UCF record enrollment gaining on other universities

JENNIFER PATerson
STAFF WRITER

Preliminary statistics were released last month showing that UCF’s enrollment increased once again from 31,724 in the fall of 1999 to nearly 34,000 students enrolled this semester. Growth at UCF has been tremendous since it first opened its doors in 1968 and it isn’t scheduled to stop anytime soon.

The projected population for UCF in the year 2010 is 48,527 students. Of those, 5,000 will be pursuing a graduate degree and 400 will be in doctoral level programs.

In comparison, the University of Florida currently has 43,000 people attending its school and the University of Texas at Austin (the largest university in the nation) has a combined count of 49,009 undergraduate and graduate students.

Two schools established in the 19th century who have had many more years to accommodate and attract students to their schools.

With the increase of student population, the student union has become more crowded. UCF is expected to grow even more within the next few years.

Few other schools around the country have added so many students (as well as programs and facilities) in such a short span of time. UCF’s undergraduate and graduate enrollment has had a steady increase since its inception in 1968. Then called Florida Technological University, the school had a total of 1,948 students enroll the first year that classes were taught. Less than ten years later, 4,000 students were enrolled.

Two schools established in the 19th century who have had many more years to accommodate and attract students.

The Central Florida Blood Bank (CFBB) will be holding a blood drive Sep. 19-20 from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. The bloodmobile will be parked in front of the Student Union.

The CFBB is a non-profit organization established in 1942, that currently has over 1,75 million donors, and welcomes new donors. The CFBB provides Central Florida with more than 200,000 pints of blood to needy patients.

UCF students lined up for donations during the CFBB’s blood drive Aug. 30-31. Donors received t-shirts, food, drinks, and some discount tickets for Sea World. The CFBB’s next blood drive will also provide donors with free gifts for their donations.

"It kind of makes you feel good about yourself knowing that you’re helping other people who need it," said Sarah Knoep.

Students have the chance to help save lives by donating to the Central Florida Blood Bank. The bus is usually located in front of the student union when blood drives are held on campus.

One pint of blood can save up to five lives. Donating requires the donor to weigh a minimum of 110 pounds. Donating blood is a safe process. Frequent donors are the safest. Donors are reassured that they cannot contract AIDS from donating blood.

Relay for life increases awareness

Taylor Clark
Staff Writer

This year, about 552,200 Americans are expected to die of cancer, that is more than 1,500 people per day. With this in mind, the American Cancer Society created Relay for Life. To recruit and excite team captains and committee members for the upcoming event, Co-Chairs Karen Breakell and Richard Stone held a rally in the Arena Skybox on Aug. 30.

Relay for Life is a team event to increase awareness, raise funds for research, celebrate life for those who have survived and to remember those who have died. “It is not just about fundraising; it is about celebrating life and the progress we have made. It is about education also,” said Breakell.

For some of the purpose of the rally was to reserve a spot on the track where they will be camped out during the relay. Participants quickly snagged the best spots for the actual event.

For others it was an opportunity to sign up for committees such as account registration, cancer control, entertainment sponsorchip, volunteer recruitment and many more.

This year’s theme was announced at the rally: “Once Upon a Time.” Participants will dress in costumes revolving around storybook characters. Their tests will also be decorated accordingly.

UCF had 48 organized teams last year, 13 of which consisted of students. Breakell expects to see an increase in participation as well as total funds raised this year. “We are thinking more strategically and about how to be more efficient and how to make it fun,” she said. One strategy encourages teams beginning to raise money all year round, rather than just before event time.

Teams of 10-15 people will alternate walking the UCF track during an 18 hour period. There is $100 fee to register, which contributes to each group’s total goal of approximately $1,000. During their first year the UCF site raised $25,000 compared with last year’s total of $156,000. Breakell anticipates a 30 percent increase in funds raised for research.

For many this is an event in which they participate in annually. Some major companies such as Bell South, Mobility, Citizens Bank, and Kiwinski Club took part in the event and are expected to again this March. This is Cancer Control Chair, Candy Townsley’s fourth year partaking in Relay for Life and she’s filled with anticipation. “I look forward to this every year. It is just so much fun. I get my sons to participate with me each year too. One is even coming up from UF for this,” said Townsley.

There are four sites in the Orlando area, at which the relay will be held over a two week period. Apopka High School, Gateway High School, and UCF to be held March 23-24; Edgewater High School, West Orange High School, and tentatively Lake Mary High School will be held March 30-31. Event planners hope to eventually move into the Altamonte Springs area this spring as well.

Relay for Life is very much about community. Faculty, staff and students come together each year to contribute to this cause. The UCF libraries will participate as well as workers from the physical plant. Food will be provided by Loco’s Pub and Grill. There will also be live entertainment, games, prizes, and a dance.

This is a true interweaving of the UCF community,” said Breakell.

Students agree blood collection quick, not painful

“...waste it was going to hurt, but it doesn’t really hurt that bad,” said Knapo, “It’s quick.”

Harrissom agrees, “It doesn’t hurt. I think it’s okay.”

The collection of blood takes only five to seven minutes and the entire process, including registration, blood collection, and post donation, takes about half an hour. Those with questions should contact the CFBB at (407) 999-8485.

Pre-game rallies to bring students together

SPECIAL TO THE FUTURE

In an effort to welcome new students to campus, build school spirit and to engage new and returning students with campus life, there will be a pre-game rally Sept. 8, titled "First Knight." It will be located on the green next to the chemistry building and is part of the "Weeks of Welcome".

"We are hoping to introduce UCF students to the excitement and fan of UCF football by introducing the coaches, teams, cheerleaders, Knightro, Glycerine and the band. We want to make this a regular campus event, before every home game, encouraging students, staff and faculty to come out and support our Knights," said Charlene Sinard, Assistant Director of Student Development and Enrollment Services.

Many campus groups will be on hand to provide students with music, games, refreshments and free give-aways. Pre-game rallies will be sponsored by the Student Government Association and the Campus Activities Board Sept. 22, Oct. 13 and Nov. 10.

We feel that this is a great way to get students involved with UCF's football team and to get them motivated enough to go to those home games and show their school spirit," said Phil McDaniel, Campus Activities Board Student Director.

The premiere "First Knight" pre-game rally has been in the works for months.

"We are appreciative of every committees help and we look forward to these upcoming events. Our ultimate goal is make this pre-game rally an ongoing one and to build tradition," said Bill Faulkner, Director of Student Leadership Program.

Qualities for Mr. UCF 2000: brains, brawn and personality

ELISSA JACOB
STAFF WRITER

If you look good in formal wear, can hold your own in an interview and have a talent - then you could be Mr. UCF 2000.

The first auditions for the annual Mr. UCF Scholarship Pageant will be held Wednesday, Sept. 6 in the Key West Room (SU 218) 4:30 - 6 p.m. Guys should come prepared with a talent. This can include any type of musical instrument, monologue, singing or comedy routine. Material must be acceptable and audience friendly.

Spectacular Knights, a division of CAB, is putting on the event, which will be sponsored by SGA and CAB. Shanna Posey, the student director of Spectacular Knights will produce and direct the pageant.

Posey has high aspirations for Mr. UCF 2000. "I really want to find somebody who is willing to represent the school, and the student body - not in a political way - but I would like Mr. and Miss UCF to go with President Hitt to community events, when possible. I want people to walk away after meeting them and say, "Wow! What school are they from?" I want this person to be a student model."

A generous scholarship is included in the prize package. If the title of Mr. UCF isn't enough of an incentive, then students should consider the scholarship and the opportunity to be seen in the community and represent the school.

Posey explained that the scholarship pageant is more of a talent show for the guys. She is enlisting the help of the Imagining Modeling and Acting School in Winter Park to give tips on interviewing, how to present oneself and dressing for success. "The interview will make up 40 percent of the final score for the guys, so personality and how they handle themselves here are key."

Selection for Mr. UCF will be based on four components, which include the interview, physical fitness/swimsuit, talent and formal wear.

Any male undergraduate or graduate student at UCF with a 2.5 GPA is eligible. The main cost will be personal time and effort. The contestant, however, must provide formal wear. An informational session for contestants or those interested in participating will be Sept. 11 from 4 - 5 p.m. in the Pensacola Room (SU 222). Additional auditions will be Sept. 12 - 13 from 5 - 6 p.m. in the Key West Room (SU 218). For more information contact Shanna Posey at (407) 823-6471.

STUDENT UNION
UCF begins its first NSCS chapter

JAMES NUNEZ STAFF WRITER

"You've set yourself apart, by wanting to have a successful future," said Elizabeth Mustaine, UCF's Associate Professor of Sociology, as she spoke to the crowded room of inductees, family, and friends on Aug. 29 as UCF opened its first ever National Society of Collegiate Scholars chapter, inducting 750 students.

Ms. Mustaine praised the spirits of the students by recognizing the importance of the ceremony as the first in the history of the UCF chapter. She proceeded to challenge every student to get involved, venture down new paths, and make a difference during their college career.

Garth Jenkins, the Director of Judicial Programs at UCF, was the evening's keynote speaker. Jenkins, who received his Masters Degree in education and Ph.D at Auburn University in Alabama, began by saying, "This is a significant occasion. It is the first of many ceremonies." He also reminded the inductees of their five values: to which each member was chosen for induction: fairness, honesty, trust, respect, and responsibility. Professing the importance for each member to learn not only from books, but also from life's experiences, Dr. Jenkins said, "The degree to which you can serve is up to you."

Each student was given a NSCS pin, signifying their induction into the group and simultaneously took the oath of the society.

Mustaine, Jenkins, and Jan M. Lloyd, Associate Director of the LEAD Scholarship program, were all recognized as Distinguished Honorary Members of the Society for their dedication to teaching and aiding students by Wayne Montgomery, a representative of the NSCS's national office in Washington D.C.

Eirm Chaddon, who was officially sworn in as the UCF Chapter President during the ceremony, said that she was attracted to the Society because of the opportunity.

"It's a great experience to be part of an honor society," said Chaddon. Chaddon believes that the Society will aid members to excel not only academically, but also in their careers. She acknowledged that by putting this achievement on resumes, a member's numerous academic skills, moral values, and leadership qualities will promote their ability to perform successfully in the work place.

Summer Taylor and Sheryl Mooney, 19 year-old sophomores and new UCF chapter members, both agree that being part of the Society will enhance their opportunities. "I want to meet new people and get involved," (The award) is a definite plus to getting into graduate school," said Mooney. Furthermore, both students feel that being inducted into the Society is a personal honor. Taylor said, "I'm being recognized for studying hard, which is why I came to this university to begin with."

Chaddon also believes that the amount of members could double next year from its present 750 students. She feels that if the school continues to experience growth, the chapter will expand as well.

"If we get word of mouth out there... and people start to learn more about us and we get connections on campus with other groups and other honor organizations, I believe [the chapter] will double in size," said Chaddon.

Sexual assault awareness celebrated

ELAINE LEBLANC STAFF WRITER

UCF will be singing and dancing its way to sexual assault awareness in September during "Celebrating Survival Through the Arts." The first event will be on the west patio of the Student Union 11 a.m. -1 p.m. It will include musical performances by the Key West Ballroom, the Amy Steinberg Band and Tim Angels. Representatives from the Victim Services office and community crisis agents will provide informational pamphlets and answer questions.

UCF Victim Services, REACH Peer Education, the UCF Arts Alliance, UCF Campus Activity Board, The Valencia Dancers and the UCF Women's Studies Program sponsor the events.

"We are using the arts to draw people in. It's really a format for what we're all about," said Community Outreach Specialist Nancy Eastman.

"I think this is something people don't hear about," said REACH Peer Educator Keri Nola. "They think it doesn't happen here. It's important that people know it's here on our campus. We're doing this in front of the Student Union at lunchtime in hopes of reaching the students who may not ordinarily know about us." According to UCF Victim Services, 84 percent of rapes are committed by acquaintances. Furthermore, UCF and numerous other colleges have found that majority of sexual assault reports are filed between Sept. and Thanksgiving. "We hope that by designating September as UCF's Sexual Assault Awareness Month, we will increase awareness, and prevent some victimization," said Eastman.

Victim Services offers these tips for protecting yourself against rape:

* Know your sexual limits and communicate them firmly and directly.
* Be assertive, forceful and firm.
* Always be aware and alert.
* Listen carefully.
* Listen to your gut feelings about the people with whom you institute.
* Avoid excessive use of substances that may cloud your judgment such as drugs or alcohol.
* Don't invite someone you do not know well to your home or go to his or hers.
* Don't leave a party or social situation with someone who just met.
* Don't give mixed messages.

Other events include a discussion on hate crimes and sexual terrorism led by Mary Ann Eastep of the Criminal Justice Department, which will be held at 5 p.m. on Sept. 7 at 12 p.m. in VAB, room 105.

On Sept. 12, the Valencia Dancers will perform "A Night of Dance History." Directors Leslie Brauoso and Dr. Suzanne Salapa will perform the front of the Student Union.

In addition, REACH peer educators will perform "A Night of Dance History." Directors Leslie Brauoso and Dr. Suzanne Salapa will perform the front of the Student Union.

Victim Services also offers training Sept. 22 -23 for anyone interested in victimology.

Training includes a history of the Victims' Rights Movement and an overview of the criminal justice system. In addition, topics such as crisis intervention skills and the dynamics of both stalking and sexual assault will be covered. The cost is $5 and includes dinner and breakfast. For more information, contact Victim Services at (407) 823-2425.
Victim Services offer support to student body

ELISA JACOB STAFF WRITER

School is back in session at UCF: new classes, new people, no parking, busy schedules and increased sexual assaults.

"August through Thanksgiving, along with Spring Break, are usually the best times for sexual assault involving college students," said Nancy Eastman, a Community Outreach Specialist at the Victim Services Center at UCF.

The Victim Services Center is a small module located on Libra Drive past the UCF Police Station. It's rather hidden, but don't be fooled - those working in the small space are a huge support for UCF students, faculty and staff.

The center handles about 150 clients per year. Some cases involve only a one or two time sexual assault, while others last over a year. The majority of cases include sexual assault, relationship violence, stalking, battery and other violent crimes. Sexual assault on college campuses is something that people rarely talk about, but it is all too common, reports Victim Services.

The Victim Services Center works very closely with the UCF Police Department in cases reported to them both on and off campus. Their services are entirely free and strictly confidential. The student, staff or faculty member is never required to file a formal police report, but rather given the option of some code of conduct if a student feels uncomfortable," Gianakos said.

Gianakos and Eastman admitted that most of the cases they handle at UCF are related to sexual assault or stalking. They believe that most crimes go unreported because victims fear they are overreacting or unsure of what to do, while trying to forget the victimization ever happened. Eastman stressed that the Victim Services center also assists victims by contacting and working with professors, employers and landlords. They also help get victims counseling or follow-up medical care.

September is Sexual Assault Awareness Month and the Victim Services Center, CAB, REACH Peer Education and others will host events outside the Student Union throughout the month. Eastman hopes the events will bring some victims out of the woodwork. "At least they'll see us out there and maybe it will be enough to get something in them to come for help," she said.

Lines to purchase textbooks shorten

RUTH HEIDT STAFF WRITER

Tired of waiting in long lines that stretch into infinity just to purchase your books? A web-based company created in 1997 Best Buy Books, has geared their site specifically toward college students. This is 11-18 years old, including students and faculty. The advocates are also approached with the issue of student/teacher relations. "We do handle those cases. There's a lot of gray in that issue, but there is probably a violation of some code of conduct if a student feels uncomfortable," Gianakos said.

New pill to render men infertile

JENNIFER PATRESON STAFF WRITER

Good news for women: the role of oral contraception just may leap into the hands of men. A little-known company called Best Book Buys, has developed the first, 100 percent effective male birth control pill. It's said to be on the market in a couple of years.

The pill, which has gone through trials in Scotland, China, South America and Nigeria, works much like the female pill, it halts the production of the sex cells, making it virtually impossible for a man to father children. The pill itself is remarkable achievement consid-

School has grown by 33,000 students since its opening

The school had reached the 10,000 mark in student population. By the year 1990, there were over 20,000 students and today student population tops off at almost 35,000.

With the addition of a new bachelors program in digital media and a doctoral program in Materials Science and Engineering this year, UCF shows no signs of slowing its capacity to meet the expanding needs of the new student population. “Many people outside of Florida don’t know UCF now, but they will.,” said Dante Sampang, a Graphic Design major and full-time employee at UCF. “You can just tell it’s going to be huge.”

The following faculty members were granted tenure effective the 1999-2000 academic year:

College of Business Administration: Dr. Mary Ulrich, Dr. Mark Ulrich. College of Health and Public Affairs: Dr. Karen Dow, Dr. Debby Mitchell.

CD case stolen from campus computer lab

On August 28, a compact disc case holding about 50 compact discs was stolen from the building 29 campus computer lab. The victim said that he had been typing a paper and had placed the CD case to the left side of the computer he was working on. He got up to pick it up but never returned. It was being in one of the machines unauthorized. The TeleCard machine was missing from the Business Administration lounge.

TeleCard vending machine stolen from Business Administration lounge

An employee of International Tele Card did not give anyone permission to remove the machine and that they were willing to prosecute. The machine is a TeleCard vending machine, serial number S150, valued at $2,000. There are no suspects or evidence at this time.

Suspect arrested for burglary and multiple counts of theft

UCFPD arrested Edwin Sanchez at his home in Oviedo on Aug. 29, on warrants of burglary and multiple counts of theft. Sanchez was a suspect in a theft of copier machine money case from back Jan. 2000. Collection bags from various copier machines on campus had reflected money missing. After examination of the machines showed UCFPD that there had been no forced entry entry they quickly resorted to investigation of employees. The key check out system was investigated and found to be the problem. Sanchez had previously been questioned about being in one of the machines unauthorized.

Last week's poll involved parking on campus: "Has parking on campus improved with the addition of the new parking garage?"

Here are the results as you all see it...
1. Parking has improved two-fold with the addition of the garage. (7.4%)
2. The new garage helps a little, but certainly does not solve the problem. (3.7%)
3. It is back to nothing through the parking lots to take their space. (33.3%)
4. Parking at UCF will never improve with the university growing so rapidly. (51.9%)
5. I have no opinion on parking on campus. (3.7%)

Next week's question is: 'How do you feel about the new male birth control pill?'

SUSAN WARMBRUNN
KINGSTON NEWSPAPER

Three days after fall semester classes began at the University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, Joe Dilwood still hadn’t bought his books. He wasn’t procrastinating — he was saving up. “I don’t have the money yet,” he said.

Each semester, the sociology major struggles to pay his textbook bill. He’s never actually been able to go back to college this week, diluting his education choices on campus.

Laura Nakoneczny, the average student buying every book on his reading list, is one of the reasons the College Stores-Association is taking a good look at the high price of textbooks.

Students recently surveyed by the NACS reported putting an average of $275 per term for books — $160 for new texts and $107 for used, the NACS says. But everyone says what you spend depends on what you study.

Stefanie Ekholm, a sophomore business marketing major at CU-Springs, went book buying last week and rang up a tally of $163.71. A friend, who’s studying engineering, won’t likely get off for so little, she said.

“The more technical the course is, the bigger your book is going to be, the bigger your bill will be,” Ekholm said.

Aaron Huston, the executive director of the Colorado Student Association, said students look at textbooks and prices and believe “there’s got to be somebody making a boatload of money somewhere.”

But a breakdown of the average textbook dollar shows no one is making in huge profits. The majority of money spent — about 75 cents of that dollar — goes to the publisher, according to data compiled by the NACS and the Association of American Publishers, the national trade association.

Of that, just over 7 cents is profit. About 1.5 cents goes to the author. The college bookstore makes a profit of about 4 cents on each dollar of a new textbook.

Bookstores usually buy used textbooks back from students at about 50 percent of the price of a new book but resell them at 75 percent of a new book’s retail price, Nakoneczny said.

Book publishing profits generally “are not going to knock your socks off,” said Judith Platt, a spokeswoman for the Association of American Publishers. She estimated that profits from books — trade or textbook — range between 4 and 9 cents on the dollar.

So why does a $300-page paperback Spanish textbook cost $75? Like everything else, textbooks follow market trends.

Today, readers and teachers expect pizzazz — four-color graphics, color photos, fun font sizes, she said. More USA Today, less Wall Street Journal.

Unlike the latest John Grisham bestseller, there’s no mass production and no assumption of an eager market, Platt said.

Instead, there’s a “captive audience,” says Corye Barbour, the Washington D.C.-based legislative director of the U.S. Student Association. While Barbour acknowledges there are legitimate reasons why textbook costs are so high, “people have to have those textbooks so people take advantage of the course. Also, in the textbook market, smaller general demand breeds a greater market choice. John Grisham’s fans are always going to look for Grisham’s books, but a college language professor can have dozens of different Spanish textbooks competing to be his course material.

Faculty members also expect supplementary materials with their textbooks such as teaching editions, videos and computer software that are usually supplied to them free of charge, Platt said.

For a student like Marla Smith, who works full-time at an assembly plant and takes classes full time at Pikes Peak Community College, the size of the book bill affected her educational options.

A couple of years ago, Smith planned to go back to school. Her financial aid covered tuition but not books. “I had to postpone going to school because I couldn’t come up with $400 for my books,” she said.

Smith’s financial aid now pays for everything from tuition and fees to books, but stories like Smith’s are one of the reasons some student advocacy groups now are taking on “the textbook issue.”

Access to education decreases as educational expenses increase, Barbour said. The U.SSA has approached federal legislators to try to persuade them to consider exempting textbook sales from sales tax.

“We don’t place taxes on tuition, and books hold a similar position in higher education,” Barbour said.

Campuses across the country have come up with ways to attack the problem. Some have textbook rentals, others student swap programs.

Technology has opened alternatives to traditional textbook buying. Some online textbook sellers advertise savings of up to 40 percent. The NACS said one of those companies over such claims and settled out of court by agreeing on specific guidelines about advertising claims, said Nakoneczny of NACS.

So-called E-textbooks — books online or on CD — are also making a debut on the market.

But that’s for students of the future to think about.

For the here-and-now, this semester, Dilwood’s waiting to figure out what books he really needs for his junior year at CU-Springs.

“I don’t want to be spending the rest of my life paying back book loans,” he said. “It’s a good debt to get into because you’re getting something back, but if you don’t have to...”

White Out? Watergate?
Freshmen have their own cultural parameters

MATTHEW McGUIRE

The cell phones, Palm Pilots and CD burners that freshman are bringing to fill their dorm rooms are a far cry from the slide rules, hot plates and Hi Fi systems their professors likely packed.

For several years, Beloit College has prepared a list of some of the things that differentiate the frame of reference of entering students from that of their teachers and mentors. After all, many professors will be ten to 50 years their senior.

“We assemble this list out of a genuine concern for our first-year students, and as a reminder to the faculty of the gap that may exist between generations,” said Humanities Professor Tom McBride, who compiled the list with other professors. “Education is the best remedy for the situation, but we start out with varying points of reference and cultural touchstones.”

The following is a copy of the list:

1. Most students entering college this fall in the class of 2004, were born in 1982.
2. Grace Kelly, Elvis Presley, Karen Carpenter, and the B.B. Band, have all become dead.
3. Kurt Cobain’s death was the “day the music died.”
4. Somebody named George Bush has been on every national ticket, except one, since they were born.
5. The Kennedy tragedy was a plane crash, not an assassination.
6. Blackberry Flim has always been a “burned book.”
7. A “747” is a gun, not a record with a large hole in the center.
8. They never refer to the way the Beach Boys were talking about when they sang about a 409, and the Little Deuce Coupe.
9. They have probably never lost anything in drag racing.
10. MASH and The Muppet Show have always been in reruns.
11. Punk Rock is an activist movement, not a musical form.
12. They have always bought telephones, rather than rent them from AT&T.
13. The year they were born, AIDS was found to have killed 164 people; finding a cure for the new disease was designated a “top priority” for government-sponsored research.
14. We have always been able to reproduce DNA in the laboratory.
15. Wars begin and end quickly; peace-keeping missions go on forever.
16. We have always been able to reproduce DNA.
17. The president has always addressed the nation on the radio on Saturday.
18. We have always been able to receive television signals by direct broadcast satellite.
19. Cities have always been trying to ban the possession and sale of handguns.
20. Watergate is as relevant to their lives as the Teapot Dome scandal.
21. They have no idea that a “presidential scandal” once meant nothing more than Ronald Reagan taking President Carter’s briefing book in “Delugegate.”
22. They have never referred to Russia and China as “the Reds.”
23. Toyotas and Hondas have always been made in the United States.
24. There has always been a national holiday honoring Martin Luther King, Jr.
25. Three Mile Island is ancient history, and nuclear accidents happen in other countries.
26. Around-the-clock coverage of congress, public affairs, weather reports, and rock videos have always been available on cable.
27. Senator Phil Gramm has always been a Republican.
28. Women sailors have always been stationed on U.S. Navy ships.
29. If the year they were born, the New York Times announced that the “boom in video games,” a fad, had come to an end.
30. The Berlin Wall has always been a tourist attraction into individuals’ personal lives since they were born.
31. Bear Bryant has never coached at Alabama.
32. They have always been able to afford Calvin Klein.
33. Coors Beer has always been sold east of the Mississippi, eliminating the “boom in video games,” a fad, had come to an end.
34. They feel more danger from having sex and being in school, than from having sex and being in school.
35. They never thought of Jane Fonda as “Hanoi Jane,” nor associated her with the Talashentine Bridge.
36. They don’t know who Billy Joe was, nor wondered what he was doing on the Talashentine Bridge.
37. Woodstock is a bird or a reunion, not a cultural touchstone.
38. They don’t know who Billy Joe was, nor wondered what he was doing on the Talashentine Bridge.
39. They never dressed up for a plane flight.
40. They have always been able to reproduce DNA.
41. They never thought of Jane Fonda as “Hanoi Jane,” nor associated her with the Talashentine Bridge.
42. They feel more danger from having sex and being in school, than from having sex and being in school.
43. They never thought of Jane Fonda as “Hanoi Jane,” nor associated her with the Talashentine Bridge.
44. “Coming out” parties celebrate more than debutantes.
45. They never thought of Jane Fonda as “Hanoi Jane,” nor associated her with the Talashentine Bridge.
46. The Osmonds are talk show hosts.
47. They have never used a bottle of White Out.
48. If they vaguely remember the night the Berlin Wall fell, they are probably not sure why it was up in the first place.
49. “Spam” and “cookies” are not necessarily foods.
50. They feel more danger from having sex and being in school, than from possible nuclear war.

The year they were born, AIDS was found to have killed 164 people; finding a cure for the new disease was designated a “top priority” for government-sponsored research.

Lessons in leadership

Every now and then something happens that changes my outlook on life. Not necessarily for better or worse, just something that makes me look at myself differently. Recently something did. I am a little embarrassed, a little hurt and a little annoyed. I am embarrassed by my actions. I am hurt by the actions of a few others. I am annoyed by the combination of the two.

In the past I have always thought of myself as a capable leader and a person who doesn’t give up. However, upon recently being faced with the difficulties that often come with leadership, I am starting to think that maybe it really isn’t for me. Now I know that I shouldn’t let one instance deter me from trying to climb higher up on the leadership ladder, but I realize that there can only be so many Indians and so many chiefs.

Upon looking at my involvement and the others who chose to be leaders, I realized that this is an instance where I can step back and let others take charge. I also know that there are subtler ways to get my point across and that even though some may not agree with it, I will have supporters.

Leadership has many advantages. You always know what’s going on and you always have input into what’s going on. On the other hand, it separates you from friends who may not agree with your stand point and it brings out the worst in people who already have misconceptions of you and your ideas.

I don’t like stepping on people’s toes. I don’t like conflict, I especially don’t like being labeled as bossy or lazy. Now don’t get me wrong, if there is a cause that I feel strongly about and I feel it isn’t being handled well by those in charge, I will speak up.

But for now I realized that I need to worry about my grades and my friends and my health, and take myself and my leadership positions a little more lightly. Now I don’t plan on “throwing in the leadership towel,” but I will definitely know how to handle things better in the future.

OVER THE SUMMER I LIVED IN SUMTER HALL; I BELIEVE IT’S IN THE APOLLO SECTION. WELL, WHEREVER IT IS, I MADE SOME GOOD FRIENDS AND SOME BAD ONES. OF THE GOOD FRIENDS I MET, TWO OF THEM ARE LIVING WITH ME. NOW THIS ISN’T AT 12 A.M. WE’RE TALKING ABOUT HERE, THIS IS MORE AROUND THE TIME OF 4-6 A.M. THAT’S EARLY IN ANYONE’S BOOK.

They come home and they’re laughing and shouting and having an all around drunken good time. Which again is fine, I don’t really care when they are drunk. What bothers me is that they are loud. When I say loud, you people out there are saying ok, this guy’s a prude, he listens to classical music, plays piano and drinks a glass of prune juice every morning for breakfast. Now to get things straight, I listen to everything from Rage Against the Machine to Paul Oakenfield, I eat three inch steaks as rare as they come and I hate prune juice. When I listen to Rage or Oakenfield, I crank it way up, which is good for the first time.

But you will remember that I said John comes home drunk and with ten friends. Now this isn’t at 12 a.m. we’re talking about here, this is more around the time of 4-6 a.m. That’s early in anyone’s book.

The other, we’ll call John for the sake of conversation, is the complete opposite. John parties all night and comes home, more often than not, drunk and with ten other people. This is fine with me. I am not the party type. I don’t do drugs and I don’t drink, but I can respect other’s wishes and if that’s what John wants to do, then so be it.

GRAY MATTERS
CHRISTOPHER ZAPATER

She first caught my attention while violently passing me in her glorified economy car. She kept my attention by juggling a cell phone in one hand and a cigarette in the other, tailgating an SUV and doubling the speed limit while taking the 90 degree turn on Fairbanks by Rollins. This girl was well beyond a careless driver; this girl was a bona­ fide menace to society. No one could possibly be so obtuse to the inherent danger of such negligent, irresponsible driving. If I was king for a day, this girl, her friends and her entire family would be publicly hanged.

A few weeks ago, while working one of my many odd jobs, I was partnered with a gentleman of about 45 years old. He struck me as a dim bulb from the get­ go, so it was no surprise when he made a pitch trying to sell me on his religion.

The faith, Christianity of course. When I politely informed him that I did not attend church, he made the assumption that I had spent the last 22 years in a cave and had simply never heard the Gospel before. He proceeded to tell me about ‘the wonderful works of God.’ In my head, I wondered if standing by idly while the plague wiped out 1/3 of Europe’s population, or watching silently as HIV slowly executes 24 million Africans are considered some of God’s wonderful works.

So this is the part in this jumble of words and phrases where I offer up a piece of advice to help the world out in any way that I can. This week that advice is being courteous of other people when you are coming in from a party and it is late at night. Don’t slam doors and don’t throw bottles. If you want your friends to stay over and play Dreamcast just tell them to be quiet about it. And for God’s sake, don’t eat all my pizza. Just like any other college student I love pizza. When I woke up the next morning and got ready to go to class, the plan was pizza for breakfast (see I told you that I’m not a pudge).

To top things off they cut all my food. A couple of nights ago I had ordered a pizza. Just like any other college student I love pizza. When I woke up the next morning and got ready to go to class, the plan was pizza for breakfast (see I told you that I’m not a pudge).

would make one naturally assume that I like loud noise and sounds. But there is a limit to everything here people, and that’s what I’m trying to get at.

John and his friends come home drunk as heck and they are loud. They throw things at the walls. I hear stuff breaking and I’m wondering how much I’m going to end up paying at the end of this lease for damages in the common area.

In the continuing tradition of post-television show movies, comes Highlander: Endgame. The next chapter in everyone’s favorite immortal/apolitical epic. The movie is largely based on the successful syndicated television show "Highlander," which in its six seasons amassed millions of viewers worldwide. Likewise, the show drew its inspiration from another source as well, the movie Highlander that was made back in 1987. Highlander: Endgame draws upon both of these sources for its plotline, while ignoring the two previous movie sequels Highlander 2: The Quickening and Highlander: Final Dimension.

Needless to say, this is a good thing, for the end result is a movie that stays true to its fan following as well as serves to entertain those who were not frequent viewers of the show. This is not to say that the movie is not without its flaws; it has many. However, for a post-summer day of summer movie, it is not half bad.

Narratively, the premise behind Highlander is that there are several people on Earth that are blessed with immortality. There is a constant battle going on between immortals in which they must chop off each others heads, which by the way is the only way an immortal can truly die. Their objective is clear, to be the last immortal on Earth and claim the prize. Unfortunately, none of the movies or episodes of the show really address what this 'prize' happens to be. This is of course a huge plot hole, but nevertheless does not really subtract from the story in any way.

The plot of the movie is typical Highlander fare. However, in this outing of the series both the main characters of the movies, Connor MacLeod (Christopher Lambert), and that of the show, Duncan MacLeod (Adrian Paul), are involved in the story. The two are kinmates, both originating from the same small village in Scotland circa the fourteenth century. As far as the story itself, it basically stays true to many of the episodes of the series. At the beginning, it seems that Connor is fed up with his life as an immortal and has thus put himself in the protection of Buddhist monks along with many other immortals who feel the same way. By doing this, he can be protected by holy ground and at the same time not pose a risk to others. The plan seems to be going pretty well, at least until a gang of immortals shows up on the steps of the monastery and start to kill everything in sight. What follows is a pretty cool gun battle between the gang of immortals and monks, that’s right monks. It seems that the NRA has gotten to everyone these days, so that even monks feel the need to pack heat in the form of shotguns and placers.

Unfortunately, the gang wins and sets about tearing the place apart and killing all the immortals inside.

Meanwhile, in New York City Duncan MacLeod senses something is up and sets about on a task to find Connor. Eventually, he finds his long lost kinmate, at the same time discovering the reason of the attack on the monastery (which shouldn’t have happened in the first place considering fighting on holy land is such a major no no in the immortal world). In essence he is the leader of the band of immortals, a man by the name of Kell (Bruce Payne), is holding a grudge against Duncan MacLeod for killing his father centuries ago. Kell now has his sights set on the last thing that Connor holds dear, his kinmate Duncan MacLeod.

All in all is that the rather complicated plot of the movie, perhaps a bit too complicated for its own good, for unless one is a big fan of the series he or she will have trouble grasping what the characters are talking about at first. Not that the movie exactly requires a neurology degree to understand, but those who have seen the series will have an advantage. Focusing on the positive, the relationship between Connor and Duncan is pretty well developed, especially through the use of flashbacks. The audience gets to see a sort of chemistry between the two characters, and begins to think of them as kinmates that they are rather than just two allied acquaintances. Also, the action is very well done. A special note on the action scale goes out to costumer Donnie Yen who plays Kell’s right hand man Jin in the movie. All of these combined with some killer monks make Highlander: Endgame equal with the previous incarnations in terms of the action on camera.

Unfortunately, there are several aspects of the movie that are just not up to par with the rest. For instance, the villain of the movie has a pretty good plot surrounding him, but nevertheless is still the kind of cookie-cutter character we have seen in many movies before.

On to acting; the film is mostly a mixed bag. First and foremost, Christopher Lambert (who is French) sounds about as Scottish as Sylvester Stallone. Also, he has a tendency to overact as well as convey the wrong emotions at critical points in the movie. Additionally, don’t Lambert look a bit old to be playing this part? On the other hand, Adrian Paul does a pretty decent job with his character Duncan MacLeod. Turning to the dark side for a moment, there are a couple or really cheesy lines as well as a good dash of melodrama, but it’s not really the fault of the actors but rather that of the filmmakers themselves.

Highlander: Endgame is a well-done movie for what it is. In other words, it isn’t going to win any Oscars or raise any mammoth box office. However, the movie is a worthy follow-up to the hit series.

Student's Go Back in Time at CAB's Movie Night

Kim Lindquist

Staff Writer

Around 300 UCF students gathered at the ordinarily peaceful field surrounding the Chemistry Building on the night of August 28th. What exactly drew them out there? Very loud music, a giant movie screen, and a 20 foot-high Michael J. Fox — in other words, it was the CAB Cinema’s presentation of Back to the Future.

The crowds started arriving around 8 o’clock, driven by the promise of the movie of the Cherry Poppin’ Daddies and Smash Mouth. This promise was kept, as well as the promise of an audience for attracting a crowd. As Bobby Harris put it, “I just heard the music and was driven out here, I wanted to ‘see what was going on.’” Others knew beforehand about this event, part of the Week Of Welcome (WOW) here at UCF. They arrived, blankets in tow, looking forward to this free event.

“I like Back to the Future and I like movies outside,” said Alison Rogers when asked what made her want to come. Set up alongside the green where the movie was shown was the Central Florida Future’s newstand and CAB’s table, sponsoring the event. This was where passing moviegoers were offered free stuff like popcorn.

How exactly did the Campus Activities Board put together this cool event? John Dillon, the Campus Director for CAB, everyday tend to have to do is to call an agency. They are the ones to provide all the equipment that is used.

Once a decision was made, we can start to plan the event and decide on the movie.

The selection involves choosing a movie that is not that recent so people could concentrate more on the atmosphere than the movie itself and thus be a more outdoor-appropriate experience. Back to the Future was chosen for just that reason. Location-wise, CAB could have shown the movie in two places — the reflection pond or the field. Since the reflection pond is mostly reserved for the Homecoming presentations, the field was chosen.

CAB’s well-made decisions obviously paid off. There was no complaints heard at the event and, judging from the comments during the movie, everyone had a really great time.
"Why do people go see these popcorn pictures when they're not good? Why is the public so stupid?"

Everything happens in cycles. Hollywood especially adheres to this fact when distributing their product during the year. We all know the routine: Fit the machine comfortably between the end of the Super Bowl and Memorial Day and watch as the trailers jazzman into the consciousness of the awaiting public. Car will be awarded in "as is" condition (ARV $16,030); (3) Second Prizes - Free Maid Service for one year, awarded in the form of a check (ARV $5,040 each); (10) Third Prizes - a Lie Detector Machine (ARV $80 each). Prizes consist of only those items specifically listed as part of the prize.

6. For the names of prize winners, available after 12/22/00, send a separate, self-addressed, stamped, #10 envelope, to be received by 11/6/00, to: Come Clean With Pert Winners, P.O. Box 4426, Blair, NE 68009-4426.
Five years ago in Daytona Beach, a group of young musicians came together with nothing but a hope and a dream, forming the group Ciara. And while their road to today may have been a bumpy one, it was well worth it, especially for the listeners. Since being formed in 1995, many of the names and faces have changed, but their dreams for the music has never wavered.

Through the years the creative force behind the quartet has been Maria Byrne, the dynamic rock diva whose silvery voice and captivating charm have charmed the lyrics of their music and captivated audiences at concerts and give shows listening to their CDs.

Lloyd Thompson, from the local band Throe, a convenient perk for anyone else who has only a fraction of the band’s members. It was a whirlwind of events, but at around that same time little Ciara welcomed three new members to their line-up.

On drums, Ciara found Bobby Zack, who was the original drummer for Labita’s Secret, and his friend and bass player Sam McWilliams. Both had worked at Sun Ash Music in Orlando together and were placed to join the group. Ciara also recently welcomed Marc Gaddis on guitar, giving them almost entirely new band.

Since two of the five members lived in Orlando and the band rehersed in Daytona Beach meant long nights of commuting after work for late practices to be sure the band would be ready for their next show at the House Of Blues in mid-August.

Ciara’s first performance together went off without a hitch, and most listeners would never suspect the chaos that was rehearsed in Daytona Beach it wasn’t long before they found someone to relieve Thompson of his double duties. Central Florida Future

Dear Scopet,

I really like this guy that I've only known for a short time. I feel like I can tell him anything, but there's one thing I'm not sure about. The problem is I used to be a strip dancer. I only did it a couple of times because I couldn't afford to pay for school. I went to college. Even though I didn't do anything like take drugs or drink alcohol, I feel that he may not like me if he knew I danced. What should I do?

Tell him, or let some things be?

Dear Confused in Orlando,

This is a very difficult situation that you are in. I'm assuming that you want the relationship you hope to develop with this gentleman to be based on trust. Therefore, you should tell this gentleman about your past.

You did nothing wrong, and hiding it will only make you seem guilty of worse things. Plus, he could find out from someone else eventually and that would make you appear deceptive.

Because you must respect (if you do regret it) and that you want to always be honest with him. If he is the right guy for you, he will thank you for sharing this with him. He will also help you feel more comfortable opening up to him.

With him and will more than likely share some of his own with you. However, proceed with caution if he is the type you want to get into a long, healthy relationship. If he freaks out and can't appreciate your honest nature, then it wasn't meant to be. You then need to find someone who likes you for who you are.

Dear Chuck Shepherd,

I am a 21-year-old woman. A cousin of mine had a baby about a year ago. (Send your Weird News to Chuck Shepherd, P.O. Box 87377, Tampa, Fla. 33619 or Weird@compuserve.com, or go to www.Newseric.Word.)

I have no regrets about being a single mother because I love my child and I am doing the best I can for him. However, I am beginning to feel the pressure of being a single mother because I want to go back to school and I don't have the money to go. Is there any way I can get help?

- An August Wall Street Journal dispatch from Nurin, Sudan, reported that local "looters love their food" ("ironic cheese"), brown lunars of dairy, clumping with maggots. A "terrible, purgatory goal that burns the tongue" and "squealing worms (often) jump straight toward the eyes with ballistic precision." Though the cheese is banned by the government, it is being pushed on the plate due to its nutritional value. Some locals believe the maggot provides an authentic authentic taste. But when the maggot's lost the cheese is inedible.

On Friday, Sept. 1, I saw one of the best concerts I've been to in a long time. The show took place at the House of Blues and consisted of four bands from around the country.

Opening up the show at 5 p.m., sharp with their own brand of emotional punk was a band from Chicago called Alkaline Trio. I was extremely pleased with their set. The crowd seemed pretty bored overall, but that might have been because Alkaline Trio isn't exactly the type of music you can "go crazy to." Playing a mixture of songs off all their CDs such as "San Francisco," "Cringe," "97" and "You've Got To For To Go," as well as a few new songs, they really impressed me.

Next up was a band called Saves The Day. Before Saves The Day came on, the crowd started getting so tight that the front of the pit was just swaying back and forth. By this time, I decided to go stand on the stairs. I had seen Saves The Day once a few years ago and was not very impressed. This time, they took me by surprise. They had the crowd moving and singing along during their entire set. They look like they are about 14, but I am pretty sure they are all between 19 and 21. It's nice to see that a band that young has started to build a following.

After that was Ft. Lauderdale's A New Found Glory. I'd like to give a big thank you to Jordan (their singer) for sneaking my girlfriend and me around the back even though their guest list was full. It was much appreciated. I am from South Florida, so I used to see them play all the time down there. As of recently, they have really blown up in the music scene and they are getting very popular. I recognized a lot of the songs they played from their latest full length CD "Nothing Gold Can Stay." I will admit that they have gotten a lot better than they were two years ago. I enjoyed their set. The crowd did too, judging by the mooshing and singing along.

Finally, it was time for the headlining band, California's own Face to Face. When the curtains opened up at 7:30 p.m., all I could see was a huge banner on the back wall with two boxers; one was punching the other in the face. That was pretty much a symbol of what was to come. The crowd got really violent during their set, and I witnessed a few fights. They opened up with an old song called "You've Done Nothing" and the place went nuts. I was completely caught off guard that they opened with that. They continued on and played over an hour's worth of songs from all of their albums. They interacted great with the crowd and kept telling us how it was one of the best shows that they have ever played in Florida. Being the fourth time I've seen them play live, I was amazed at how they still captured that same energy on stage that they did when I first saw them in the summer of 1995. This was the only time I've seen them play as a three piece. They were missing their second guitarist Chad for an unknown reason. Nevertheless, Face to Face were incredible. They had an energy that most bands don't have. Their songs such as "Disappointed," "Struggle" and "It's Not Over" just to name a few, highlighted the show. Also, anyone who is a pro-Napster would've enjoyed their speech about how much they love and support Napster, (who is, by the way, supporting their tour).

They kept the audience involved for their entire set. Face to Face need to be one of my all time favorite bands, and they were excellent at this show. I had a great time, and there weren't any hands that I didn't like. I hope Face to Face keeps coming to Florida in the years to come and keep rocking the house for future audiences.

Eminem Settles Suit

Eminem and his estranged wife, Kim Mathers, have settled the $10 million suit that Kim had filed against him. Both sides had come to an agreement. Kim won physical custody of their daughter, Hailie, but both have legal custody. Eminem will still have "liberal visitation rights," Kim's attorney, Neil Rockind said. "Kim left the courthouse on Monday very pleased with what took place. She's looking forward to this opportunity to take care of her daughter." Many issues still have to be resolved including child support, spousal support and identifying the value of and dividing marital assets. Rockind added that resolving everything will be a "prolonged task." Eminem is a guy who has his hands in a lot of pots: from albums to personal appearances...and groups he represents. She has a rightful share in all of those entities...During the course of this case people are going to discover that when Eminem was nothing, nobody, Kim played a huge, significant role in helping him advance his career.

- Senate elections are here again! SGA is very excited about the upcoming elections because it will be done a little different than in the past. It has been decided to have the elections on-line. There will still be a tent outside of the Student Union, with laptops to use. But hopefully this new way of voting will make it a lot easier for all of the voters who can “log on” and vote from the comfort of their own home.

- If you are interested in running for a senate position, the dates listed above are important dates to remember.

- Petition Pickup begins September 5th, Declaration of candidacy is September 11th through the 13th. Active Campaigning begins September 18th. Candidate forum is September 18th, 2:00 p.m. and last but not least Elections take place September 25th through September 27th.

- There will also be three informational meetings on September 7th, 13th, and the 18th.

UCF offense sputters in the fourth quarter

The Golden Knights got the ball back and were given another chance to put the game away, but a dropped pass by Tavarris Davis on 2nd and 14 with just over three minutes to play eventually led to a UCF punt and the opportunity for the Yellow Jackets to mount a game winning scoring drive.

"We make a big play from Hinthaw to Clark and we fumble the ball," Kruczek said. "Game's over with; we have the ball down on their 40-yard line. We drop a pass on the last drive that's a first down. (If) we chew clock, they don't score. Gotta make plays." The game's final drive invoked memories of UCF's many other near upsets in recent history. As Godsey moved the Yellow Jackets quickly down the field, it seemed as though Golden Knight fans and players alike began to see images from the past; Auburn's Karsten Bailey scoring the game winning touchdown with just seconds left to play in 1998, Daunte Culpepper tripping and falling short of the goal line on a two point conversion try in overtime against Ole Miss in 1997, and the referee at the 1999 UCF-Georgia game who called Kenny Clark for offensive pass interference on a play that was clearly defensive pass interference and would have put the Golden Knights in position for a game-winning field goal. And just like in those games, UCF's hopes of an upset against Georgia Tech were crushed the game's final seconds, as Godsey completed a 1-yard touchdown to tight end Brian Lee on a play action pass that fooled the Golden Knight defense. That was only lead the Yellow Jackets would have the entire game. UCF got the ball back with 38 seconds to play, but Penn was intercepted and the Yellow Jackets ran out the clock.

"I was proud as hell of our defense," said Kruczek. "I thought they stepped up and did a great job against (Georgia Tech), they flew around the football and hit extremely well." Many of UCF's offensive woes were due to their lack of success at establishing a running game. The Golden Knights managed just eight yards rushing on 26 attempts, forcing Penn to have to throw the ball in a number of 3rd and down and long situations.

"We've had a few of these games in my career here," said Kruczek. "I really thought that we were going to get over the hump tonight. Their offense got very hot at the end of the ball game and our defense just got tired and our offense didn't do their part." The defensive effort was the high point of the game for UCF. The Golden Knight defensive unit was forced into being on the field for a large portion of the game, as the Golden Knight offense went 1-12 on third downs and managed only 27 plays compared to 84 for Georgia Tech. Despite this disadvantage, however, the UCF defense held the Yellow Jackets, who had rushed for over 300 yards in last season's game, to just 110 yards rushing on 43 carries.

"(Defensive coordinator Gene) Chizik had a real good plan for us to play against the run," said senior defensive tackle Josh McKibben. "Our goal was to stop that run. We knew they had two good backs, and that's we were set out to do, and I think we accomplished that." "I was proud as hell of our defense," said Kruczek. "I thought they stepped up and did a great job against (Georgia Tech), they flew around the football and hit extremely well." Men's soccer undergoes youth movement

During the 1999 season, the UCF soccer team finished up and down year by reaching the semi-finals of the Trans America Athletic Conference tournament. After spending some time ranked the nation's top 25 early in the year, the Golden Knights struggled throughout most of the season, but were on a six game winning streak when they were knocked out of the conference tournament. Now in 2000, the team looks to a younger group of players to pick up where last year's squad left off.

UCF lost four of its top five scorers to graduation last year, including striker Hauki Bivivi and co-captain Jockson Reese of "Gunnery." During the 1999 season, the UCF soccer team finished an up and down year by reaching the semi-finals of the AAC tournament. Now in 2000, the team looks to a younger group of players to pick up where last year's squad left off.

The team has come through preseason practices relatively unscathed in the injury department, suffering no major injuries that could hurt their performance in the beginning of the season. And with plenty of depth, the Golden Knights will have the luxury of rotating players in and out more often. This should help out the starters and let them rest during the many stretches this season where the team will play a number of games in the period of just a few days. Another advantage to the interchangeable lineup is that opponents will not know whom they will face until game time.

With some new faces on the team comes a possible problem with communication, but Teittinen says there is nothing to worry about in that department. "The diversity of these guys and their ability to communicate with each other is great," said Teittinen. "I don't see where we will have any problems on the field in that aspect of our game."

With the relative inexperience of the Golden Knights' lineup comes the need for leadership. Both captains will provide this young team with the leadership it needs in order to be successful. "Our responsibility is to take a leading role," said co-captain Oyvind Thorsina, a freshman midfielder. "We need to help these guys and make them comfortable here, which I think we are doing well."

One of UCF's key returning players is junior goalkeeper Antti Laitinen, who had a 1.29 goals-against average and 2.5 shutouts in 14 starts last season. One of the challenges for the team will be perfecting the communication between Laitinen and all the new players. "The communication with the goalkeeper is essential," said Teittinen. "Although it will be a challenge, I don't think it will hurt us overall."

The Golden Knights began their season with two home games in the UCF Soccer Classic last weekend, and begin conference play at Campbell University on Sept. 9. The team has the potential to improve upon last year's 12-7 record, and will attempt to win the AAC Championship and earn an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Davis thrives in first start at new position

DAVID MARSTERS
STAFF WRITER

Entering last Saturday's game against Georgia Tech, UCF junior linebacker Willie Davis hadn't played in a competitive football game in almost a year. In the second week of the 1999 season, Davis tore the triceps muscle in his left arm and was forced to sit out the remainder of the year with a medical redshirt. He had only one career start and 12 career tackles in his three years at UCF.

That all changed last Saturday. Davis returned from arm surgery to win the starting job at the strong side linebacker position in spring practices this year. But when starting middle linebacker Tito Rodriguez had to have arthroscopic knee surgery earlier this fall, the task of taking his place fell to Davis. The middle linebacker position is one of the most difficult positions to learn in football, having been sometimes referred to as the "quarterback" of the defense. As a middle linebacker, Davis would now have to call many of the team's defenses after watching how the opposing team's offense lined up, and he had only fall camp to learn his new position.

"Middle linebacker is a critical area simply because we graduated three seniors last year, had to move Tito to the middle, and now we've had to move somebody else there," said UCF Head Coach Mike Kruczek.

But Davis welcomed the challenge, despite being somewhat small (5'11", 215 pounds) for the position. Georgia Tech rushed for over 500 yards against UCF in 1999, and Davis would have to play a large part in preventing that from happening this season. And that is exactly what he did. Georgia Tech managed only 110 rushing yards on 43 carries, an average of only 2.6 yards per carry, a result of one of UCF's best defensive performances in school history.

"We went into the game this year saying that we were going to stop the running game," said Davis. "Our defense did, we went in there and stopped the running game. They had a couple of big plays, but that happens in every game."

In his first ever start at the middle linebacker position, Davis finished second on the team with 10 tackles, including two for lost yardage. He nearly doubled his UCF career stats in just one game. According to Davis, he just looked at}

are still emerging," said Cromwell. "I could potentially have three or four freshmen starting. I think that some are going to start emerging. At first they came in and were kind of just checking things out, but now they see that they can compete and maybe earn a spot."

After evaluating last season, Cromwell said that the UCF's play in non-conference games is the main area that needs improvement in order to meet their goals for this season.

"Last year there were things that I wanted to improve upon," said Cromwell. "One was our games against non-conference opponents. I think that there are some games that we didn't perform well. We need to step up and win some of those games against high ranked and non-conference opponents."

The team has not been able to do so, however, dropping its first three games of the season to non-conference opponents, Texas, Texas A&M, and Florida International. After suffering those defeats, Cromwell feels that the Golden Knights need to get back to their defensive ways of last season and improve the offensive attack.

"I am always going to pride myself on the defense of the teams that I coach," said Cromwell. "We want to continue that trend that we win championships with defense. I think the defense will be as good as it was last year and hopefully the attack will be better than it was last year."

The Golden Knights continue their non-conference schedule this week against Georgetown and Navy, and begin defense of their TAAC Championship on Sept. 13 against Florida Atlantic.

Women's soccer looks to continue TAAC dominance

Natasha Berk

To say that there is a bit of pressure on the UCF Women's Soccer team this season may be a bit of an understatement. The Golden Knights won the Trans American Athletic Conference regular season title last year with an 8-0-1 record, outscoring their opponents 26-0, and then continued their dominating ways by sweeping through the conference tournament, allowing only one goal in three games en route to the championship. And with almost every player returning from last year's squad, it comes as no surprise that the Golden Knights received 9 of 10 first-place votes in the TAAC preseason poll, being picked to repeat as conference champions.

The highlight of the 1999 season for UCF was playing in the NCAA Tournament, where they upset Furman University in the first round. "The first round of the NCAA tournament was just a great time," said senior midfielder Claire Kohake. "We just came together and we played really well as a team. Everyone was just so happy. We even had a quote that was going around, 'my team completes me', and we all got along so great. It was such great team chemistry. It was awe-inspiring even had a quote that was going around," said Cromwell. "I would like for us to be ranked first going into the TAAC tournament. Getting an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament is definitely our goal. Since the start we've talked about getting further than we did last year. That would be to get to the third round and beyond." With the loss of three seniors to graduation after last season, senior co-captain Cally Howell and Claire Kohake are looked upon to take larger leadership roles on and off the field. Howell lead the team last season with a career best 17 assists and spent the majority of the season among the nation's top 25 assist leaders, peaking at 19th. She was the only member of the team to make the All-TAAC first team last season, also being named to the NSCAA All-Southeast Region second team and the Soccerbuzz All-Southeast Region third team. Kohake died for third in the TAAC last season with 11 goals. She produced the game-winning goal that eliminated Furman from the NCAA tournament last season, and was named UCF Female Athlete-of-the-Year for the 1999-2000 athletic season.

Also looked upon to be a dominating force this year is junior striker Michelle Anderson, who took 72 shots on goal last season, the fourth most in UCF history. The defense is lead by sophomore Jackie Van Looven and Brooke Asby, with juniors Noelle Brown and Christie Martelli expected to see significant playing time. Van Looven's strength lies in her ability to keep the defense organized, while Asby is bringing a physical and versatile style that allows her to move forward and become a goal scorer.

The biggest question entering the season is who the starting goalkeeper will be. According to Cromwell, it is still a toss up. Redshirt junior Maria Banuls and sophomore Jessica Kushman split time in the first three games of the season, as they did for much of last year.

There will be eight new faces on the team this year, as the Golden Knights landed another excellent recruiting class. Cromwell likes what she has seen from them so far in the preseason, and has confidence in their abilities.

"We definitely have some talent and they..."

Women's volleyball team picked first in conference

Joe Manzo

The Women's Volleyball Team was one of the more successful teams at UCF last year, finishing 19-12 and winning the Trans America Athletic Conference regular season title with a 9-0 conference record. The Golden Knights, who lost to Florida Atlantic in the championship game of the TAAC Tournament to close out the 1999 season, began this year ranked first in the conference according to a preseason poll taken by the TAAC's ten head coaches.

Junior Piper Morgan and sophomore Beca Saldana earned All-TAAC first team honors last season. Morgan a middle blocker, was second on the team last year in kills, and is the tallest player on the squad at 6'3". Saldana set the school record for assists with 1,471 in 1999, a number which already ranks her eighth all time in career assists at UCF. Saldana has been sidelined for over two weeks with a pulled groin, however, and is expected to return for the home opener on September 8 against Florida International University. If Saldana is unable to play, freshman Jenny Frank will take her place. Frank holds the record for games (224), kills (485), assists (485), aces (307), blocks (45), and digs (671) at Coronado High School, where she was inducted into the Coronado Sports Hall of Fame. She was also named to the Colorado High School All-State volleyball team twice. Frank is just one of three talented freshmen on the team, the most notable of whom is freshman Lavey Santantala Sante, a 5'10" outside hitter from San Juan, Puerto Rico. Sante is a former co-captain of the Puerto Rican National Team. She was named to the all-star team at the Norceca Tournament in Puerto Rico in July of 1998, and was the Most Valuable Player for Academica Maria Reina High School in both her junior and senior years. Rounding out the group is outside hitter Lindsey Whalen from Kalamazoo, Michigan. Whalen, a 5'10" outside hitter, was named to the Michigan All-State team twice, and led her team to the 1999 Michigan State High School Final Four. She also earned all-conference honors for basketball twice.

Their first home game will be against Florida International University on Sept. 8 at 7:30 p.m., as part of the UCF Fall Invitational. The Golden Knights will face FAU at home on Sept. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in a rematch of last year's TAAC Championship Match. The game will be televised live on the Sunshine Network.

Georgia Tech rallies For last second victory over UCF

Senior Kenny Clark)

DAVID MARSTERS
STAFF WRITER

When UCF suffered a season ending defeat to Bowling Green at the end of the 1999 season, all thoughts were turned to Sept. 2, 2000, when the Golden Knights would begin a new season against perennial power Georgia Tech. The team’s focus during spring and fall practices was entirely on Georgia Tech, never once wavering from the game against the Yellow Jackets. It was a game that was to have symbolized so many things for a growing UCF football program: redemption for last season’s 4-7 record, a first win of the season, and getting over the proverbial hump by finally beating a big name opponent. But in the end, Georgia Tech came from behind to win 21-17 in what was just another close call in a long series of heart-breaking losses for UCF.

The game started well for the Golden Knights, taking a 10-0 lead in the second quarter on a 46-yard field goal by Javier Beorlegui and a nine-yard touchdown run by Kenny Clark. Both scoring plays were setup by Yellow Jacket fumbles; one forced by weakside linebacker Tony Hardman and the other by strongside linebacker Elliot Shorter. Despite losing the battle of total yardage and time of possession to Georgia Tech, UCF was able to get off to a good start this season, defeating New Louisiana 31-14 last weekend. Head Coach Sam Goodwin, who is entering his 19th year at Southern, is excited about getting the opportunity to play a 1-A opponent like UCF.

"Our philosophy has always been to play the best competition available," said Goodwin said after this year’s spring practices. "Coming out of spring practice I feel very good about our team. We made more progress this spring than in any other since I’ve been here.”

One of the major weaknesses for the Demons will be their passing game, which...

UCF looks to rebound against Northwestern State

DAVID MARSTERS

After losing in the final seconds of the game to Georgia Tech, the UCF football team was left searching for a way to get their first win of the 2000 season. Fortunately for the Golden Knights, their search leads them to this week’s game against clearly overmatched 1-A opponent Northwestern State.

The Demons went 4-7 last season, and lost four of their top five tacklers to graduation. NSU returns six starters on offense, including junior running back Tony Taylor, who rushed for 1,441 yards and 16 touchdowns in 1999. Sophomore linbacker Kurt Rodriguez, who recorded 111 tackles last year, including 16 for loss, will lead the defense. NSU got off to a good start this season, defeating Southern University 31-14 last weekend.

Head Coach Sam Goodwin, who is entering his 19th year at NSU, is excited about the prospect of a true uphill battle of total yardage and time of possession.

UCF’s near upset bids at the Division I-A level. Last season, he was at the center of the controversial offensive pass interference call in the 24-23 loss to Georgia. Clark, who was clearly interfered with by the defensive player on a pass to the end zone in the game’s final minute, was called for offensive pass interference, a penalty that moved the Golden Knights out of range for a game winning field goal.

“We’ve been up and down this road a thousand times,” said Clark. “We’ve got to get this win. It hurts, it hurts bad.”

But Clark can certainly not be faulted for last week’s loss to Georgia Tech. This season, the coaching staff is expecting big things from Clark, who became the fea...
