Build your credit as well as your mind

Beginning July 1, UCF students will be able to use credit cards to pay tuition.

"We believe this is a valuable service to our students," said Linda Bonta, university controller, adding "that the university is working to accept payment via the Web during the current fiscal year" as well.

Students who wish to pay via credit card will be accessed a $10 convenience fee since UCF is, by law, prohibited from paying credit card-related costs from appropriated funds. UCF also accepts

UCF's trustees announced

BECKI PANOFF STAFF WRITER

As part of a plan designed to bring sweeping changes to Florida's post-secondary education system, Governor Jeb Bush announced his selections for the new UCF Board of Trustees June 22 in the Cape Florida Ballroom.

The governing body consists of twelve members appointed by Bush, and a student representative, UCF student body president Marco Pefia.

"This is an auspicious day in the history of the University of Central Florida," UCF President John Hitt said.

Bush made his announcement in a series of stops around Florida, introducing local Boards of Trustees for the 10 institutions that comprise the State University System. The move from state Board of Regents to local Board of Trustees comes after the dissolving of the state Board of Regents, which was the result of a constitutional amendment passed in 1998. The amendment gave power to the governor to appoint a new state board of education as well as the new local university Boards of Trustees.

"We're here to celebrate a new governance structure...for education as a lifelong pursuit," Bush said. "It (the local Board of Trustees) is a one of a kind structure.

Board to include student government president

Advocates for the undergraduate student have to balance now they have to worry about a new problem - credit card fraud.

Tom Yochum and Pelta. Trustees are appointed for staggered, four-year terms, and may serve a maximum of eight years. They will not be paid, but may be reimbursed for travel and institutional expenses.

The new UCF Board of Trustees has a number of ties to the school, with three alumni represented among the 10 members having already served on a board or worked in some way with the university.

UCF, the third state university out of ten to have its new board announced, is unique among Florida universities in its goal of becoming a premier "Metropolitan Research University." Hitt, who supported Bush's plan to phase out the Board of Regents, said the newly-appointed local Board of Trustees could help UCF achieve its goals.

"They will be advocates for one university, and I think that could be helpful to us," he said.

The concept of localizing control over public universities is relatively new in the United States, and state governments across the nation will keep a watchful eye on successful or failure of the new system.

"States all across the country are beginning to watch what happens, and I think it's an experimental experiment," Hitt said. "This is the model for education structure in America."

Credit card companies likely to benefit from new policy

Many may argue that we live in a society where morals and integrity sometimes take a backseat to fame and success. Recent studies have proven that cheating on exams is a common phenomenon. Many other studies helped their individual performance in the class.

"Depends on who you are," one student said, "whether you slept in, would you cheat on a test?" Asked, "When you cheat on a test, how does it make you feel?" the student said, "I feel bad." Another student said, "I cheat on a test because I hit my snooze button." A majority of students agree when asked if they would have no trouble lying to their significant other. "It's the model for education in America," Hitt said.

Some students are concerned about the new board and its potential impact on the university's future. "It's going to be a nightmare, what I meant involvements," Hitt said.

Frequent dishonesty quizzes are becoming more common in schools. In about my credit card numbers. "I never cheated on exams," another student said.

What constitutes cheating on a significant other?

"UCF students conclude that a kiss or beyond definitely means you have gone too far," Rick Lee, said. "A kiss is a kiss," says computer science major Justin Drinh. "Don't say you are cheating someone, they should be the only person you show affection for... that is, if it's serious." While few students considered playful flirting to be harmful, 66 percent of guys and 70 percent of girls felt that kissing another qualifies a person as unfaithful.

How many times have you cheated on your significant other?

"Most students remain fairly faithful as 24 percent of guys and 13 percent of girls have cheated 1-2 times in their current relationship only 5 percent admit to cheating 3 or more times. Even fewer students told their significant other about their 'act of indiscretion.'" When asked if he would break up with a girlfriend who cheated, junior George Mella kept an open mind. "I am open to what comes my way but I would do whatever it takes to help her," said computer science major Justin Drahl.

In retrospect, Kyle felt that "I never cheated on exams," another student said.

Students are concerned about the new board and its potential impact on the university's future. "It's going to be a nightmare, what I meant involvements," Hitt said.

Students can avoid credit fraud with FTC tips

last much longer if not cleaned up.

Sally, a senior at UFC, learned this all too easily.

"Just a few years ago, I tried to get a Banka Republic card so I could get 10 percent off my purchases and I was denied," Sally said. "I do not have a credit card now and I have only one student loan.

Sally took advantage of her consumer right under the Fair Credit Reporting Act, which says that any person who is denied credit has the right to order a copy of their credit report from the agency that denied it. Sally called the Experian credit agency and ordered her free report. When she got it she discovered that an account from a cellular phone service was on her report. "It is funny because I have never received any notification of these collections and it boggles my mind how someone could have stolen my identity, but really it is pretty scary," Sally said. "I mean college student get a fake driver's license all the time and that is all that is needed to say I have a pager."

In today's world more and more people have access to credit and proliferation of its use is a skyrocketing issue. The probability of someone having their credit tampered with is pretty great. Luckily, law says that a consumer cannot be held liable for more than $50 of fraudulent purchases on a lost or stolen card and damage to a credit report must be taken off it can be definitively proven that the person was not responsible for the transactions.

"For myself, I have to send a false driver's license all the time and that is all that is needed to say I have a pager."

One of the most important types of prevention maintenance one can do with their credit is to order a report from each of the three credit reporting agencies: Equifax, Experian, and Trans Union — every year. The cost is around $8.50 and more information can be found at their respective web sites: www.equifax.com, www.experian.com, and www.transunion.com.

Also, The Federal Trade Commission gives consumers a number of helpful tips to prevent fraud from happening for more preventative steps.

- Before revealing personal information, find out how it will be used and if you will be held to personal liability.
- Pay attention to billing cycles and follow up with creditors when bills do not arrive on time.
- Give out your Social Security number only when necessary.
- Minimize the number of cards you have.
- If cards are lost or stolen, notify your creditors immediately and call the credit agencies so they can put a fraud alert on your account.

Keep items with personal information in a safe place; tear up old checks, cancel notations on credit cards, as cards are lost or stolen, packages are not delivered, check and statements, expired cards are lost or stolen, and also monitor your credit reports. FTC offers, copies of credit applications, insurance forms, bank check and statements, expired charge cards, and credit offers in the mail are disposed of properly.

Discounts for attractions available to students

Darcy Elena Rodriguez
Staff Writer

Summer is here and everyone wants to have some fun. With some time off from classes, many students have the opportunity to visit some of the attractions and shows of the tourist and attraction capital of the world. The pitfall is that the majority of college students don’t have the money to go have that kind of fun. Relax, there are some places that honor the fact that college students are poor and so kindly offer student discounts.

The major attractions such as Disney, Universal, and Sea World no longer offer Florida resident discounts for those students wielding the resident ID. Wet-N-Wild, however, does provide Florida resident discounts with tickets which are only $19.99 plus tax. For some of the other attractions, there is a way to get in cheaper.

The Ticket Center at UCF, located in the Student Union, offers student discount tickets for the major attractions Universal Studios, Islands of Adventure, Wet-N-Wild, Busch Gardens and Sea World. These tickets are available to students, staff and faculty with valid UCF IDs and cost between $31 and $38.

For those wanting to relax without driving so far or spending that much, there is usually a movie theater within a couple of miles of anybody. The UCF Regal theater on the corner of Alafaya and University is the only theater in the UCF area that offers student discounts. Movies at the UCF cost only $5. If stadium seating is your heart’s desire, then the Ticket Center also offers super savings tickets for Regal and AMC theaters. Tickets are $5 for Regal theaters and $4.50 for AMC theaters. But before heading to that theater, check with the location to make sure of special engagement movies, where discount tickets are not allowed. The best part is that these tickets are good for about a year.

The only drawback to the Ticket Center is that tickets at the center are limited to a certain number per ID and there are other restrictions.

If live entertainment is what you want, Theater UCF offers student tickets for about $6 and has shows running throughout the summer.

So, enjoy the summer and take advantage of living in the attraction capital of the world.

Burglars with cameras

On June 16, an unknown preparatory found Ferenc Szipo’s black Toyota Camry in the East Parking Garage and smashed the drivers side window in. The perpetrator then stole Szipo’s Sony Discman with a car kit, as well as a number of CDs.

A fingerprint was lifted off the driver’s side door, but the owner of the print has not yet been identified. Szipo said that he would not prosecute.

Why a projector?

Christopher Rank reported that he found a classroom that was unsecured from the outside. Upon entering, he discovered that a ceiling projector worth $5,100 had been stolen. Five other projectors have also been stolen during recent weeks from the education and communication buildings. These thefts have occurred during evening or weekend hours.

The projector is a Proxima with a model number of 6630. If you have any information please call (407) 823-TIPS.

CENTRAL FLORIDA FUTURE
New system doesn’t take the politicians out of education

DAVID MARSTERS
STAFF WRITER

Those with an interest in Florida’s public university system can take a collective deep breath—the system of local Boards of Trustees is officially in place. When Governor Jeb Bush announced his appointments for each of the 10 new respective boards, he ushered in a new era of localized control over post-secondary education, ending the reign of the Florida Board of Regents. Proponents of the system are hailing it as the savior of the state’s public education system, while opponents view students and taxpayers alike as getting railroaded. One part of this debate is the assertion by the plans’ backers (Bush being the foremost) that the new system will de-politicize education policy in the state of Florida. Transfer power from bureaucrats in Tallahassee to local business people, proponents say, will allow for more accountability and responsiveness. That, however, is hardly the case. In fact, this new system is now even more political. Bush—a Republican, appointed the members of all 10 boards. There are a few Democrats on each board, but the majority of appointees think along the same lines as the governor. Trustees serve four-year terms, and have what amounts to two-term limits, so chances are someday a Democratic governor will be handling the appointments. Then there won’t be many Republicans around. Either way, the process is highly political, and very similar to the appointment of Supreme Court justices by the president. It is only natural to appoint people who think like you do to positions of power in your administration. Also, these 10 different local Boards of Trustees will now be competing with each other for state funds. The old Board of Regents was in charge of all of the State University System, and had to look out for the best interests of all the public universities. Now, colleges are being pitted against one another for budgetary needs. Now it is up to these new four-tiered and smaller branches of the Florida government—politicians—to decide whose proposal warrants the most funding. To that end, there are probably a whole lot more for UF and FSU alumni in Tallahassee than UCF or USF grads. Think that provides an unfair advantage to the already powerful? The local Boards of Trustees may work wonders for Florida public universities, or they may be the death of them. The new system probably won’t do either, instead finding the middle ground where most policy plans end up. But make no mistake, it doesn’t take the politicians out of anything.

Murderous mother not the only crazy person

ANDREA SHIVER
STAFF WRITER

It shows that Andrea Yates is not the only crazy person in this situation. Her husband Russel seems to have a few screws loose too. I am furious just thinking about the murder of these children so I do not understand how their father can not be as equally angry at his wife. I find myself being just as upset at the fact that I had made more to decide employer decided the only fair thing to do was to split our profits for the rest of the year. I was mistaken. That, however, is hardly the point. Charlie was an employee of the company. The profits for the rest of the year were going to split their earnings evenly unless both parties agree to keep what they made. Yet day after day, Charlie would buck and push and beat around the bush when I asked him if we were going to split or keep. Eventually my temper got the best of me and I told him that I was not going to wait for him to find out that he hadn’t returned to claim his parking attendant. Although we had worked together split their earnings evenly without both parties being content that I was furious, and demanded that I had not returned to claim his payment. It was a name I had not heard before, but it was one that I would remember. Charlie Coddingtons was a luxury automotive detailing. I explained to my manager that I didn’t think the car and that I had left early. I assumed that the sequence of events must absolve me of any duplicity in the matter I was mistaken. A week or two after the incident a knee injury forced me to abruptly resign from my position. When the time came to claim my last paycheck, my employer informed me of his plans to garnish my wages for a significant chunk of change. It turns out that when questioned about the BMW debacle, Charlie claimed that he could not remember if he had parked the BMW, so our employer decided the only fair solution was to split the cost of the detailing. The Charlie Coddingtons of the world, devoid of conscience, free from the confines of character, and too damn ignorant to understand the concept of karma. I’ll say I saw Charlie today, I’m not sure who I would punish him or pity him.

I would like to suggest that there are two types of people in this world: those who avidly shop at Target and those who avidly shop at Wal-Mart.

You may be thinking, "How ridiculous is this girl that she has time to theorize about something so mindless as where people shop for their bath towels," but what I have concluded will most likely seriously resonate with you to the point of pure astonishment.

I will not take credit initially for this hypothesis, although it is something I have spent many minutes mulling over while waiting in line at either of these establish­ments. My friend brought this idea to my attention recently, and I, being so worldly and all knowing, jumped at the chance to perhaps shed some light on this so-called theory. And pay attention—there will be brief scenario questions testing your individual store familiarity along the way.

Scenario 1: You're wandering the store, desperately in search of the cheapest laundry detergent when suddenly a distinctive odor pervades through the cleaning supplies section. To your horror, over your shoulder, you see a mom caring for her sleeping child right in the middle of the aisle! Where would you be more likely to see this?

Answer: Wal-Mart. Explanation: Let us acknowledge the factor of "parent-child ratios." No matter where the Wal-Mart, whether it be Harlem or downtown Winter Park, the ratio of child to parent at Wal-Mart will be inevitably and inherently five times higher than at a neighboring Target. For every mom there will be five screaming kids, half naked and running up and down the aisle of Wal-Mart, while most Moms at Target can be seen with a single sleeping child.

Scenario 2: You are taking a class for your foreign language requirement and your professor might as well stay at home for all the information you know. You need to gain quick and reliable understanding of a foreign language, where do you go?

Answer: Wal-Mart. Explanation: While they don't special­ize in foreign language learn­ing books, on any given day you can find many Wal-Mart employ­ees proficient in any language, other than English of course. They will be more than happy to misdirect you at any given time and slow down the already painfully tedious checkout processes.

Scenario 3: It's 3 a.m., hunting season, and you've set to go on your yearly family retreat to Ocala to hunt possum and rattlesnake. But sadly, during dinner, you've misplaced the favorite family hunting rifle. What do you do?

Answer: Go to your nearest Super Wal-Mart. Explanation: Wal-Marts are open 24-hours for your shopping convenience, and lucky for you they also sell a variety of firearms and hunting accessories. God Bless America.

Scenario 4: You just heard a ghett­o fabulous single on the radio. Much of the lyrics are explicit, but you rock on with it just the same. Where can you find the C.D. at the lowest possible price?

Answer: Target. Explanation: While they don't specialize in explicit music, they have many, many Wal-Mart employees proficient in any language, and they offer a fine arts section such as DVDs and music materials to hit the shelves. And maybe this impact can be attributed to product availability, while Wal-Mart offers a fine arts & crafts department, most well to do suburban house­wives have maid's to do the household chores. Their typical teen daughters won't dare set foot in the morning?

Answer: Wal-Mart. Explanation: All the cheap fish toys you need, some Wal-Marts have all the supplies for those unfortu­nate pet disasters. Look no further for furry hamsters and hermit crabs, fishbowls, even fish tanks! Wal-Mart's got it all! And don't forget to purchase your fishing license...you won't find that at Target.

Less formal education, limited language proficiency, higher percentages of unwed mothers and happy hunters. So basically the scenarios illustrate class distinc­tions, observably with the upper-middle class shopping at Target, and lower-middle class shopping at Wal-Mart. And maybe this impact can be attributed to product availability, while Wal-Mart offers a fine arts & crafts department, most well to do suburban house­wives have maid's to do the household chores. Their typical teen daughters won't dare set foot on the beach without a name brand swimsuit and would you believe Target just recently teamed up with Mossimo to give us all great swimwear only a few seasons behind. Target has a pharmacy, but Wal-Mart probably beats them in eye exams. Both have photo labs, with unskilled technicians who can give you hour photo development in as little as 15 minutes, gourmet food selection such as state pretzels with processed cheddar cheese and soft drinks can be found at each store, as well as gallons of milk in case of emergencies.

Between both stores you can find whatever it is you may be looking for. Please understand, while I may point out certain class distinctions between Target and Wal-Mart shoppers I do under­stand that they each serve individ­ual purposes. What boring exist­ences we would lead if the world subsisted solely of Target going, sport utility driving moms, with sport utility driving kids, and running up and down the aisle of Wal-Mart, while most Moms at Target can be seen with a single sleeping child.

If you'd like to learn more about this hypothesis, you may be interested in the book mentioned in the scenario descriptions. Answer: Wal-Mart. Explanation: All the cheap fish toys you need, some Wal-Marts have all the supplies for those unfortu­nate pet disasters. Look no further for furry hamsters and hermit crabs, fishbowls, even fish tanks! Wal-Mart's got it all! And don't forget to purchase your fishing license...you won't find that at Target.

Less formal education, limited language proficiency, higher percentages of unwed mothers and happy hunters. So basically the scenarios illustrate class distinc­tions, observably with the upper-middle class shopping at Target, and lower-middle class shopping at Wal-Mart. And maybe this impact can be attributed to product availability, while Wal-Mart offers a fine arts & crafts department, most well to do suburban house­wives have maid's to do the household chores. Their typical teen daughters won't dare set foot in the morning?

My God, if this didn’t sound like the greatest thing since air. On paper, A.I.: Artificial Intelligence sought to have the recipe for the making of the grandest of all illusions. By combining the complexities of Stanley Kubrick with the sensibilities of Steven Spielberg, we have been waiting to witness a landmark of a motion picture. A film that, in short consideration, could have been easily placed alongside the other great works that were made separately by both men in the past (2001, E.T., A Clockwork Orange, Close Encounters of the Third Kind). If it were possible, A.I. would have been that bridge of a film; that truly unique amalgamation of stylized genius that reiterates who the two greatest storytellers are in the world, even if one is post-mortem.

Or was that just wishful thinking? No matter how many times we saw that cryptic trailer or how hard it was not to get our hopes up, we sure weren’t expecting anything like this. “Pinocchio in the future” is a pretty weak plot description, but that doesn’t even begin to cover the first act, let alone an entire film that is arguably one of Spielberg’s most provocative.

It is only until their real son, Martin (Jake Thomas) comes home that problems arise with the new mechanical family member. After a series of accidents occur, David is abandoned in a forest due to Monica’s reluctance to have him destroyed. Aimlessly, David is forgotten about, left alone to survive in a place were abandoned mechas are hunted down in order to be placed in Flesh Fairs (arena sideshow versions of Thunderdome). This is where he meets his Jimmy Cricket, Gigolo Joe (Jude Law), Joe is walking, talking sexual novelty toy programmed with an orgasm protocol for lonely human females. After escaping and re-counting the Pinocchio story that was read to him, David asks Joe if he will help him search for the Blue Fairy so that she can turn him into a real boy. Basically David just wants his mommy back.

From the 1969 short story "Super Toys Last All Summer Long" by Brian Aldiss, A.I. is a one-of-a-kind conception of fantastical ideas, theories and spiritual beliefs. It is a study of eugenics. It is the proportionate amount of amount of astonishing creativity and typical contrivance we are used to seeing in a Spielberg picture. But this isn’t just Spielberg film, it is an interpretation of a Kubrick film seen through another filmmaker’s eyes. From the various elements supplied by both directors, it will dis-<ref>...</ref>
Local rockers speak out

JACKIE MYERS
Contributing Writer

“We rock! There are too many people out there who don’t rock. We rock hard. And we rock really good, all night long,” Chris Gotti, the lead singer of Gotti 13 said. “It was right,” Chris said. “Bill and Mike only had a short period of time to learn the material before their June 16 debut at House of Blues, which was filmed for Dateline NBC. However, the time crunch was not a difficulty for the talented guitarist, as they displayed during the group’s six-song set. “I found it pretty easy because Chris and Tommy were really good about showing me the material,” Bill said. “That’s the only problem. So we have to take two vehicles wherever we go,” Tommy joked.

“Sometimes they just get up there and stand and do the same thing. We put on a show. We try to set ourselves apart from other groups,” Henry explained.

“We go to a lot of shows, and we see what people aren’t doing,” Henry said. “Me personally—no matter how many shows we’ve done—every single time right before we’re about to go onstage you get this cold, numb feeling over your entire body, and it doesn’t stop while you’re performing.”

They were both coming (to the final audition) the same night, and I said ‘Why don’t we try everyone at once to see how it goes?’” Chris said. “As soon as we struck the first chord it was just like this presence in this room. We played the first song, and we knew that this was the way it was going to be. It was right,” Chris continued.

“Sometimes the road is tough, but you don’t give up. We don’t rock. We rock hard. Gotti 13 compared themselves to quarter-backs perfecting their plays. “You learn from all your mistakes,” Chris said. “You learn from all your mistakes.”

“Me and Mike went to high school together (in Boston),” Henry said. “We played in some bands together. So I knew what his capabilities were, but we gave him a fair shot like everyone else. We had actual auditions, and he was one of them. By coincidence it was narrowed down to him and Bill. Bill was incredible as well. We couldn’t decide,” Henry explained.

In the beginning there was beer. Then came music, and then the people would arrive. That was the case on Sat., June 23 at the Kit Kat Club. The musical act for that evening was an odd duo of sounds, that of introspective chick rock and funk/soul. At first, the crowd was sparse but the beer was plentiful, and it would eventually be the nectar that attracted the bees.

The night’s entertainment would come in the form of the funk/soul combination The Joint Chiefs with the opening act Sunny starting the night off with a kick-ass performance. Although the show started almost two hours late, it was actually worth the wait when Sunny came to play. Sunny is fronted by night-club sirens Sunny Raskin who has not only a rich voice and a gorgeous visage. She also possesses a tremendously powerful stage presence (going so far as to have one fan actually kissing her toes as she sang). The rest of the band, while obviously talented, is unfortunately transformed into stage props as all attention goes to the stage in a fashion reminiscent of the godfather of soul James Brown. With their infectious groove, The Joint Chiefs are one of those bands that seem to grab hold of your spine and force your feet to move to the music. I strongly recommend that you make time to see one of their upcoming shows. I give this show a D- on punctuality, but an A+ for fun, entertainment and just plain good music making. If you want to see a show, and trust me you do, Sunny and The Joint Chiefs are going to be playing together again at Wills on July 4.

For those of you who do not know this name let me fill you in. Lars is the guitarist from Rancid, a punk band with roots in Operation Ivy and other old school punk. This new band, Lars Frederiksen and the Bastards, is his side project dedicated to a best friend from his old town that passed on.

The self-titled CD is excellent in my opinion. It has old school roots but at the same time does not sound repetitive like so many of the older punk albums. Lars is really creative when coming up with his sound. Using such instruments as a slide guitar in some of his songs, you don’t really hear too many slide guitars in punk music, and that’s why I thought it to be strange. Songs like “To Have and to Have Not” and “Wine and Roses” really have a melodic sound to them. In contrast to “Dead American” that sounds more like the traditional old school punk. To me this is great. I’m sick of hearing the same old melodic poppy punk aimed at teens. And for all those bands out there that keeping making that crap (you know who you are), you should really take some lessons from some hardened veterans of the scene.

If you like Rancid or old school punk at all this CD is a must. For everybody else out there, definitely give the album a chance. It might just surprise you. So, run to your local music store and pick up a punk CD that actually lives up to the genre name.

Angela Peterson
Orlando Sentinel Senior Photographer

What's the toughest part of your job, Angela?

"Seeing the pain and the challenges that many people have to deal with in their daily lives. But most of the stories have an uplifting outcome."

Why's that?

"Because one story can touch so many lives. So many lives. So many people have opened their hearts and shared their stories with me. And their lives have been changed because of their generosity of our readers."

That must be gratifying.

"It's my favorite part of my job. To be able to share these stories and help make good things happen."

As one of many long-term employees, what do you think keeps people here?

"For one thing, it's a very open environment, very receptive to new ideas. Everyone has been supportive in everything they've tried to do. They've helped me find my own strengths."

What do you see for the future?

"Oh, lots of change. We're multimedia company, so we're redefining ourselves, changing a lot of things no one else is doing...and that's exciting."

Her powerful photographic images have captured Angela many admirers.

Versatility. It's a quality we all admire. Particularly in the workplace. Because employees who can do many things well enable their company to do the same. The fact that the Orlando Sentinel has grown into Orlando Sentinel Communications — a multimedia company with Web sites, a 24-hour cable news station; direct mail, database marketing, and more — is a testament to the diverse talents of employees like Angela. An award-winning photographer, Angela has also done her share of diversifying — becoming an accomplished teacher, mentor, dancer and more during her years with the Sentinel. And like Angela, the Sentinel has many exciting plans for the future. But we can't get there without individual vision and versatility.

Maybe you have those qualities. And like Angela, you long to discover more about yourself. If so, think Orlando Sentinel Communications. Because we know the only way to achieve our company's full potential is to help our employees achieve theirs.

Due to the unprecedented growth of the Summer programs, intramural sports will be offering two new events for the Summer B term. A Disc Golf tournament has been added to the July schedule, as well as a Triple Skills Challenge event, featuring skills competitions in football, softball, and golf. Both of these events will feature the new online registration...4-on-4 Flag Football, Co-ed Soccer, and 3-on-3.

New web site
UCF Intramural Sports has unveiled its brand new web site located at www.imsports.ucf.edu. The web site was developed by Graduate Assistant Gary Cohen and will allow students to access league schedules, team standings, and sport rules faster and more conveniently than before. Another added feature of the web site is the online registration function, which was created by Rick Gossett, Senior Computer Programmer Analyst.

Online registration will help students avoid the long lines of the past when signing up for popular intramural events.

Clemsons, Sands and Waters become Golden Knights together

Golden Knights sign three Jr Co linemen to fill holes

Clemson is one of the biggest players to sign with UCF this year, and has the versatility to play three positions in college. In high school, he played tight end and defensive end, making seven catches for 158 yards and three touchdowns on offense and registering 86 tackles, five and a half sacks, one touchdown, seven tackles for loss, and eight pass break-ups. He has tremendous athletic ability for a big man, exhibiting quickness across the middle on defense before coming to UCF. Though the fact that all three Astronauts may help create by returning players and one interception. He's a guy that we feel has unlimited ability for a big man, exhibiting this by averaging 21 points and 15 rebounds for the school's basketball team. His list of football honors is long: No. 52 on Max Emfinger's Florida Hot 100, No. 11 on the Orlando Sentinel's Preseason Top 100, Bill Bisharat's Daily Digger, directory of All-State, All-State, All-State Perk and All-State Perk and All-State Perk Perk.

"If I'm playing tight end and he's playing safety, Peter's one person I wouldn't want to go across the middle with. He'll knock your head off," said Clemsons.

"Petey's a great kid," said Bill Bisharat. "He's a great athlete, a great person. He's going to get the hit, so we need him. He's so strong, he's going to get the hit, so we need him."

"If we go here, I'll go here," Clemsons said. "It's this is the best choice for me."

"We talked about it, but it's not like we made our decision like "If you go here, I'll go here," said the other member of the basketball track and field teams in high school, is the best of the three. "Peter's our best athlete," he said. "Petey can do anything. You could line him up under center and he could play quarterback for you."

"Just imagine, he's that kind of an athlete. He played everywhere for us. To be honest with you, I think he's the best defensive back that's ever come out of this year. He's a steal. He could play for anybody."

"One of the Sand's, Maryland has the best chance of playing as a freshman, because the Golden Knights are thin at safety because of the graduation of starters Darnell Demps and Tommy Slaven.

Waters is the sleeper of the group, who needs to gain weight and strength to play defensive end in college. During his senior season at Astronaut, Waters had 106 tackles, 17 tackles for loss, seven pass recoveries and six touchdowns and also had 10 catches for 141 yards as a receiver. He was honored at All-Star and state all-star games over Clemsons and Marshall, and teammates say he is the emotional sparkplug of the team.

"We're going to need him to come in and he's going to get the hit, so we need him."

"He's a guy that you're going to redshirt coming in to give him that year to get stronger and make that transition, which most linemen need coming into the college ranks."

"I really see Jeff as being a bright star for us in the future.""
UCF baseball signs four
Assistant coach and recruiting coordinator Greg Frady announced four spring signees for the 2002 UCF Baseball program. Headlining the list is Clay Timpner, a left-handed pitcher/outfielder from LaBelle High School who was drafted in the 41st round by the Texas Rangers during the Major League Baseball first-year player draft. Timpner is joined by David Mann, Ryan Bear and Nathan Kragt. Mann, Bear and Kragt are all highly touted community college transfers looking to give the Golden Knights experience in the field.

Clay Timpner, LHP/OF, LaBelle, Fla. (LaBelle HS) Timpner was a second team FHSAA all-state selection in the 3A division. The left-handed pitcher was the offensive and pitching most valuable player at LaBelle High School. Recognized by the Fort Myers News Record as a three-year all-state selection there, Timpner led LaBelle High School with a career batting average of .448, ERA of 2.39 and 75 stolen bases in three seasons. Baseball America recognized Timpner as honorable mention Defensive Player-of-the-Year in 2000. David Mann, INF/OF, Columbus, Ga. (Lake City CC/Columbus HS) Mann was a first-team all-state selection in Georgia and broke many of the school records there, which was also the same high school that produced Chicago White Sox and Auburn University all-star Frank Thomas. At LCCC, Mann hit .363 with one home run, 35 RBI, 26 stolen bases and 11 doubles. His 26 stolen bases ranked ninth in the state and batting average was 14th. Ryan Bear, OF, Panama City, Fla. (Gulf Coast CC/Mosely HS) Bear is a solid outfielder with good offensive numbers. He hit .402 with seven home runs, 40 RBI and 49 runs scored. He also hit 13 doubles and three triples, which ranked tied for second in the state.

Nathan Kragt, 3B, Bradenton, Fla. (Manatee CC) Kragt is an outstanding defensive player with good speed on the bases. He led the state with four triples and hit .310.

Pope, Arnold and Kurella named All-American
Justin Pope and Jason Arnold were both named to Baseball America's All-America teams. Pope was voted to the first team, while Arnold made the second team.

College Baseball Magazine released their All-America teams on May 25 and Pope (15-1, 1.68 ERA, 138 K's) was a first-team recipient, while Arnold (14-3, 1.97, 150) made the third team with shortstop Jeremy Kurella.

UCF was the only school to have two pitchers represented on the first and second teams in Baseball America. Southern California had pitchers on the first and third team.

Both Pope and Arnold have signed professional baseball contracts. Pope is pitching for the New Jersey Cardinals, while Arnold is with the Staten Island Yankees.

Pope having success in minor leagues
As a result of his performance during his first two minor league starts, Howe Sportdata has named New Jersey Cardinals' pitcher Justin Pope the New York-Penn League Pitcher of the Week (6/18-6/24).

Pope started two games, firing 10 innings, allowing only 3 hits and did not allow an earned run. Pope struck out 13 batters (best in the league), while surrendering only one walk. The opposition is batting .088 against the right-hander.

Pope was the St. Louis Cardinals first-round pick in the 2001 first-year player draft.

TAAC becomes Atlantic Sun Conference
MACON, Ga. - The Atlantic Sun Conference rises in place of the former Trans America Athletic Conference. The change in name and logo, approved by the Conference Presidents Council on June 14, represents the focal point of an overall branding and identity program for the Atlantic Sun.

"Our conference has evolved dramatically over the past ten years and we felt the timing was appropriate for this change," said Commissioner Bill Bibb. "The logo is bright and exciting and I think that reflects the overall message we intend to spread about the schools and student-athletes in the Atlantic Sun."

The identity program's main goal is to make a lasting connection between the visual image and the accomplishments of the member schools and their student-athletes. The Atlantic Sun stands alone as far as athletic achievement in NCAA Championship competition as it is the only IAA/AAA conference in the country to have postseason wins in men's basketball, women's basketball, baseball, softball, men's soccer, women's soccer, and volleyball over the past four seasons. During that period the A-Sun has also put competitors into the National Championship round in men's golf, women's golf, men's cross country, women's cross country and women's track & field.

Academically, the Atlantic Sun shines exceedingly bright with a remarkable 45% of all student-athletes earning All-Academic Honors (3.0 or better) in the past four years. The Conference boasts some of the finest institutions in the southeast, including prestigious pri-

Titusville trio hopes to make impact at UCF

Together.
That's how Titusville Astronaut football stars Marcus Clemens, Peter Sands and Craig Waters, who have known each other since elementary school, wanted to continue their football careers, and that's how they will get to do so.

The three friends and high school teammates all chose to sign with UCF over more established and nationally visible football programs, and plan to make big names for themselves while helping to establish the Golden Knights as a national power.

And that shouldn't be very hard, because they are all, well, big.

Clemens, one of the highest rated prospects in the 2001 UCF recruiting class, is a 6-foot-7, 270-pound mass of humanity that plays tight end, defensive end and perhaps even offensive line.

Waters is a 6-foot-5, 210-pound defensive end who looks more like a wide receiver, and whom Sands calls "the quickest player I've ever been up against." Sands, perhaps the best of the three, is a 6-foot-4, 200-pound safety whose nicknames include "Hit Man" and "Psycho."

And while many recruits are satisfied with redshirting during their first years, these three want to play.

"I'm working my hardest to try to play, but if they redshirt me, then that's just for the better," Waters said. "I want to come in and make an impact," Sands said. "I feel I can, but if I feel redshirting is the best way to go, I'll probably redshirt. If I feel I can help the team, then I'm going to play."

"Hopefully I can get on the field pretty quickly," said Clemens. "I have the size and I have the ability, I just have to channel it into one direction and go out there and play hard and just come.

UF football coach Mike Kruczek entered the 2000 season with the specific goal of improving the Golden Knight running game.

But the team did not accomplish this goal, averaging only 78.73 rushing yards per game -107th in the country. This year, the objective is still the same, and to run the ball more effectively, UCF will need better play from its offensive line.

The losses of four-year starting center Chris Lorenti and fellow senior Kurt Baumann will hurt, but the addition of three junior college transfers should help a talented trio of running backs (Terrance Williams, Alex Haynes and Corey Baker) get plenty of yards in 2001.

Kruczek and offensive line coach Robert McFarland went the junior college route during recruiting season to fill the immediate needs created by the graduation of Lorenti and Baumann. The Golden Knights signed Mike Mabry, a 6-foot-4, 280-pound center from Southwest Mississippi Community College; Alex Mendez, a 6-foot-6, 305-pound offensive tackle from Readley (Calif.) Community College, and Johnovan Morgan, a 6-foot-6, 272-pound offensive guard from Jones (Miss.) Community College. Kruczek expects the three transfers to play next season, especially Mabry.

"Mabry should be an immediate help in a position that's critical right now because, to be quite frank, we don't have a center," he said. "We're very fortunate to have him." McFarland indicated that Mabry already has an inside track to the starting role, jumping over redshirt sophomore Travis Mane, who worked with the scout from last year. He committed to UCF over Southern Miss.

"Anytime you go to junior colleges for offensive linemen, you look for guys to step in immediately," he said. "But the guy that's going to be the most important is going to be Mike Mabry. He's already started, that's critical. He's probably going to be the center next season, especially Mabry."

UFC will need better play from the offensive and defensive lines in order to beat Virginia Tech on Sept. 29 this year. The Hokies dominated the line of scrimmage in last year's 44-21 victory over the Golden Knights.

Morgan, who originally played tight end at Alabama before transferring to community college, comes in as Taylor Robertson's backup at the quick line for that role is redshirt junior Brian Huff (6-foot-6, 285 pounds), who saw considerable playing time in that spot last year.

"Alex Mendez is just a physical specimen," McFarland said. "He's a tremendous strong man that plays the game with a lot of intensity. We really expect him to come in here and challenge to be a starter."
