Disabled students find campus parking a major problem

MICHAEL ROBBINS  STAFF WRITER

Thousands of students, faculty and staff members commute to the University of Central Florida every day, struggling to find a parking space located near their classroom. While it would be ideal for every student to have a space located exactly where they want it, it is not plausible, so many are forced to walk across a 1,415-acre campus. While this may seem like a minor inconvenience for most, many have physical disabilities that make a simple walk across campus an arduous event. These physically disabled students are finding it more and more difficult to get around, finding fewer parking spaces for them near the buildings. UCF has 36 parking lots on campus, 33 of which are surface lots and three of which are parking garages. These are distributed across campus around the edges and near various buildings, though not near some of the key buildings located on the inner parts of the campus. These lots, according to the most recent survey conducted by Parking Services, contain an estimated 12,000 spots, 9,244 of which are available to students. While this seems like a large number, the number available to physically disabled students, faculty and staff is only 166, or about 1.4 percent of the total available spaces. “I thought disabled folks had better access to [UCF] then what they are getting,” said Jennie Spencer, a disabled student at UCF, who’s disabilities include a foot injury that makes travel on campus very uncomfortable and inconvenient. Spencer is one example of some of the disabled students that find it more and more difficult to move around campus. She finds herself forced to leave for classes an hour before they begin, though she lives ten minutes from campus. The reason: she is unable to find a space close enough to her building to get into it; so, she is forced to travel around various buildings until a space becomes available. She is not the only one who has this problem. “Even though I live five minutes from campus, I have to leave an hour in advance to get a parking space over to Classroom Building 1,” said Spencer. “Several [disabled students] line up waiting for a space to become available.”

Will your degree be enough?

ELISSA JACOB  STAFF WRITER

You don’t have to play the stock market to know that the U.S. economy been faltering lately. With companies everywhere downsizing and leaving experienced 30 to 40-year-olds jobless, the question is, where does that leave the college graduate? Finding a job after college is scary enough, without having to compete against experienced professionals that were just laid off a week earlier. For example, in December, Motorola Inc., the second largest cell phone maker proposed shrinking its payroll by 15 percent, or 22,000 employees. Of course a college degree is important, but statistics like this are enough to sober up any cocky graduate.

Some students strut away on graduation day, confident that all their hard work has been worth the time and effort put into their degree. But what if it isn’t enough? Will your degree be enough to secure a job after graduation? The answer: It depends. A recent study by the American Management Association found that 40 percent of employers prefer hiring candidates with advanced degrees to those with a bachelor’s degree. But that number of those who prefer advanced degrees can vary depending on the skill level of a job. A study conducted by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics found that only 35 percent of employers who prefer advanced degrees are willing to pay a premium of 10 percent over the lowest wage for that particular job. The remaining 65 percent of employers are willing to pay a premium of 5 percent or less.

Community comes together for Relay for Life

UCF hosted the American Cancer Society’s Relay for Life event for the fourth time on March 23. This year 100 teams participated in the 18-hour overnight event that held fundraising competitions, talent shows and contests throughout the evening to entertain volunteers and participants. The evening opened with a celebration to honor cancer survivors. Cancer patients and survivors walked the first lap for Relay for Life. The names of cancer survivors were announced, as well as their form of cancer and their years of survivorship. Candlelit luminaria bags lit the entire distance of the relay track and candles were lit during the luminaria ceremony to remember loved ones who have battled cancer. Many of the bags were decorated by elementary school children from Orlando schools and once lit, the bags burned throughout the night.

“I think people enjoy the Survivors Lap and the Luminaria Ceremony the most. It brings the idea home that we are here to remember those who fought the battle of cancer and won and those who fought the battle of cancer and lost. And why we work so hard to raise these funds,” said Elizabeth Hughes.

As April again rolls around, it’s time again for Founder’s Day. An annual event at UCF, Founder’s Day is a time for honoring students and faculty for their exceptional excellence. This will be the thirteenth annual Founder’s Day, held on April 4. The purpose of the day is to recognize excellence in teaching, research, service and students’ academic performance. The first Founder’s Day was held on April 12, 1989.

There will be an awards ceremony in the Grand Pegasus Ballroom in the Student Union followed by a reception. Both of these events are open to the UCF public. While the service awards presented last year at the ceremony will not be included this year, there are still many awards to be given, including the top one percent of each college, Faculty and Professional Advising awards, Honors in the major Thetas awards and the prestigious Pegasus Professor. While the names of the Pegasus Professor were not released as of March 22, it has been stated that there will be two winners of this award. Each college and school selects the recipient of the College Award for Excellence in Graduate and Undergraduate Teaching, and then the winners of the College Awards are selected from those winners. Other organizations on campus will also be recognized, including LEADS, the University Honors Program, the Honors in the Major Program and the University Honor Society.

Also part of the ceremony is a musical interlude by the UCF Awad and Singers, conducted by Dr. David Brunner, UCF Music Faculty and one of last year’s Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching Award recipients. The singers will be performing Yarmouth Fare, a folk song. The UCF Brass Knights, directed by G.W. Ray Pickering, UCF Music Faculty, will perform the National Anthem. As a service to students who are hearing impaired, a sign language interpreter will be present at the ceremony. Recipients of awards are notified in advance, and receive a certificate of their accomplishments. While the event lasts, UCF Madrigals will be held during this time, this year, like last year, they will not according to a decision made by Provost Whitehouse.

Cancer walkathon brings 100 teams to UCF

All teams set up campsites focusing their decorating theme on their favorite storybook. Teams coordinated their storybook themes with inspirational messages for cancer treatment and cures. Campsites were judged and awarded based on creativity.

The highlights of the evening included a pie eating contest and a bad hair day contest that took place in the early morning hours. Hair stylists from Mrs. B's hair salon dared volunteers to lop off ten or more inches of their hair to donate to children who had lost their hair to cancer treatments. A Survivor game competition chose participants through a raffle. Contestants were eliminated through contests and physical challenges, including a mystery meal contest, a penny stacking contest and a bead-threading contest.

Relay for life first began in 1985 and 15 years later the event has become the American Cancer Society's signature fundraising activity with 1.5 million participants nationwide. This year UCF's Relay for Life fundraising goal was $150,000. Among the financial contributions raised, 60 percent of funds are used locally for patient services, cancer prevention, detection and treatment. The remaining funds benefit the American Cancer Society's scholarship program grants up to $2500 to students diagnosed with cancer by the age of 21 who attend Florida colleges or universities. Summer camp programs send young children with cancer to horseback ride, swim and vacation with other young cancer patients at a cost of $1,000 per child. Cancer Family Weekend provides training to families to medically care for their children with cancer.

UCF was one of five locations in the Orlando area that host the Relay for Life event. Five locations including Apopka, Altamonte Springs, West Orange, Edgewater and Lake Mary will host a Relay for Life this month.

The first Relay for Life event at UCF hosted 14 teams in 1998. Among this year's teams, 31 teams were composed of UCF students, staff or alumni. President John Hitt took part in the relay event, along with other faculty from the office of the President, under the team name Hitt's Hikers. Their campsite was designed to resemble Treasure Island. Hitt's Hikers raised a

On March 9, Officer Lashinsky reported that he wit­nessed a vehicle stopped at a red light on Gemini Blvd. When the light turned green, the driver of the vehicle attempted to pro­ceed, but stalled four times before finally driving through the intersection. Lashinsky came up behind the vehicle and fol­lowed to the stop light at Alafaya Trail and University Blvd.

This time the driver bounced forward several times before pulling away smoothly. Lashinsky activated his emer­gency lights and pulled the car over. Upon making contact with the driver, Jonathan Cosme, Lashinsky noticed that his eyes were red, glossy and watery. His speech was slightly slurred and alcoholic impurities could be smelled on his breath. Lashinsky performed the proper tests on Cosme and claimed that Cosme admitted to smoking marijuana.

FEEL THE BURN
Officer Johnson stopped a gold four-door Lincoln for run­ning a stop sign on Gemini Blvd. Once he made contact with the driver, Johnson identified him as Russell MacDowell. Johnson reported that he could smell alcoholic impurities coming from MacDowell's breath.

Johnson went on to mention that when he asked MacDowell for his license, MacDowell barely opened his glove box so as to conceal something. Johnson asked MacDowell to exit the car so that he could conduct some field sobriety exercises on him.

Johnson noticed that MacDowell's stomach and thigh muscles were quivering as he was doing the exercises. He also noticed that MacDowell's tongue was white and bumpy.

Delta Upsilon Goes Country
Delta Upsilon fraternity packed up and left town this past weekend, leaving behind the Orlando city life. It was the fraternity's bi-annual brotherhood retreat, held at a brother's ranch in Claremont; far removed from the hectic atmosphere of a university in a major city. Members received vital alcohol responsibility education while also growing together as a brotherhood.

Delta Upsilon's national Leadership Consultant, Phil Ranford, began the retreat by putting the fraternity through Training for Intervention Procedures (T.I.P.S.). T.I.P.S. is an alcohol responsibility course designed to train members on how to handle intoxicated individ­uals; it also educates members about the potentially deadly effects of alcohol abuse.

Once their training was over, the fraternity then set out on a series of activities to learn more about one another, including several "Survivor"-themed activities. Members also enjoyed the leisure aspects of the ranch, riding horseback and holding a country barbeque. "Sometimes we get caught up in everyday activities," said Delta Upsilon Chapter President Joe Barbito. "In order to concentrate on becoming a stronger brotherhood, we get away and have fun and learn about each other through team-building exercises. This weekend was one of the best we have ever had."

Xi Man 2001 Tonight
Alpha Xi Delta sorority will be hosting its annual Xi Man pageant Wednesday, March 28 in the Student Resource Center Auditorium at 7 p.m. The event will benefit the Beta Center, a service organization ded­i­cated to helping pregnant teens and their babies. Sixteen different fra­ternity men will compete for the title, which will be judged on talent, interview, and beach wear contests.

Last year the event raised over $3000 for the Boggy Creek Gang, a camp for terminally ill children. Most of that money came from sponsor­ships and donations. The sorority hopes to double that amount this year, and is also incorporating a contest among the contestants that will raise useful items for the Beta Center, such as diapers and nonperishable foods.

Deadline

The sense of deadline meaning a time limit was originally newspaper jargon and first appears in 1920. It is an Americanism. It may derive from printing jargon referring to a guide that is placed on the press to keep the type in place. This sense appears a few years earlier.

The sense meaning a line around a person who is the prisoner or that they cross it, comes from the 1860s and prison camps during the American Civil War. The angling sense dates to 1860 or perhaps a bit earlier. These may or may not have had an influence on the newspaper term.

Dear Health Nut,

I am a little concerned about the mole on my shoulder because I am fair skinned and my grandmother had melanoma, I was just wondering if I should have it removed just to be safe. What do you think?

Sincerely,
Just Curious

Dear Just Curious,

First and foremost let me get on my soapbox for just a moment and preach a little biology. According to Dr. Gary Rogers, there is a general agreement among the medical community that atypical moles among people with a strong family history of melanoma can turn into cancer. This is what is known as Familial Atypical Mole and Melanoma (FAMM) syndrome.

Because your grandmother had melanoma, you have every right to be concerned. Some research shows that if a family member has had the disease, your risk of getting it is 20 times greater than the average person. Also, people who sunburn easily are twice as likely to develop melanoma than a person with a dark complexion is.

Since you are at high risk, you should have an annual skin examination. This will help your doctor keep an eye on your moles. It will be easier to note any changes if your doctor is seeing you once a year.

Moles that doctors consider problematic are flat or partially flat. They are generally larger than 5 millimeters in size, vary in color (from black, red, blue or white) and have irregular borders. Keep in mind though, that moles are not necessarily symmetrical.

You should have a biopsy done of any mole you think could be suspicious. The procedure, done under general anesthesia, is quick and painless and can be done right in the doctor’s office. So, I would suggest visiting your primary health care physician or a dermatologist to have it examined.

Have a physical, or mental health question? Send them to the Health Nut. The Health Nut can be reached at healthnut@ucffuture.com

What is STRIKE?

S.T.R.I.K.E. stands for Student Tobacco Reform Initiative Knowledge for Eternity. This initiative is a sister campaign to the TRUTH and SWAT programs that have been developed in Florida high schools and middle schools.

The purpose of S.T.R.I.K.E. is to increase student knowledge about the risks associated with tobacco use, not limited to cigarettes, but including smokeless tobacco, and cigar use.

The tobacco awareness initiative will hopefully encourage current users to quit risky behaviors, and prevent non-smokers/non-users from taking up the habit.

However, S.T.R.I.K.E. has a new twist, primarily targeting 18-24 year olds with tobacco awareness messages. They are the fastest growing population of tobacco users. Tobacco companies are targeting this population, so they will be consumers for life. They use marketing schemes that make tobacco use look “cool” and socially acceptable. The companies try to exploit women, by using tobacco products, especially cigarettes for weight loss, as an appetite suppressant.

The S.T.R.I.K.E. program at UCF has created some distinct goals and future direction to reach students, which include:

1. Change attitudes about tobacco use
2. Empower college students to lead community action against tobacco use
3. To reduce availability and accessibility of tobacco products on the UCF campus
4. To reduce student exposure to second hand smoke
5. To reduce the prevalence of tobacco use in social settings that encourage alcohol use
6. Involve student leaders and diverse groups in the tobacco awareness initiative

Master plan to make campus more pedestrian, less parking available for our 1 p.m. classes."

One area that is a major problem for students is the northern part of the campus, notably the Computer Science Building, the Student Union, the library, Classroom Building 1 and the Health and Public Affairs Building. Currently there is temporary parking available to that area on a dirt lot, though there’s talk about the removal of that lot for a recreational area. At the moment, however, this dirt lot provides some paved road for physically disabled students that require it, though many feel that more is needed.

"This campus is not built for handicapped, not as far as equal access is concerned. It’s hit and miss," Spencer said, referring to trying to find a parking space that does not require a physically disabled student to walk across the area.

"Students are not the only ones that are finding it difficult to find disabled parking on campus. Many members of the staff have a difficult time finding parking near their buildings. Deborah Justice, an assistant in the Office of Communications and also a student on campus, has had numerous problems. Justice has found it difficult to find spaces in front of the Communications Building, making it difficult for her to get to work.

"With the size of this campus, we should have a trolley system," said Justice, "It’s not fair to have people walk."

For Deborah, the problem has gotten to the point where she has considered calling another source of authority in, notably the Disability Council. "I want to see it improved," said Justice.

While this issue seems to be a serious problem for many of the students, the UCF administration is attempting to provide remedies for the problem, and has been working to solve it over the years. According to Janet Balanoff, Director of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action at UCF, the campus has actually been made more accessible to disabled students.

"We are way over government regulation for disabled parking," said Balanoff. "We recently made more spaces. We made those spaces a reality."

One example of this was the transformation of new disabled parking spaces near the library. About two years ago, the spaces behind the library now available were horizontal (there were only five or so). Those spaces were remodeled and made vertical, allowing for the creation of even more spaces for students. In addition, more spaces were added near the bottom of the ramp, by the loading dock of the library.

"We are trying to create an atmosphere where it is comfortable [for disabled students] based on familiarity and accessibility," said Balanoff. "We want to make more, and we try to have an ample number."

Despite attempts to create more spaces and provide more accessibility to buildings, some say it is just not possible to find a perfect space near the buildings and to have an adequate number near the buildings. With the high density of students commuting to campus, there are moments when all spaces near the buildings fill, though officials hope that that doesn’t occur often.

"There are certain times in a day where you just can’t find a space," said John Clark, an associate director of Parking Services. "It happens with all parking situations, though we have 12,000 spaces available. There isn’t always a convenient place, though."

Another hurdle that is getting in the way of making disabled parking more accessible to students with physical disabilities is the ongoing campus plan. According to Louise Friderici, Associate Director of Student Disability Services, and Parking Services, the plan is focused on making the campus more pedestrian and removing more of the parking. It will one day remove the spaces located around the Student Union and the Classroom Building.

"The master plan designs the campus to be a pedestrian area," said Friderici, who is also physically disabled and a former student of UCF. "It will remove more spaces for handicapped."

Despite these current and future problems, many of the physically disabled students continue to search for a solution to the problem of parking. Many have suggested the use of a trolley system to help take students from buildings to buildings. According to Friderici, there’s too much trouble with funding for this issue, plus past attempts at projects such as this by Student Government have proved to be unsuccessful.

Many students complain that the lack of parking and a system of transportation for them is causing them to have a difficult time getting from class to class. While administration and many offices of UCF are willing to work towards helping these students, they feel that the ultimate responsibility for disabled students transportation on campus lies in the students.

"[Students] have to be responsible for their own mobility and finding their way around campus," said Friderici.

According to the Florida Statutes, Title XXXIII, section 553.5041 part 4-C, the number of spaces allotted to students must be increased based upon "the basis of demonstrated and documented need." Therefore, if students are able to show that there is a problem with the parking and that it is detrimental to students with disabilities, UCF will be obligated to provide more parking for the students.

Another avenue available to students, if students feel that there is a need for more spaces, is through certain departments who are more than willing to help get more access. The Office of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action (823-2348) is one example, or the Student Disability Service (823-2372) as another. Students are welcome to contact these offices whenever they wish to get clarification to a problem or wish to bring a problem to the attention of administration.
Anti-Reparations ad sparks censorship at campuses

LISA B. SONG
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

An advertisement that labels as "racist" proposals to pay reparations to the descendants of African American slaves is triggering an emotional response on some of the nation's college campuses, although it didn't create a stir at the University of Chicago.

The full-page ad, titled "10 Reasons Why Reparations for Slavery is a Bad Idea — and Racist Too," contends that "there is no single group responsible for the crime of slavery" and that "reparations to African-Americans have already been paid."

The ad has appeared in 10 campus papers so far, debuting at a U. of C. biweekly student-run paper, The Chicago Maroon, in February. The ad also ran in March at the U. of C.'s competing student-run paper, The Chicago Weekly News.

In both cases, negative reaction to the ad was limited to a few phone calls and e-mails, according to editors. Weekly News editor Adam Harrington said the decision to run the ad was financial: "Something offered us money to run the ad, so we ran it," he said.

"It's understandable if the ad is offensive to some people, but it's not the equivalent of running an ad for the Ku Klux Klan," he added.

But the ad has provoked an intense reaction at other college papers that have run it, including the University of California-Davis's Daily Aggie, the University of Wisconsin at Madison's Badger Herald, Arizona State University's State Press and Brown University's Brown Daily Herald.

Heated campus protests have prompted three — Berkeley, Davis and Arizona State — to print apologies just days after running the ad.

"I was swarmed by protesters on campus earlier this month, editors of Madison's Badger Herald refused to issue an apology for the ad," Herald Editor Julie Bosman said that while the ad is controversial, the author has "a right to express it.

"We are defending our right to run the ad based on the First Amendment," Bosman said.

Publication of the ad is still pending at more than a dozen college papers, including Northwestern University's Daily Northwestern and the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign's Daily Illini, according to spokespersons at both campus newspapers.

"This happened despite the fact that a contract had been signed, we had paid for the ad," said University's City Council held hearings to make that statement is simply unconscionable," Horowitz said.

"His ads have appeared in a few as five college newspapers, including The Chicago Tribune, the Daily Illini's editor in chief, said the ad was still under consideration. He said he rejected of ads should be the exception rather than the rule.

"It's more dangerous to not be aware of extreme viewpoints," Saviskas said. "The danger in saying that you don't support someone's viewpoint in an ad implicitly means that you do endorse everything else you run...such as the 900 sex numbers in our classified ads," he said.

Mr. Toad's Wild Ride down Rouse

I started out as a couple of my roommates to, "Hit the brakes! Hit the brakes!" Unfortunately they were locked and we continued on our rollercoaster ride down Rouse. This whole trip mind you, only took about a minute but I felt like an eternity.

We eventually ended up swirling into a ditch, which flipped the car on its side.

Immediately after our roll we definitely had to get out of the car. All I could think was, "Get out of the car. Get out of the car. Get out of the car!"

I didn't feel like I had to cry since I didn't seem to be injured and neither did my roommate. I was also probably calmer because it wasn't my car and I didn't have to face the torture of telling my father.

The odd thing is, is that it was kind of a rush. It was like experiencing life. Now don't think I am morbid. It's just that it seemed like something I needed. Luckily we are okay, but I almost needed to gain faith in myself and this was a way, a dangerous don't-want-to-repeat-it way, but a way.

I looked death in the face and laughed. Ha Ha. I scoff at you grim reaper. Okay it wasn't that drastic but I have some confidence now that I may just do okay in real emergency. I can assess what needs to be done and attempt to do it. I think I may have found my thankfulness for being alive again, I will just have to try harder to remember that it can be snuffed out so quickly.

So in future emergencies I think I can handle it. As long as it isn't my car. By the way I just wanted to add to my roommate, "Hey roomie, I will still drive with you anytime, anywhere."

Lately I have been feeling really depressed. I just keep on moping around feeling sorry for myself, wondering what all of this life stuff is about. I mean you go to school to graduate and maybe go to more school only to graduate again and then find a job which you probably won't like and work for the rest of your life. You then retire and receive a small amount of money. Then you realize you have never done a lot of things you wanted to and by this time you are too old to do anything besides drink metamucil. Depressed yet?

Yeah well this is how I felt until I thought it would never end. I have been a mixture of Mr. Toad's wild ride and Dante's trip to the inferno. What's weird is that I saw something disconcerting just happened to me.

While visiting Publix with a shopping cart full of groceries I was accosted by a band of 18 or 19 year old female solicitors who had established a makeshift fort just outside the doors. A cardboard sign dangled from the table announcing their cause to passerbys. From it a parallel vantage point I could not decipher the entire message written on the sign, but I could make out the words, "South Africa."

I did not recall having heard of any recent natural disaster occurring in South Africa. It was my curiosity that piqued me. I approached the group of girls and asked them what the purpose of their collection was. They informed me that they were raising money not for some kind of charitable contribution to some worthy cause in South Africa, but for an actual trip to South Africa. A bit confused, I asked, "So you want me to donate money so you can take a trip which I could never afford? Are you at least going there to do some kind of PROBLEMS, Page A-12

Brides in these days were stolen, and many of the common wed­

actually a form of keeping the

The wedding wasn’t a humanitarian work or are you just going to lay on the beach all day?" The girls assured me that there was a philanthropic purpose to their visit. I inquired what exactly it was and one of the young ladies elaborated, "We are going to Africa to spread the word of God. There's a lot of social unrest there. I felt myself beginning to seethe, so I mumbled "good luck" and quickly disappeared into the parking lot.

There were several questions I should have asked these arrogantly naive young ladies about their mission of mercy. The first question I should have asked these girls was why they would travel half way across the world to proselytize rather than (for example) working in tandem with the Peace Corps to offer tangible goods and services to people in need to improve their quality of life. No, instead they are traveling to Africa to spread the word of God, the snake-oil for man's inherently evil nature and the cure-all for society's ills. Why? Because Americans (especially those with white skin) are smarter, more civilized, and adheres to Christianity, the religion of the enlightened - they know what is best for everybody else.

Like British colonialists so many years before them, these missionaries will arrive in South Africa, do what they came to do, then disappear into the sunset when they are done. In the same way colonialists used technological and intellectual superiority to gain the upper hand on their victims, these religious imperialists will prey on the ignorance and the poverty of the impoverished to convert them. And so what if in they render a few social norms, cultural practices and native religions extinct in the process? Never mind South Africa's long and complex history of colonial exploitation, a dash of Christianity should do the trick. After all, look at all the good Christianity has done in Ireland and Serbia, and look at the peace the Bible has brought to the Middle East throughout history and right up until today.

At the end of the 19th century the Malaleuca tree was introduced into the Everglades to dry out the wetlands, effectively laying the groundwork for the insatiable consumption of land by development which occurs today. Because they were removed from their natural habitats, Malaleucas have no natural predators to moderate their proliferation and their population has gotten out of control. Like parasites, they are stealing life giving water from the plants that are supposed to populate the Everglades. In other words, man's myopic consumption of land by development which occurs today.

NCAA has a geography all its own

TODD HARMONSON
KNIGHT-RIDER TRIBUNE

OK, it's been awhile since ninth-grade geography, and even if the memory is the first thing to go it isn't that far gone.

But Los Angeles rivals UCLA and USC play this week in Philadelphia? Pennsylvania teams Temple and Penn State face each other in Atlanta? And two squads from Washington's Beltway, Georgetown and Maryland, have to travel to Anaheim to play their first game against each other since 1993?

Someone get a map, please. Some cartographer has to be messing with college basketball.

It might not make sense, but it's the type of geography that occasionally happens in the NCAA Tournament, only this year is it more unusual than most.

"It really is kind of strange," USC forward Sam Clancy said Monday. "Both of us are playing in Philadelphia in such big games."

Before the strangeness simply is dismissed, realize it comes with a side effect.

Since USC plays Kentucky and UCLA takes on Duke on Thursday in a doubleheader from the city that inspired one great "Rocky" movie and four painful sequels, anybody wanting to see West Regional games from Arrowhead Pond of Anaheim had better find a ticket.

The locals will be on television, a KCBS2 spokesman said Monday, not the four teams playing locally.

Fans who want to see USC or UCLA might think twice about going to The Pond, since the television monitors in the building will show only the action between Maryland and Georgetown or Stanford and Cincinnati.

"It's just a fluke," said Rob Halvaks, the associate commissioner of the Big West Conference, which is the host of the West Regional. "No one could've seen this coming."

Halvaks certainly isn't concerned about the strangeness representing problems for the teams.

"It wouldn't surprise me if two Pac-10 teams are fighting it out to go to the Final Four," UCLA point guard Earl Watson said.

For that to happen, of course, USC needs to continue its hot streak and beat Kentucky and UCLA has to knock off top-ranked Duke.

"I penciled us for UCLA," USC coach Henry Bibby said. "That's what I penciled us in for. I said I want UCLA one more time."

But a game that would seem natural in Pauley Pavilion or the Sports Arena would be played in something called First Union Center.

"I'd love to play them again," USC point guard Brandon Grauvile said. "It would be kind of weird for it to happen in Philadelphia, but it would be wild."

Maybe the emotion won't be quite as strong in Anaheim when Maryland takes on Georgetown in Thursday's first game, but that's likely only because two of the East Coast's best teams have avoided each other.

Well, the implication is that Georgetown has avoided playing at Maryland's Cole Fieldhouse.

"I'm sure Washington, D.C., will not be the same between now and Thursday night," Georgetown coach Craig Esherick said. "It will be very exciting."

Washington won't be the same? Maybe there's a method to this March Madness mapping after all.

Mathew Kwok wins women's title

David Haden got a few breaks in his run to the 9-ball Recreational Championship, defeating Anthony Casello three games to two. Casello controlled most of the games, but had some costly misses on the 9-ball, opening the door for Haden. Haden made sure to convert on Casello's mistakes, making the shots when they counted.

Marcia Clark was able to hold off Heather Wilcox, winning the match two games to one in the Women's Billiards finals. The women's division began as a round robin tournament, and went to a single elimination bracket after that. Wilcox received a first-round bye, but could not survive the strong play of Clark.

South Florida rebounds against Northwestern

Brandon Wright
THE ORACLE (U-SOUTH FLORIDA)

(U-WIRE: TAMPA, Fla. - A three-run first inning and a solid start from Jeremy Fortner were the difference as the South Florida baseball team defeated Northwestern 7-2 Wednesday at Red McEwen Field.

"For the first time in recent memory, they didn't get the run in the first," coach Eddie Cardieri said. "Jeremy Fortner got us five good innings and offensively we had good at-bats."

Unlike Tuesday's discouraging loss to Army when the Bulls (11-14, 2-1 in Conference USA) sleepwalked through the first inning, committing three errors leading to a 4-0 deficit, USF jumped on the Wildcats, scoring three runs in the first and giving Fortner some breathing room.

"I probably took last night's (against Army) loss harder than I have taken any other loss since I've been coaching," Cardieri said. "My whole staff did." Found out that after the loss to Army, the Bulls were determined not to let the same thing happen against Northwestern.

"There was definitely a fire after the Army game," Fortner said. "A lot of the guys were real nervous, and we played with a lack of intensity. (Wednesday), we all came out and started things off at Northwestern in the top of the one. More importantly, Fortner worked ahead in the count and let his defense make the plays.

"I was a little nervous, but I knew the key was just throwing strikes," Fortner said. "I had great defense behind me." After Mike Eylward struck out, Rick Stegbeauer collected the first of his three hits on the night when he laced a single to right field scoring Cuccia, putting the Bulls ahead 3-0.

"We had a couple of hitting meetings (before the game)," Cuccia said. "We've been fouling balls off and swinging at bad pitches and tonight we just wanted to get good pitches to hit."

The Wildcats closed the gap in the top of the fourth inning, scoring their only run off Fortner. Joe Hiqas led off with a single and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt. Brandon Ackley then got Northwestern on the board, delivering an RBI single to make the score 3-1.

The Wildcats scored a run in the top of the sixth, but the Bulls answered with another three-run outburst in the bottom of the inning, increasing their lead to 6-2.

With Bill Nahorodny on second base, Jeremy Earle lifted an RBI single over the head of second baseman Eric Roeder. Northwestern appealed unsuccessfully, claiming Nahorodny missed third base. But as starter Ryan Bos threw the ball to third, Earle caught the Wildcats off guard and advanced to second.

Mike Macaluso doubled, moving Earle to third and after an intentional pass, Myron Leslie drew a bases-loaded walk to push in the second run of the inning. Cuccia, who went 3-for-4 with three runs driven in, then closed out the Bulls scoring in the inning with a sacrifice fly to deep center field.

In Fortner's first collegiate start, the freshman right-hander scattered six hits and walked only one. More importantly, Fortner worked ahead in the count and let his defense make the plays. "I was a little nervous, but I knew the key was just throwing strikes," Fortner said. "I had great defense behind me."

After the loss to Army, the Bulls were determined to have a great game and have been swinging the bat well."

weather and closer to home. Orlando seemed like a perfect destination. It also played well to his enjoyment of the beach. He heads down to places like Daytona and Cocoa when he gets a chance to just relax. He often went to the beach with his family back home, and grow to love it. In his mind the beaches here aren’t quite as good as in Costa Rica but they aren’t bad either.

Having an interest in math and physics, he chose industrial engineering as his major. He also has three cousins and uncles that are professionals in the field.

"I still have one more year of school left," Camacho said. "I haven’t really thought about it, but I would like to (make a career of industrial engineering) somewhere down the road."

But when the books are away, his attention turns to the tennis court. As a sophomore in 1998-99, he posted an 11-11 singles record and went 15-7 in doubles. Though the season was marred with a bout with chicken pox that kept him out nearly a month, he still was able to make an impact. On Feb. 20, 1999, he defeated Marcel van der Heide of 64th-ranked Florida in three sets 6-3, 6-7, 6-4. Camacho currently is ranked 74th.

This season has been one of the team’s success. He admires teammates like junior William Guerin. They posted an 8-0 record and went 15-7 in doubles. Though his singles record is deceiving, as he played four nationally ranked players: No. 9 Matt Amgwerd of New Mexico, No. 55 Xavier Luscan of Florida State, No. 63 Oliver Malberger of San Diego, and No. 81 Justin Natale of Brown. He did defeat Boris Babic of 65th-ranked South Florida, 6-4, 7-6. He also formed a powerful doubles tandem with fellow junior William Guerin. They posted an eight-match winning streak and beat opponents from ranked schools such as No. 55 Georgia State, No. 51 Florida State, No. 63 New Mexico State, and No. 68 Brown. Camacho came away from the season with All-TAAC Honorable Mention honors.

Over the past few years, Camacho has formed a strong bond with his doubles partner Guerin. This season, they are 7-4 together.

"We get along very well in and out of the court," Camacho said. "On the court we’re pretty tough. He’s a really hungry player and that’s the good thing about that because I’m more of a calm kind of player. He has really good hands; he’s really fast. I’m a little bit more powerful. I think that makes a good team out of us."

This season has been one of the strongest for the UCF men’s tennis team, currently 10-4. The Golden Knights have played many more ranked opponents than in past seasons, and it has resulted in the team reaching its highest ranking ever earlier in the year, #60. UCF currently is ranked 74th.

Camacho says that second-year coach Bobby Cashman has had a lot to do with the team’s success. "He’s been pushing us a lot," Camacho said of Cashman. "I think that’s been the key lately. We have a lot of talent on this team but we really need someone to be on top of us all the time. I think that’s where he’s making the difference."

Still, Camacho’s continued improvement has been an important factor in the team’s success. He admires Pete Sampras, and it shows in his game. Camacho’s strong baseline game, one-handed backhand and tall, lean body are similar characteristics of the great American tennis legend. But Camacho has had to develop his game coming to the net, something he has improved on greatly this year. He’s also come around as a person, says Cashman.

"He’s incalculably mature as a person," Cashman said. "He’s come along way. Before I got here he was late for practice and it was just a matter of being more disciplined. He’s made some really good improvement on that. I think his best tennis is actually ahead of him. He’s improved on his serve considerably and coming in and knocking the volley off."

Camacho still hopes to play tennis when his days at UCF are done. He’ll continue to play in more tournaments after the season, as well as the Davis Cup competition. But in the end, he’ll still find his way back to Costa Rica. He loves the people, the beaches, and the fun he has in his homeland. And of course, he loves the weather.

A typical Costa Rican day: clear, slightly breezy, and hot. On the court in this country or the beach in his, Federico Camacho is always right at home.
Pope brings national attention to UCF with dominant pitching

Following an opening day loss to Florida International, junior pitcher Justin Pope has won six of his last seven starts, with a no decision on Feb. 16 against Wake Forest.

With a 3-0 shutout of Jacksonville University last Saturday, the right-hander extended his streak of scoreless innings to 33.2. He has only allowed one unearned run in the last 37.2 innings.

A preseason selection to the All-TAAC team, Pope leads the team with 69 strikeouts and leads the starting pitchers with a 0.97 earned run average. He has been named the Collegiate Baseball National Pitcher of the-Week three times this season and has been named the Trans America Athletic Conference Pitcher of the-Week three times this season and has been named the Trans America Athletic Conference Pitcher of the-Week once.

His performance this season has attracted the attention of a number of Major League Baseball scouts who have been consistently attending his starts.

Pope was given the national and conference honors following a 3-1 win over No. 11 Alabama on Feb. 23. In what he called the best performance of his career, Pope pitched a complete game giving up one unearned run on seven hits and recorded a career-high 13 strikeouts.

An unselfish player, Pope said the national recognition was especially gratifying because it gives UCF national exposure.

"The honors are really nice, especially when you get national honors," Pope said. "I like getting national honors because it puts your school on the map, instead of for personal reasons."
Marzetta and Rivera break records

Senior Jennifer Kittie Marzetta and junior distance runner GeAna Rivera combined to break three school records for the UCF women’s track and field team at the PSU Relays March 23-24.

Marzetta placed third in the 100-meter hurdles in 13.99 and placed fifth in the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 1:03.31. Rivera set the school record in the 3,000-meter steeplechase with a time of 12:37.10, placing 13th.

The meet was productive for the Golden Knights, as several of the team’s seniors achieved new personal bests. Threwer Katrina Beard placed second in the second section of the shot put with a mark of 45-2. Distance runner Brinnie Harting set a time of 17:46.45 for ninth place in the 5,000-meter run. Chris Kail, a member of the men’s cross country team who competed individually, placed eighth in the 1,500-meter run with a personal best of 4:02.11.

The Golden Knights will travel to Gainesville, Fla., on Friday, March 30 to compete in the Florida Relays, and will return home on Saturday, March 31 for the Disney Showcase, to be held at the Disney World of Sports complex.

Kureishi, Teittinen named to Verizon Academic All-District team

UCF cross country and track team member Sarah Kureishi has been selected to the Verizon/CSEA Academic All-District III first team, while UCF soccer player Sami Teittinen was named to the second team.

As a member of the All-District first team, Kureishi is now eligible to be named to the national All-America team, which will be announced in several weeks.

Kureishi, a senior pre-med major, has been honored three times as the team’s scholar athlete and has been an Academic All-Trans America Athletic Conference selection for three years running. A member of the TAAC 1999 Cross Country and 1998 and 2000 Track and Field championship teams, Kureishi also holds the team’s season-best time in the 600-meter run.

The recipient of the Alumni Distinguished Student Alumni Award, Kureishi’s 8:59 grade point average places her academically among the top five percent of the entire UCF student body, and her work with the President’s Leadership Council, Golden Key International Honor Society and Volunteer UCF led to a nomination for the 2000 Howard R. Swearer Student Humanitarian Award. She is also under consideration for a Rhodes Scholarship.

Teittinen, a senior finance major, has maintained a 3.89 GPA during his career with the UCF men’s soccer team and has appeared on the Academic All-TAAC team four years in a row. Teittinen served as team captain during the 2000 season, and this year, named first-team All-TAAC for his effort at sweeper defender.

For his career, Teittinen is a three-time all-conference honoree, twice garnering first-team accolades. He has two career goals, seven career assists and 11 career points.

The UCF Women’s Golf Team, ranked 44th in the country, came in fifth place last week at the Waterlefe Invitational Tournament hosted by the University of South Florida. UCF shot a 934, 38 strokes behind tournament champion Northwestern. Fourteen teams played in the tournament.

Junior Tanja Arnold led the Golden Knights with a 229, which was the 12th best individual score in the tournament. Kim Finder, also a junior, finished tied for 15th with a 230. Juniors Olivia Hartley and Beate Fannes both finished in the top 50 by hitting 239 and 241. Junior Monica Gundersrud, who was third on the Golden Knights before the tournament, finished higher than her season average at 250, putting her in a tie for 64th place.

Draft. When one of the two pitches, it has become a big event on the national college baseball scene. Pope hasn’t allowed an earned run since Feb. 17, and has earned TAAC Pitcher of the Week honors three times and National Pitcher of the Week honors once.

Both the men’s and women’s tennis teams are nationally ranked. The women are currently ranked 69th, and have been as high as 50th. The Golden Knights are once again the favorites to win the April 19-22 TAAC Championships and move on to the NCAA Tournament. Freshman Julie Peterson has played unbelievably well in her first season, compiling a singles record of 14-1.

The men, ranked 74th, have been as high as 60th, the highest ranking ever for a Golden Knights men’s tennis team. With a solid mix of veteran leadership and young talent, the team has earned upset wins over #45 UAB, #70 Georgia State and #59 Penn State. They have a good chance at winning the TAAC Championships and advancing to tennis’ version of the Big Dance.

The women’s golf team is ranked 44th in the nation, and has been as high as 28th. All nine of the team members can be UCF’s best golfer on a given day, though Tanja Arnold and Kim Tudor have consistently led the way at tournaments. The Golden Knights won the UCF Invitational earlier this semester, and have their two biggest tournaments coming up. March 30-April 1 is the Florida State Championship in Miami Lakes, a tournament that brings together all the Florida colleges. Following that tournament, the TAAC Championship on April 9-11 in Macon, Ga. The Golden Knights hope to defend their title there, and then qualify for the NCAA Tournament, which they missed by only a few strokes last year.

If UCF does well at the TAAC Championships, they will have a good chance at qualifying for the NCAA Championships. Last year the Golden Knights came within just thirteen strokes of going to the NCAA Championships for just the second time. Only the top eleven teams advance from the qualifying round, and UCF placed fifteenth.

UCF overpowers Drake, falls to TCU

#23 TCU outplays #69 UCF
No. 23 Texas Christian University showed No. 69 UCF women's tennis team just why they are ranked so high last Saturday, beating the Golden Knights 5-2 at the UCF Tennis Complex.

With the score tied 1-1 in doubles, all eyes were set upon the No. 1 spot where UCF's Marieke Gunawan and Sonja Prokopec battled TCU's Katrin Gaber and Karolina Roubickova. TCU came back from being down 7-6 to hand the UCF duo the loss and also capture the opening point.

In singles action, TCU took control at the No. 2, 3, 5, and 6 spots. TCU's Patty Aburto coasted to a 6-2, 6-0 victory over UCF freshman Anna Westin at No. 2 and Rosa Perez beat UCF's Gunawan 6-1, 6-1 at No. 3.

At No. 5, Prokopec lost 7-5, 6-1 to Sabre Pierce and UCF senior Daniela Okal was overpowered 6-1, 6-1 by Karolina Roubickova.

No. 1 senior Ann-Jeanette Svantesen and No. 4 freshman Julie Pecastaing took their matches by default.

UCF (11-4, 4-0 Trans America Atlantic Conference) next plays Rollins College on March 31 at 11 a.m. in Winter Park, Fla.

UCF overpowers Drake, 7-0
The Golden Knights never let defending Missouri Valley Conference champion Drake have a chance last Thursday, sweeping them 7-0. After taking the doubles point to start off the match, the Golden Knights continued to dominate Drake in singles.

UCF senior Ann-Jeanette Svantesen recorded her 71st career singles win by defeating Cecily Dubanek 6-4, 6-6, 6-1 at the No. 1 position.

At No. 2, freshman Anna Westin defeated Anali de Bruyn, 6-3, 6-4, and freshman Julie Pecastaing went three sets before eliminating Cynthia Skogseboe, 6-1, 6-7, 6-4 at No. 3.

With the win, Pecastaing improves her season record to an impressive 13-1.

Seniors Sonja Prokopec and Daniela Okal earned their 70th and 73rd career wins respectively, as Prokopec beat Rajasee Kuruvilla, 6-3, 6-3 at No. 4, and Okal beat Jennifer Saluri, 6-3, 6-3 at No. 5.

At No. 6, freshman Amira Samara convincingly beat Marie Maisil, 6-2, 6-1. This highlighted Samara's first appearance as a Golden Knight in the dual-match season.
Second game of doubleheader had as many hit batters as runs was a different story, as Jacksonville scored a run in the top of the seventh inning to pull out a 5-2 victory.

The Dolphins scored runs in the first and second innings off Golden Knight starter Jason Arnold, who pitched a complete game but took his first loss of the season. UCF countered with a run in the third inning, as a Myers groundout scored first baseman Bill Oakley, who had reached base on an error by Weed.

The Golden Knights tied the game at 2 in the fifth inning, but used a very bizarre process in doing so. JU starter Josh Daws hit Graham to begin the inning, and was removed from the game after getting UCF's Mike Fox to ground out. Casey Shumaker relieved Daws, and started well by getting Myers to pop out to the catcher.

Then things got weird.

Shumaker hit both Kurella and Andy Johnson, loading the bases for Ehmanberger. But Ehmanberger never got a chance to do any damage with his bat, as Shumaker walked him to force in the tying run.

In the top of the seventh, Arnold allowed a double to JU's Chris Reier, who then scored what would be the game-winning run on a sacrifice fly by Myers. "It was kind of a screwy game," Bergman said. "But you can't win many games with one hit. That's the bottom line. Jacksonville's a very good team."

They've got a lot of left-handed batters in the lineup, they're very aggressive batters and they play hard. You've got to give Jacksonville credit.

With the split, UCF's record fell to 24-26, including a 3-2 mark in TAAC play.

UCF picks up mid-week wins against Vermont, B-CC

The Golden Knights also won two other games last week, picking up mid-week victories over Vermont and Bethune-Cookman.

The senior third baseman went 4-for-5 with two doubles, three runs and two RBIs for the Golden Knights, hitting a home run against B-CC and dropping the finale 11-9.

Against B-CC, freshman starting pitcher Burt Clark allowed only two runs in six innings, improving his record to 4-0. UCF won 7-2. Ehmanberger had a hot bat once again for the Golden Knights, hitting a home run and driving in two runs.

Speed kills

UCF has been on a mission on the basepaths this season, leading the TAAC with 75 stolen bases in just 88 attempts. Mike Myers leads the way with 20 stolen bases in 21 attempts, followed by Jeremy Feast with 15 and Jason Graham with 13. Right fielder Wayne Summers has 10 swipes, and Jeremy Kurella is about to reach double-digits with nine.

"I think it's helped us a lot," Bergman said.

Around the TAAC

After Saturday's games, UCF is in fourth place in the TAAC standings with a 3-2 conference record. Stetson leads the way at 6-0, while Jacksonville is second at 7-1. Campbell is a half game ahead of UCF with a 4-2 mark.

Pitcher of the Week: Chad Ehmanberger

The senior third baseman went 4-fo-5 against Vermont, had a home run against B-CC, drove in the winning run in the first game against JU and walked to force in the tying run against JU in the second game of the doubleheader.

Hitter of the Week: Chad Ehmanberger

Golden Knights serve Rattlers with a loss

The UCF men’s tennis team continued to build on an already strong season, downing state rival Florida A&M 5-2 last Saturday afternoon.

The match started out well for the Golden Knights, sweeping the entire doubles competition, 3-0. The top-seeded team of Federico Camacho and William Guerin took down the FAMU team of Isaac Yarrell and Kamau Murray 8-3. The freshmen team of Gabriel Cashman and Catalin Bradu, seeded second, easily took down the Rattlers Jones brothers, Brandon and Justin, 8-2.

Third seeds Augusto Sanabria and Johan Westin rounded out the victory against Kareem Cashman and Bobby Cashman, 8-6. "Federico's been pretty consistent," UCF Head Coach Bobby Cashman said. "Gabriel played a good match today. I'm happy Augusto won today at five. I was really looking for some production down at five and six."

The Rattlers did win two matches. Yarrell beat second seeded Guerin in a hard fought match, 2-6, 6-4, 1-0 (10-8). No. 6 Westin retired with a sore back, losing to Wadawu 6-4, 6-2, 2-1.

"I thought we played fairly well in doubles," Cashman said. "Singles was OK in certain spots, but I feel we could have played a little bit better. But it was a good effort.

The Golden Knights, ranked 74th in the nation, improved their record to 10-4, 3-1 in TAAC conference play. FAMU fell to 14-11.

Records improve

While UCF’s overall record remains very good, so too do the player’s individual records. Bradu and Guerin are tied for the team lead at 10-4. Strangburg is 9-3, and Camacho is 8-5. Sanabria improved to 6-4, while Westin dropped to 4-3.

In doubles, the team of Camacho and Guerin rose to 7-4, while the other two teams of Strangburg/Bradu and Sanabria/Westin each debuted at 1-0.

Westin ailing

Junior Johan Westin continues to suffer from a strained muscle in his back. The injury has bothered him all season, but he still played doubles and singles against FAMU.

Camacho showed heart again this week, beating the top-seeded Sanabria/Westin team of Isaac Yarrell and William Guerin 6-0.

"I'm happy Augusto won today," Cashman said. "And the guys, they know that. They have one more week to step up and stay focused. Then a little break."

Tough stretch

After a tough trip up in Colorado, FAMU marked something of a break for the Golden Knights before another rough stretch in their schedule. Starting Thursday, UCF plays a strong four of strong teams to close the regular season.

The gauntlet begins with recently-ranked Depaul at home before going on the road to face 73rd-ranked Florida Atlantic, Division II #12 Rollins and 46th-ranked South Florida. This will be followed a week later by the TAAC Tournament, where UCF will vie for a berth in the NCAA Tournament.

"This week is a big week," Cashman said. "And the guys, they know that. They have one more week to step up and stay focused. Then a little break."

Around the TAAC

The TAAC has three teams ranked in the latest WingspanBank.com Collegiate Tennis Rankings. Florida Atlantic and Stetson are tied for 73rd, while UCF is right behind at 87th.

UCF splits bizarre doubleheader

DAVID MARSTERS
STAFF WRITER

The UCF baseball team can’t seem to play a normal doubleheader.

One week after playing a marathon doubleheader against FAU that featured two extra-inning games, the #11 Golden Knights matched up with Jacksonville last Saturday for a two-night affair at Jay Bergman Field.

The first game went rather smoothly for UCF, as junior starting pitcher Justin Pope (6-1) threw a complete game shutout that took only one hour and 40 minutes.

The Golden Knights won 3-0 over JU, breaking the Trans America Athletic Conference opponent’s 10-game win streak.

Pope was not as dominating as he has been of late, allowing baserunners in five of the seven innings, but pitched his way out of trouble each time. In the sixth inning, with UCF up 3-0, Pope allowed consecutive singles to JU’s B.J. Ward and Phil Nover and Nover then advanced on a wild pitch, putting runners on second and third with no outs. But Pope then proceeded to strike out Chad Oliva, Scott Biernacki and Chad Hausman in succession, ending the threat.

“He did great,” UCF Head Coach Jay Bergman said of Pope. “He shut them down. And really he did not have good stuff. But he just battles you so hard, and that’s what happened. He still pitched his way out, particularly in the sixth inning when they had runners on second and third. He struck the side out and that was a big part of the game right there.

The Golden Knights opened the scoring in the bottom of the first inning when center fielder Mike Myers came home on double-play ground ball by third baseman Chad Echevarria. UCF tallied two more runs in the fifth, when a single by catcher Jeremy Frost plated Myers and shortstop Jeremy Karelia.

Kurella finished the game 3-for-5, and left fielder Jason Graham went 2-for-3 for UCF.

The second game, however, was a differernt story, as the UCF baseball team congragulated each other after beating Jacksonville 3-0 in the first game of Saturday’s doubleheader.

Tennis court serves as home away from home for Camacho

It was a typical Florida day: clear, slightly breezy, and hot. UCF tennis player Federico Camacho is right at home.

The 6-foot-1 senior tossed the yellow tennis ball up toward the bright, scorching sun and swatted a blistering serve over the net. After a few exchanges of rounds, the Golden Knight hit a backhand to the corner that left his scrambling opponent to make a futile lounge for a ball that was always in tennis. He learned the game taking lessons from his cousin, Rodolfo Camacho, as the rowdy Knights have cheered on the #11 Golden Knights athletic teams are playing right now. There are four UCF sports teams in season right now that are nationally ranked. That is certainly more than can be said for the fall sports.

The UCF baseball team is ranked 11th in the country, and could crack into the Top 10 at some point this season. This may be the best Golden Knight baseball team ever, and it could be the year that Head Coach Jay Bergman finally takes a UCF team to the College World Series. Starting pitchers Justin Pope and Jason Arnold are receiving constant attention from professional scouts, and both could go in the first five rounds of this year’s MLB Draft.

In case you missed it...

As the end of the spring semester nears, many UCF fans may think that Golden Knight athletics are done for the year. Basketball season is over, and football season doesn’t start until September. It’s the dog days of the college sports year, right?

Wrong. Here at UCF, many of the best Golden Knights athletic teams are playing right now. There are four UCF sports teams in season right now that are nationally ranked. That is certainly more than can be said for the fall sports.

The rowdy Knights have cheered on UCF and bumbled opponents at Jay Bergman Field all season.
As Charles Bukowski so wisely stated some time ago, next to "love," "genius" may be the most overused word in the English language. So it goes almost without saying that to label modern painter Jackson Pollock as a genius would be to only superficially dismiss the man and his renowned, infamous art. With an amount of naivete, it could be harmlessly stated without knowing what compelled an artist to create such baffling works that, to this day, provoke raging debates over what the true nature of artistic creation and individual expressionism should end up being manifested as. Forty-four years after his death as a result of his own self-destruction, "the Dripper" is either deified as the inarticulate, uneducated purveyor of pure form or as the notorious drunk from Greenwich Village who settled in Long Island in order to splash acrylic across a canvas that came about looking like baked macaroni.

In Pollock, actor (and now, director) Ed Harris' moving tribute about the painter, we don't come to bare witness another side to the what-is-art argument. As irony would have it, art in this instance doesn't really matter. Whether you believe in abstract expressionism or find is as important as grass growing, the film is not at all concerned with that. It reflects the United States during era of WWII urbane industrial era but it isn't a period picture either. Rudimentary, it is a biographical story about a miserable son of a bitch, who, through his self-destruction of painting, humiliated and mortified his family and himself, who, emotionally and mentally was a short life on the way to unwanted ignominy. Through his pieces, Pollock was also a great creator of thoughts and ideas to other people, the foundations of his legacy. Fellow artists, like wife Lee Krasner (Marcia Gay Harden, in her Oscar winning role) were intrigued, others, like complacent rival Willem de Kooning (Val Kilmer) politely questioned his techniques, while critics feverishly scrambled to find clues regarding his motivations. What is heartbreaking to come to know is that while Life magazine was conducting their baptism of fire in 1949, his personal torment of constant doubt coupled with relentless depression negated his self-worth.

Narratively, the film does not try to explain the meaning behind Pollock's unremitting madness. Maybe the most important out of many questions is what drove Pollock to paint in the first place? If Harris decided to go that route it would run the risk of sentimentalizing the principle character, a common occurrence in most biographical films. Even in scenes where Pollock is with his own family he comes across as the preverbal black sheep. Sometimes unknowingly he affects everyone who comes in contact with him as he struggles with his neurosis and the forcible requirements of interpersonal relationships in the New York art scene (most recognizable is Amy Madigan as Peggy Guggenheim), he grows more and more disenchanted with the world.

For an actor who has waited so long to showcase his talent, Pollock is a tremendous accomplishment for Ed Harris. For his hallmark devotion to his subject, Harris' direction is flawless; knowing how to highlight specific occurrences in Pollock's life while also including very dramatic scenes of basic human struggle. As an actor, there is no other performer who could have done a better job. Harris' feature, such as his concave eyes being so cold and inviting, so round and mirror-like, more than supplements the times when words are not needed.

Over Spring Break, I had the distinct pleasure of visiting the Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art, and for forty-five minutes sat in bedazzlement in front of Pollock's masterpiece, Autumn Rhythm. The piece is a creation far beyond words. Like the man, the work is saddening chaos; there is no right or wrong, to try and find explanation is not only an exercise in futility but simply a waste of time. As long as it is recognized as free flowing thought, it succeeds as art. For a film to help an audience better understand a life is easy, but when it is crafted as passionately as its inspiration, it begins to inspire others as well.

Another Mellow Spring
CyberOctave Music/Virgin Records, 2001

Some bands live exclusively in the past while others forge ahead into the future. And then there are bands like mellow, who have managed to fuse both worlds into an interesting mix of electronically-based classic pop music. The French trio's first American release Another Mellow Spring is full of simple and upbeat 1960s-style pop melodies, sung by Patrick Woodcock of "Shinda Shimma," the album's opening track, sets the space-age theme with the use of a vocoder, which creates an almost robotic effect on Woodcock's vocals. The danceable track "Another Mellow Winter" pulses with electronic bubbles and blips. On "Pars from La Nena," Woodcock turns into a self-effused lounge singer, and manages to pull it off with style and humor. Fans of the French pop band Air will immediately notice their influence on mellow, but even though Spring isn't completely original, it's still a fun listen.

Nikka Costa
Everybody Got Their Something
Cheeba Sounds/Virgin Records, 2001

She might look like a red-haired Jennifer Lopez, but Nikka Costa has more soul in her little finger than Lopez has in her entire body. Her debut album Everybody Got Their Something, is sexy and strong-a quality that's hard to find in female musicians today. From the funk-infused opening song "Like A Feather" to the catchy title track, Costa takes us on a soulful journey full of funk beats and smooth vocals that's accented with horns and keyboards in just the right places. On slower songs "Just Because" and "Push & Pull," Costa reveals a more emotional side, often sounding a bit like a funky Fiona Apple. Summer is almost here, and this is perfect party album for a barbecue on the back porch.

Over the Rhine
Films for Radio
Backporch Records/Virgin Records, 2001

Over the Rhine revels in the dark side of pop music with its dramatic choruses, swelling vocals and stark melodies. Musically, each song is well-produced and chock-full of interesting instrumentation, from the trip-hop beat of "The Body is a Stairway of Skin" to the dark beats of the opening track "The World Can Wait," to the slightly country twang of "Whatever You Say." Fans of Sarah McLachlan and Tori Amos will appreciate singer Karin Bergquist's similar haunting and powerful vocals. With a title like Films for Radio, I expected visually strong lyrics but the band falls short in the songwriting department, relying on cliched lyrics and phrases-compa}

Original ideas are a valuable commodity. This statement is very true when it comes to the creation of motion pictures. Hollywood in its present state is very barren of original ideas. The scarcity of innovation is caused by a variety of factors, one being that Hollywood studios are afraid to take risks. Why do studios have such a fear? The answer is plain and simple: money. They are afraid to invest in something original if there is any chance they might not break even. It is easy to see why almost every successful movie has a sequel, because the studios want to milk a winning franchise for all its worth. Another is the cookie-cutter romantic comedies or teen angst films that are released every year. These appear to have different actors and stories, but upon close examination they are almost identical to one another. Neither of these two manifestations are the most troubling when taken into consideration the concept of remakes.

Now bear in mind that when a studio remakes a film, it is not always a remake of an older American movie. Instead, Hollywood has always been in the habit of remaking foreign movies. These foreign films usually have had a marginal amount of success in America, differing from the typical studio picture in that they take risks when it comes to originality. Seeing such films, Hollywood will quickly gobble them up, renaming them, and ups their budgets by $50 million dollars.

Studies are particularly bad about remaking French films to appeal to American audiences. Some examples include La Femme Nikita (Point of No Return), Three Men and a Cradle (Three Men and a Baby) and The Visitors (the upcoming Just Visiting). The last of these, Just Visiting, is a very prominent example. While the original film isn’t exactly hilarious (unless you like the whole Jerry Lewis thing), if the trailers are indication of anything, the remake looks twice as bad. It features the same lead, Jean Reno, with Christina Applegate. Anyway, the trailer has a bunch of computer-generated effects, including things that were never even remotely connected to the original film, like a huge dragon. Not only is the studio remaking the movie, but also they are also apparently adding further stupidity by adding their own plotlines, a sure recipe for disaster.

French films are not the only ones to share this same fate. The upcoming Al Pacino vehicle Insomnia doesn’t even bother to change the name of the film it’s remaking. Do not get me wrong, Pacino is cool, but while the original movie was a psychological thriller, this remake is sure to play more on the “cop after the killer” theme. Also, guess who plays the child killer in the American remake? Kevin Spacy? Anthony Hopkins? None of the above, for the killer is none other than Robin Williams! I like Robin Williams for the most part, but I can’t see him as killing anyone, not Peter Pan.

On the Spanish side of film, Cameron Crowe, the man who brought us Almost Famous and Jerry Maguire is remaking Open Your Eyes with the title being changed to Vanilla Sky. The original incorporates all genres into one, making it a terrific movie, some of that remake may or may not capture. Also, Tom Cruise has been cast in the title role that just further exemplifies that this movie will probably be the typical “I’m a big star so everything in the movie will go towards my big ego.”

Hollywood needs to find some original ideas of its own to stop stealing and remaking foreign movies. This would not be so bad if these remakes were good. However, the problem is that often times the remakes are terrible, high-budget, pieces of crap. This is especially the case when writers start fooling around with the script to make the movie appeal to American audiences. Not only does this destroy the value of the original work, but also goes toward the feeling that studios think the public are idiots. The studios execs need to get the sticks out of their rich asses and green light something that has value, as opposed to stealing ideas from overseas.
LEAD STORIES
- At least 1,400 college students are majoring in "golf" at eight universities, with more schools about to join the game, according to a March Wall Street Journal report. One school just completed a $1.1 million student "learning laboratory," that (it is, a model golf clubhouse), part of what is necessary to meet the demand for players, new or expanded courses open at the rate of about one a day. Curricula include business classes, turf science, and many, many rounds of golf.

- In Galesburg, Ill., in January, long-ball tracker Dana Turner, 40, explained to police that the child pornography in his trophy was too important to him that it kept him from falling asleep at the wheel. According to police report, Turner was so angry that pornographers would exploit children like that that his agitation kept him alert.

- According to police reports on March 3 (the first day of sale of the $125 Nike Air Jordan Retro XI sneakers), shoe stores in Detroit, Milwaukee, Columbus, Ohio, and Peoria, Ill., needed officers to quell actual or budding customer violence because of insufficient supplies of the shoes, and in Sacramento, Calif, and Toledo, Ohio, entire malls had to be shut down as consumers threatened to take their frustrations out on Foot Locker and other stores.

Nursing in the News
- The ex-student suing the Oklahoma University law school for expelling him (who announced in January he would appeal to the state supreme court), Mr. Perry Mason. The 38-year-old man arrested for exposing himself in the front window of a business in November and December, the totals stood at two.

Government in Action
- A Los Angeles Police Department report released in January revealed that, because of high turnover of operators and slowdowns in construction of new 911 facilities, a total of 219,733 calls never answered by an operator, which, even when emergency calls ignored each day.

- In February, Ohio prison officials sent the state finance board the preliminary medical bill for correcting a convicted murderer's severe nosebleed: $100,303 (but final costs are expected to be added). The man, who was serving 15 years to life, is a hemophiliac who asked for surgery to correct chronic sinusitis.

- Federal marshals seized the Indianapolis Baptist Temple last week, as an estimated back taxes of 91 days after church leaders and parishioners began occupying it in a vigil and 16 years after it began refusing to deduct withholding and Social Security taxes from employees.

People Different From Us
- Pediatric pathologist Dr. Dick Van Velden lost his hospital job in the Netherlands in February after an examination of his storage locker in Liverpool, England, revealed that he had removed (for research purposes but without parental permission) and stored the organs of more than 80 deceased children (in addition to a child's head, which he kept in a jar). Two days later, prosecutors in Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he also recently worked, asked for extradition so that Van Velden could explain the presence of children's organs in heat-sealed bags in a locker in that city. Colleagues interviewed by Canada's National Post suggest Van Velden was so absorbed with his research that he simply collected organs and forgot about them.

Also, in the Last Month...
- A wind-blown skydiver landed on a woman serving beer during a Daytona Beach Bike Week event at which women wrestle in a vat of cole slaw, sending the woman to the hospital for three days. A homeowner forked over $40,000 to have his house lifted and moved three feet back to comply with a zoning rule (Sinhonim County, Wash.). A Hoover, Ala., BP gas station owner, chasing after a customer who skipped out on a $20 fill-up, stayed with him at high speeds down Interstate 65 and U.S. 231 for 130 miles before finally giving up. Though he had not fought since July 1993 and in fact passed away in October 2000, betting Danny Morris advanced in the latest (January 2001) World Boxing Organization middleweight rankings, from 110 to 58.

Aries (March 21-April 20)

Image: "After a rigorous campfire, smoldering embers."
Message: Glowing strong.

Romantic passions will now steadily increase, Aries. Early Tuesday expect lovers and close family members to openly reveal their feelings or request added daily commitments. New emotional agreements are positive, for the next 3 weeks a desire to further enter into intimate relationships will be difficult to resist. Late Friday watch for unexpected financial or workplace information. Contracts or group agreements may soon be reversed; carefully clarify all new instructions.

Taurus (April 21-May 20)

Image: "Hundreds of red beach balls cascading over a waterfall."
Message: Compelling ideas.

Fast career inroads and new social contacts will bring valuable opportunities in the coming weeks, Taurus. After Wednesday expect key officials to search out your expertise or offer unique partnership proposals. For some Taurus a once promising business project may now return and demands completion. Thursday through Sunday loved ones will present new romantic invitations. Stay open to cozy, seductive invitations.

Gemini (May 21-June 21)

Image: "At the circus, a magician conjuring rabbits."
Message: Smoke and mirrors.

Someone close may now offer unclear communications or half-hearted explanations. For many Geminis, especially those born late in May, emotional confusion will mostly be experienced in family relationships. After Wednesday, however, close friends or new lovers will also avoid difficult subjects and firm promises. Don't push for quick changes or lasting commitments; revitalized passion will slowly return after mid-April. A demanding week, Gem: stay sharp.

Cancer (June 22-July 22)

Message: Missing the point.

Key officials may be scattered or emotionally distant this week. Cancer. Before Thursday expect important policy issues to distract colleagues and authority figures. Changing responsibilities and timed assignments may now be openly debated; don't push for quick decisions. Late Friday watch also for co-workers, lovers or close friends to make obvious public mistakes or rely on incomplete information. Stay balanced, Cancer: facts, dates and figures are temporarily unreliable.

Leo (July 23-August 22)

Image: "On stage, a well trained dancer in a bright spotlight."
Message: Confident moves.

Short-term agreements and temporary work assignments will this week be finalized, some Leos, especially those born between 1976 and 1983, will now experience increasingly demanding daily schedules. If so, Leo, expect unusual financial reversals for the next 9 weeks. After Thursday a rare invitation from a previously distant friend may arrive. Past social promises are now accented: expect long withheld passions to soon resurface. A complex week, Leo: stay alert.

Virgo (August 23-September 22)

Image: "After an earthquake, tiny birds returning to their nests."
Message: Solid ground.

Past family obligations or ongoing social stress between loved ones will fade early this week, Virgo. After Tuesday yesterday's power struggles and home disruptions will no longer play a key role in close relationships. Expect emotions to slowly but permanently shift; Virgo loved ones will soon begin a new phase of positive thinking and fresh social optimism. Wednesday through Saturday listen to friends for subtle messages: relocation, travel plans or unique job changes may be on the agenda.

Libra (September 23-October 22)

Image: "At midnight, a book falling off a library shelf."
Message: Heavy words.

Long trusted lovers or close relatives will now demand obvious and steady commitments, Libra. Even though your attention has been squarely focused on relation-

Ships, others may still wish for emotional or romantic promises to proceed more rapidly. Much of this looks happy and enjoyable, Libra: so not to worry. Do, however, avoid dismissing your own needs and goals. At present, many Librans may too easily give away valuable time, energy and emotional resources.

Scorpio (October 24-November 21)
Image: "In a crowded zoo, a peacock preening its feathers"
Message: Important tasks.

Family duties and emotional home discussions are accentuated early this week, Scorpio. Over the next few days watch for a close relative or long-term friend to ask for added emotional support. Key issues involve neglected family duties, financial responsibilities or divided loyalties. Stand your ground, Scorpio: this is not a good time to let others dictate your schedule, daily habits or commitments. After Friday romantic passions are compelling: expect a previously subtle attraction to soon demand action.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21)
Image: "On a sunny meadow, a carpenter building a log cabin"
Message: Exacting measures.

Early this week, Sagittarius, past financial or educational records may become briefly problematic. Study small details, minor calculations or returned documents for valuable clues. For many Sagittarians, outstanding paperwork from the past will need to be finalized before progress is available. Don’t hesitate to actively probe for answers: hidden information or newly revealed facts are also accentuated. Late Saturday a social gathering may provide disappointment: watch for unexpected cancellations.

Capricorn (December 22-January 20)
Image: "Perched on a misty dock, hundreds of sleeping sea gulls"
Message: Restful positions.

Rest, relaxation and inner contemplation will be rewarding this week, Cap. Before Thursday delayed work duties will allow extra time for subtle romantic decisions and social breakthroughs. This is a positive time for increasing physical energy and reflecting on intimate relations. Some Capricorns may experience this period of calm reflection as a precursor to intense romantic development. After Friday check financial records for obvious mistakes: changed deadlines may soon be bothersome.

Aquarius (January 21-February 19)
Image: "In a large bag of nails, two magnets"
Message: Irresistible urges.

Before mid-week, Aquarius, a close friend or work mate may reveal unexpected romantic information. New attractions or private office passions may soon trigger fast emotional changes in your social circle. Friends will now be vulnerable to new flirtations or love affairs: watch for rare announcements and unusual social gossp. Aquarius: serious intentions are involved.

Pisces (February 20-March 20)
Image: "High atop a distant hill, a wolf howling at the moon"
Message: Hearing the call.

Business and social events may now lead to positive workplace gains, Pisces. Over the next few weeks watch closely for unusual opportunities in the areas of property management, financial counselling, corporate advancement or accounting. Many Pisceans will now use a key workplace talent to establish new administrative options. After Thursday a rare romantic flirtation may be both unexpected and delightfully seductive, Pisces: enjoy!

If your birthday is this week, group relationships and social demands will be complex over the next 9 weeks: expect both friends and work associates to provide mistaken facts, figures and statements. Many Aries natives will now experience a brief but intense period of conflicted social interactions and personality struggles in business relationships. Don’t be derailed, Aries: planetary alignments suggest that your words, actions and suggestions will do little to improve the opinions of the bold, willful types. By mid-June a 14 month period of home progress, family decisions and new romantic commitments arrives: expect important and passionate breakthroughs with loved ones.
Dear Sexpert,

I’m female and my best friend in the world is a guy. We have known each other for years, but we have never been in a relationship together. Last weekend, we both were really trashed and ended up sleeping together. The morning after was very awkward, and I have not talked to him since then. I regret having sex with him, but I don’t want to lose him as a friend. Is there any way to save our friendship?

-Friends with unwanted benefits, 21

It all depends on how you act around him. Not talking to a person, especially after an intimate sexual experience, is probably the wrong way to go about saving the friendship. My advice to you is to have a serious talk with him. You are both adults, right? So just communicate. If you regret the act that’s OK, you are allowed to, you both were drunk. Alcohol can do that to a person if you’re not careful. However, what you have to realize is that your friend might feel the same way about it so the only way to resolve the situation is by opening up the lines of communication again. Even if he thought that sleeping with you didn’t affect your friendship, ignoring someone or something will never solve anything. Help him to see that the two of you are then I see no reason why understanding cannot be reached. I’ll take a quote from one of my favorite movies, Mallrats, to end my advice to you. “Understanding can only be reached after confrontation.” Things happen so don’t let one regrettable incident ruin a good friendship. Good luck!

Dear Sexpert,

I’ve been going out with my girlfriend for about one year, and I want her to move in with me. I know this is a big step but I really like this girl. Do you think that I should take this step or will it be something I will regret?

-Moving on up, 21

Well, as far as it being something you will regret, only time can tell on that one. But, you’re right when you say it is a big step in the relationship. In most cases it is what either makes or breaks a bond. If all goes well, you have the person that you love in the same apartment/house as you. But if things get stressful, that can be a downfall to the relationship as well. Now if you guys have an argument or a bitter fight then you may be able to leave the house, but the problem will still be there when you return home. So, my advice is to keep in mind that everyone has good and bad days. Try to give or get some quiet time to relax and get away every once and a while. Remember also that decisions about what goes on in the house are now up to two people instead of just yourself. And last, just be considerate of each others space and feelings, as you would any other roommate. Communicate with each other when/if a problem arises rather than let things fester until they consume you both. If you follow these tips you shouldn’t have too much trouble. Good luck on the move.
