and won it again last year, and won their fourth straight championship earlier this month. UCF has persevered despite coaching changes in each of Svantesson's first two years as a Golden Knight. Gail Falkenberg resigned to take a coaching job in Las Vegas, Nev. shortly before the 1999 dual match season would start. Falkenberg was replaced by her assistant coach Michael Dublin who served as the interim head coach during the spring campaign.

"It was hard for both the women and the men having only one coach and then on top of that having a new coach coming on board in the middle of the season," Svantesson said. "I think UCF did the right thing in separating the programs and hiring two coaches."

Despite the adversity the Golden Knights faced, they managed to three-peat as TAAC champions. Again, Svantesson sealed the victory giving UCF its fifth point after outlasting Susie Carlberg from Samford in three sets. The Golden Knights earned an automatic bid to the NCAA Regional Tournament where No. 3 seed Georgia downed UCF by a score of 5-0.

"I think we had a good team, but Georgia played at another level. Back then, we really had a long way to go to compete with the nation's best. Now, it looks a little bit brighter," Svantesson said.

Yes, it looks brighter. Since the hiring of Patricia Allison in June 1999, the Golden Knights have not only captured their fourth consecutive TAAC title and 14th straight victory in league play defeating Georgia State in the final, but also reached their highest ranking in school history, climbing to No. 39 in the WingspanBank.com rankings in March after knocking off No. 40 Texas Christian in Fort Worth, Texas. The Golden Knights are 19-5 on the season and 10-0 in TAAC play outscoring their conference opponents 72-5.

With the win in the TAAC, UCF earned an automatic bid for the NCAA Regional Tournament on May 12-14 for the second straight year.

"I feel that I have developed quite a bit since coach Allison took over," Svantesson said.

Svantesson is 14-6 on the season after playing primarily at No. 2 and 2-3 in the No. 1 slot after Veronica Widyadharma's dismissal from the team for violating team policies.

"A-J has taken on the role as the No. 1 player brilliantly. She accepted her responsibility with dignity," said Allison who came to UCF from the University of Oregon. "Now though, the opponents will be tougher, and she needs to develop her game even more. A-J needs to improve her slice backhand and her mental toughness to reach the next level. Can she do that? Yes, she can. She has an outstanding work ethic and is willing to learn."

Svantesson not only uses her work ethic and willingness to learn on the court, but in the classroom as well. As an Management Information Systems major, she currently holds a 3.87 GPA.

"I strive for them really hard," said Svantesson with a smile.

Men's tennis improves in first season under Cashman

David Winberg

Before the season started, first-year head tennis coach Bobby Cashman predicted his young team to finish its tough schedule around a .500, and it's competitive, very competitive, which I think," Cashman said. "We are going to play 10 or 11 nationally ranked teams and I think that is going to help us in the long run."

The Golden Knights opened up their 2001 season with a road game against Florida, currently ranked No. 2 in the nation. UCF plays the Florida State Seminole Classic, a tournament that includes hosts Florida State, Middle Tennessee State, Georgia State and Georgia Tech, all nationally ranked.

"We are going to be better team next year for sure. I'm hoping to be a little above .500, but there are no easy matches on my schedule."

Golden Knights Captures Third Track TAAC Title

Special To The Future

The University of Central Florida women's track and field team struck gold with six individual titles, two school records and one meet record en route to its third Trans America Athletic Conference championship title in four years.

Junior thrower Katara Beard (Altamonte Springs/13.00m/43'0.00) won both the shot put and hammer (37.00m/121'0.00) throws and took second in the discus (35.34m/115'11.00) and fourth in the javelin (41.37m/135'9.10) to claim the women's TAAC Athlete-of-the-Year award. Beard, who has won the shot put title in four years, said, "Next year my goal will be to break all the records and win all four of my events."

Head coach Marcia Mansur-Wentworth was honored as the women's TAAC Coach-of-the-Year for leading her team to a 24-point victory over second-place Jacksonville. Mansur-Wentworth already earned Coach-of-the-Year honors in the fall after the women's cross-country team won the conference championship. "I was just proud of the efforts of everybody on the team," Mansur-Wentworth said. "We had a goal of winning it all every year since joining the Golden Knights, scored 32 of UCF's 154 points."

"I just set my mind on being focused to do the best I could and beating everybody in front of me," Beard said. "Next year my goal will be to break all the records and win all four of my events."

Senior Corfiss Cadie (Cademur Park, Ill./Richards HS) contributed a first place in the 100-Meter Hurdles to the winning effort. Her time of 13.87 not only broke the 100mH record set earlier this year by teammate Kellie Marzetta (Gilbert, Ariz./Towa State), but it also replaced the TAAC meet record of 14.06, set in 199 by S.E. Louisiana's Nadia Lamb.

Freshman Randi Chapman (Babiana, N.C./Northern HS) and LaTricia Ferry (Mt. Pleasant, S.C./Waldo HS) left their first conference championship as the champions of the long and triple jumps and shared champions in the 4 x 100-Meter relay. Chapman jumped 5.83-Meters (19.10.5") to lay claim to the long jump title while Ferry leapt a distance of 12.02-Meters (4002.0") to win the triple jump.

Natasasha Samuels (Pensacola/Escambia HS) and Erica Garcia (Miami/Miami Sunset HS) joined Chapman and Ferry in winning the 4 x 100 relay, marking the first time in history a UCF team has won the TAAC title. Their time of 47.67 set a new school standard, breaking the previous mark of 48.73. Garcia also dropped her own school 100-Meter dash record by nearly half a second, finishing fourth in the event in 11.94 seconds.

UCF Struggles At SIRA Championship

Special To The Future

The University of Central Florida placed four crews in the final and three in the petit finals of the Southern Interscholastic Rowing Association Championship on April 16th & 17th in Oakridge, Tenn.

UCF's Varsity Lightweight 8+ of Christina DelPrino (Miami), Sudye Perez (Coral Springs), Natalie Colubia (New Port Richey), Sarah Stafford (Orlando)- Lindsay Hoffman (North Fl. Myers), Mandy Werkman (Satellite Beach), Amanda Reim (Orlando), Jill Asciano (Winter Park), and coxie Sara Miller finished a first-place second place (7:49.5) behind Washington (7:26.2) while Lacy Fox (Orlando) and Lorraine Blakely (Wyoming.con Hills, Pa.) rowed the 2- to a fourth-place finish in 9:41.9. Anna Barrett (Gaineville, Ga.), Holly Koensley (Naples), Lisa Peckey (North Palm Beach), Amanda Bland (Live Oak), and coxie Brice Saunders (Jacksonville) rowed the Freshman/Novice 8+ to a fifth place finish in 8:09.5.5 while the JV 8+ of MichaelaPEATecki (Boca Raton), Janet Poole (Apollo Beach) and coxie Margaret Capps (Satellite Beach) finished sixth in its race in 7:29.9.

UCF's F8 finished first in the petit final, giving it a seventh-place finish overall while the JV 8+ of the Peterson crew finished second in the petit final, giving them an eighth-place overall finish.

UCF is off until May 12 & 13 when it competes at the prestigious Dad Vail Regatta in Philadelphia, Pa.

UCF finishes fourth in TAAC tournament

Special To The Future

Top 10 individuals finish by Chris Calvert and Simon Saine helped the UCF men's golf team to a fourth-place finish with an 880 at the Trans America Athletic Conference Championship at the Deer Island Golf Club in Tavares, Fla.

Calvert started strong with a 1-under 71 in the first round, but slipped after a 5-over-par second round of 77. He got back among the leaders with a final round 73, finishing 5-over for 215. Saine also tied for 10th after shooting his best 54 round of the year. The senior played a consistent tournament, registering rounds of 72, 75 and 74.

"We did as well as could be expected," UCF coach Brian Craig said. "We played against some good teams who just performed remarkably well this week."

The three top teams all were ranked among Golfweek's 100 leaders. No. 34 Georgia State fired a 2-under 82 to win the tournament.

Nnakwe leave UCF basketball team

University of Central Florida head coach Kirk Speraw announced last week that forward Bech Nnakwe (Normal, Ill./Normal Community High School) has decided to leave the UCF men's basketball program.

Nnakwe, a computer science major, plans to transfer to a school closer to his home in Illinois, where he will shift his emphasis to academics.

The 6-foot-5 forward played in 31 games last season after sitting out in 98-99. Nnakwe started against Flager and Ohio and averaged 2.3 points and 2.5 rebounds per game last season.

With forwards Macro Lovett and Beronc Simms injured and out for the season last year, Nnakwe stepped up and gave the Golden Knights a much needed presence inside, filling holes in the post and occasionally shifting over to the middle, taking advantage of his broad, muscular frame to become an underused.

The redshirt freshman scored a career-high 14 points in UCF's win over Flager and grabbed a career-high nine rebounds in an overtime loss at Jacksonville State, coming off the bench as an option behind sophomore Paul Reed and seniors Roy Leath and Davin Granberry. The loss of Nnakwe next season likely means more playing time for incoming recruit Josh Bodden, a 6-foot-6 forward from Dania.

Simms and Lovett, who are both making progress from their injuries, both return to help anchor the frontline alongside Reed. Nnakwe would have been in that mix as well.

His departure opens up another Scholarship for Speraw to use during the late signing period, which ends in mid-May. Speraw has two scholarships available, but has stated that his main focus is on size, and he'll hold on to the scholarships if the opportunity to attract quality big men doesn't come about.

Redshirt freshman Bech Nnakwe provided a big body off the bench and made an impact on the boards, but elected to give up basketball and pursue academic interests closer to his Illinois home.

Troy State visits TAAC-leading Knights

After regaining first place in the Trans America Athletic Conference with a series victory at Florida Atlantic last weekend, the UCF baseball team must now avoid a letdown during the final three weeks of the season. The first challenge comes this weekend when Troy State visits Orlando. While UCF has dominated the TAAC in the past - winning four of seven conference tournaments since joining in 1993 - the Golden are looking to win its first regular season title. UCF has never been seeded first or second in the TAAC Tournament, but this weekend can begin its run toward remaining on top.

"If we do the things that we have to do as a team, then the other teams don't really make a difference," Coach Jay Bergman said. "If we hit and we pitch and we play good defense, then it really doesn't make a difference whom you're playing because you're going to win or you're going to be in the ball game."

Following a tough April stretch in the season in which UCF played Jacksonville, Stonestreet, and Florida Atlantic, the Golden Knights now face two of the four lowest seeded teams in the TAAC beginning with TSU. But this is an unfamiliar spot for the Trojans in their third season in the TAAC. TSU has lost in the TAAC championship game each of the past two years, including ending UCF's 1998 season with a comeback victory. In fact, the Trojans have had UCF's number the past two years, winning three of the four games between the two teams.

However, the Trojans have not had any stable pitching this year, and they have lost a lot of their offensive production from last year. TSU is hitting only .282 as a team, and their team ERA is 4.87.

McFarland hired to mold UCF's offensive line

Robert McFarland, the newest addition to the UCF football coaching staff, says his knowledge of Golden Knight football can be summed up by two words: big, tough linemen.

"I've known about UCF for a long time because of the fact that they were a Division I-AA school," said McFarland, who became the Golden Knights' new offensive line coach, accepting the job after serving in a similar position at Division I-AA Stephen F. Austin.

"We had some common opponents so I got to watch them on tape. It's been a while since we played them, but I just remember looking at some big, oil infielders and that was like four or five years ago."

If McFarland can make it happen, he'd like to experience a renaissance in the offensive trenches of UCF football this fall. McFarland, who previously served as an assistant at Clemson University, Notre Dame and Kent State, says he's gotten his first impression of UCF's linemen despite being on campus for less than one week.

"I've met the guys already and they all have good size and are good looking physically for the Division I-A level," McFarland said. "I'm excited about working with them. They're going to give forth the effort to be good and they want to be good."

The wooing of McFarland to UCF was an unusual trek. McFarland was visiting his mother in California on spring break when current UCF defensive coordinator Gene Chizik contacted him. Chizik, who worked with McFarland at SFA as the Lumberjacks' line coach, told his former coaching ally at SFA about a recent opening in the UCF coaching staff.

"Coach Chizik gave me a call out there and told me of former offensive line coach Paul Lounsberry had been contacted by South Carolina and was going there," McFarland said. "They asked if I'd be interested and of course I told them definitely."

"I sent in my resume and all that stuff and he called the people I had known. He talked to the coaching staff and [assistant coach] Alan Gooch, who I've known for a while, and that's how it got started."

McFarland said he has helped several of his former offensive linemen get into NFL training camps, which in turn led to a handful of former athletes landing spots on NFL rosters. Despite having to recruit against Rice, Baylor, Texas A&M and Texas, McFarland was able to land quality recruits to SFA and keep the team as a quality opponent in Division I-AA.

He said he hopes to help attract quality recruits to UCF and plant to provide a fair system for grading his offensive linemen each week. Unlike some offensive line coaches, McFarland said he plans to

UCF signs two-game pact with Marshall

Special To The Future

Two schools which moved up to Division I-A a year apart will get a chance to measure their progress against one another as UCF and Marshall have signed a contract for a two-game series beginning in Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 11, 2003. The Thundering Herd will travel to Orlando for a return game Oct. 2, 2004.

UCF, which competes as an independent, has a 23-21 record since moving up to Division I-A in 1996, including an 8-2 record against teams from the Mid-American Conference. Marshall, which finished 10th in the nation last year after defeating BYU in the Motor City Bowl, has won the Mid-American title every year since moving to I-A in 1997.

The Marshall game in 2003 gives UCF a tough road schedule with games at Virginia Tech, Syracuse, West Virginia, and Tulane already scheduled for that year.
