Hitt to sign revised policy to open three new campus locations for assemblies

President John Hitt is expected to make his decision later this week on a proposal to expand free assembly zones on-campus.

The proposal will open the zone from a single existing location in front of the Math and Physics Building to include three other high-traffic areas on campus.

The proposal wants to open the brick mall area between the John T. Washington Center and the Student Union, the open grass area bounded by the Chemistry Building and Apollo Circle and the grounds near the northeast corner of the Arena for petitioners and political activity.

The discussion began with a committee to expand the free assembly zones on campus, according to what Maria Vertrees and three other members of the Administrative Council begin writing a bill to expand the sites.

At an open forum at UCF in April, President Hitt agreed to form a committee to look into the issue. A committee of approximately 10 people, appointed by vice president William Merek, unanimously approved the plan to expand the zones to the three additional areas.

"What we thought we would do is make this recommendation to the president, assuming he approves it, and then we try it out," said Merek. "So, we reviewed the course of the next year. If it needs to be tweaked or changed, every year we can agree on the changes and change it."

The free assembly rule, outlined under UCF's Golden Rule, allows university buildings and grounds to host exercises of free speech and assembly in specifically designated areas.

William Faulkner, director of Student Leadership Programs, said the expansion is a result of the school's growing campus.

Since the original zone was implemented in front of the Math and Physics buildings, new buildings that have been constructed in the past two years that have redirected traffic to other areas on campus, away from the Math and Physics Building.

"I don't walk over there [Math and Physics building], but I often walk near the Student Union," said Faulkner. "I'm in the past, who have had an opinion column..."

After halting publication of The Scribe — Seminole Community College's student newspaper — for a week, SCC administration will now allow the paper to print again.

Last week Robin Minna's opinion on conscientious objectors alarmed administrators who ordered The Scribe's editors to pull or revise the column because of profanity and offensive language that Minna used in her editorial.

Administrators objected to words like "stupid bitches," use and shall that Minna used in her editorial and deemed it inappropriate for publication based on the college's free-speech guidelines, in printing profanity.

"I wasnt intending to push the envelope," Minna said. "I was just saying what I thought was the best interests of the college to generate a prolonged, controversial debate over this sensitive issue." Minna said she did not intend to offend anyone with her use of strong words.

Acker remains defiant.

 Calling the move a victory for community colleges and editors, Acker explains the government should be willing to understand the purpose of SCC's decision.

"We've really printed stupid bitches" before," said Acker. "They had a problem with 'ass' and 'shag.' We've printed those words before.

"We've never printed 'stupid bitches' before," said Acker. "They had a problem with 'ass' and 'shag.' We've printed those words before.

Calling the move a victory for community colleges and editors, Acker explains the government should be willing to understand the purpose of SCC's decision.

"I'm really glad that they're finally going to publish it," said Acker. "I thought it was totally asinine that they held it up.

SCC explained its about-face decision to respect readers' freedom of speech is not in the best interests of the college to generate a prolonged, controversial debate over this sensitive issue. Acker said Minna said she did not intend to offend anyone with her use of strong words.

"I did not know I was going to use strong words," said Minna. "Originally the column was not about contraceptives.

After learning more information about the logic and rationale behind the Scribe's decision, she explained her Indignation.

"I didn't know I was going to use those words until it [the column] was written," she said.

Acker does not have any regrets regarding her decision to run the controversial column.

"I wasn't intending to push the envelope," she said. "I was just saying what I thought was the best interests of the college to generate a prolonged, controversial debate over this sensitive issue."

Acker remains defiant and said she will change the way she edits The Scribe.

"I don't plan to pick a fight with administration," she said. "I'm also not going to try to make administration happy.

Minna and Acker said the controversy has been a learning experience.

"I've learned that the students are a very astute audience," Minna said. "I've learned that student rights do go a long way, even if you have to fight for them.

"I've been advised by my editor to write anyway I see fit," she added.

"I hope we'll be a better paper for it."

Green peace petitions politicians with post cards

Staff Writer

Hey do you like clean energy in Florida? Jessica Isola, an intern with Green Peace, calls out to students walking into the Student Union.

Danny LeJeune, a biology major, raises her question and stops at the informational table to find out more regarding the issue. He admits he doesn't know much about clean energy in Florida but is worried about the environment and believes the government should be concerned as well.

LeJeune adds to LeJeune that global warming will inevitably cause disastrous consequences in Florida — diseases, boiling temperatures and diminished beaches.

LeJeune says and says, "If we don't take care of the environment, we will have no place to live, and then nothing else will matter."

Green Peace, an international non-profit organization, is heading a campaign called Clean Energy Now! in Florida. The purpose of the action is to educate Floridians about global warming and its impact on the environment.

Green Peace is currently in Orlando coordinating programs at UCF and Rollins College. At UCF interns and volunteers are educating students and encouraging them to sign a post card that states a generic statement of support for solar energy in Florida. The post cards will be mailed to Gov. Jeb Bush's office, the post card signifies and volunteer recruitment will take place for the next three weeks and is just a portion of a three-month long program.

"The purpose of the program is to put pressure on government and government candidates," said Isola. "So far we have been very successful here in UCF, most people are signing and students have been pretty responsive.

Daniel Gross, Central Florida field organizer for Green Peace, said that the main point of the post cards is to encourage Bill McBride and Bush to take a stand to promote clean energy.

"The cards are a powerful vehicle for community and public concern about global warming," said Gross. "The campaign will prove effective when the Florida government begins to make clean energy a part of their political agenda.

Politicians commonly mail post cards to voters in an effort to convince residents to elect them into office.

Kevin Rumback, correspondence director for Senator Bill Nelson's office, said that their office has seen post cards begin to utilize mass mailing as a way to inform politicians of their position on particular issues.

Mass mailings primarily express concern about healthcare issues, entitlements and the environment, he added.

"We like to hear from all Floridians and consider everyone's opinion," he said.

Currently, city leaders in Orlando have experienced a vast amount of political feedback from voters through mass mailings about a potential amendment to the city's anti-discrimination law.

The proposed amendment, which would add sexual orientation to the list of protected classes, has garnered such an overwhelming amount of mail, mainly from Orlando churches who adamantly oppose the amendment.

City Councilman Bill Nicol's office said that the city's anti-discrimination law has been in effect for 15 years and during that time the council has never received a statement like that from anyone.

Help George W. Bush capture the state’s electoral votes, and ultimately the presidency. In the film, Perez and Sekler accuse Gov. Jeb Bush of taking blatant actions to help his brother win the presidential election.

“Unprecedented” reminds viewers that the state’s recent election troubles are nothing new. The problems involved in the Democratic primary, the filmmakers said, resulted from the faulty leadership of Gov. Bush.

Palast, an investigative journalist for the British Broadcasting Company and the author of the bestselling book, “The Best Democracy Money Can Buy,” will speak before the screening. Palast uncovered much of the material upon which the documentary is based.

“I can’t imagine why other reporters weren’t investigating it,” said Palast. “This was a Jim Crow election. There were thousands of black voters who were denied. I was in London and saw one black person after another come forward and say they hadn’t been allowed to vote.”

Said Perez: “I think the film illustrates step-by-step how the Republican Party stole the presidential election in Florida, and how they undermined democracy.”

Said Sekler: “Jeb Bush and [Secretary of State] Katherine Harris asked a database technology company to include thousands of names of people on a felons list. Names of innocent people who had never committed a crime were put on the list.” Felons cannot vote in Florida’s elections.

Electoral officials refused to count the votes of many black voters who made small inadvertent marks on their ballots in the predominantly black Gadsden County while white voters in Leon County who made similar marks were allowed to vote again, said Palast.

Palast blames the flawed democratic process in Florida for the blunders during this month’s Democratic primary.

“I don’t think it’s a problem with the Democratic primary; it’s a problem with Florida democracy,” he said.

Perez and Sekler, independent filmmakers from Los Angeles, will visit UCF as part of a statewide tour to promote the film, which they recently completed.

“I think it’s really incredible timing that we finished the film at a time when this is happening again,” said Sekler.

Perez described the motivation to make their film.

“Joan and I were really upset during the election thesees,” said Perez. “That was the most obscene thing to us. We were in California. We were pissed off that this could be happening in our country.”

Perez added: “Every time we screened this film, people leave upset. We want people to channel that anger at the ballot box.”

Palast describes “Unprecedented” as a humorous call to action.

“You’ll see me chasing the Florida elections supervisor with evidence in hand,” he said. “It’s grim, but it’s also humorous.”

Asked why people should see “Unprecedented,” Perez answered: “Because there is a hotly contested election in Florida in November. We want to motivate people to get out and make a difference.”

Progressive Council will show “Unprecedented” in Room 101, Computer Science Building. Wednesday evening’s presentation will begin with a speech by author Greg Palast at 7 p.m.

Palast will appear again at UCF at the end of October while he documents Florida’s gubernatorial election. He will attend the gubernatorial debate at UCF on Oct. 22.

Game day outlook: strict measures, low tolerance

Officers are turning up the heat against alcohol misuse and abuse through a prevention program called Operation Knightwatch.

UCF's first home football game this Saturday will launch the start of the joint effort between Seminole and Orange County Sheriff's Offices, Florida Highway Patrol and Alcohol Beverage and Tobacco to nab underage tailgaters who drink and students who drive drunk.

"This is a warning. If you're under 21, don't drink. If you're over 21 and you drink, don't drive," said Sergeant Troy Williamson, crime prevention coordinator at UCF.

Initiated last August by the UCF police department, Knightwatch is designed to help officers better enforce state drug and alcohol laws by bringing the separate law enforcement agencies together.

"It's a cooperative effort between the state and the university to reduce the number of incidents on and around the UCF campus," said Mike Miller, sector two commander of the Orange County Sheriff's Office.

If caught drinking underage at this weekend's game, a student faces a trip to jail or a $300 citation. UCF is notified of the citation and a mandatory probationary program may be set up through the university. The student's grades may also be suspended until the student completes the program.

If students are caught drinking and driving, they lose their license and face fines and jail time.

"Every year there's one or two students killed in an [alcohol-related] accident. We're trying to prevent that," said UCF police department Lt. Mike Zelanes.

Sophomore Antoniet Theodore has no opposition to punishing students for underage drinking.

"If you're under 21, you're not supposed to be drinking," said Theodore. "So [the police] are doing what they're supposed to be doing. They're protecting us."

Along with underage drinkers and intoxicated drivers, the program targets convenience and liquor stores that sell alcohol to underage customers. The program also checks to make sure establishments are not selling alcohol after 2 a.m.

"Some of these places, you could be 12 years old and walk in and they'll still serve you," said Zelanes.

Besides enforcing the law, Knightwatch wants to work with local bars and student hangouts to prevent alcohol abuse and ensure establishments have enough security to handle large crowds.

Said Williamson: "We're not really grading the program on a scale, we're working together to prevent the abuse of alcohol."

Senators call for second vote on lobbying bill, senator suspects coercion

Sheyla Nieves
Staff Writer

A bill that passed at Thursday’s SGAA Senate meeting to hire a private lobbying firm to represent student government in Tallahassee was coupled with statements that a senator was coerced to reconsider his vote.

The bill will transfer $25,000 from student senate to an executive fund to cover half the $50,000-60,000 price tag for a private law firm.

Senators took a second vote after Sen. C. Hunter Singh said he wanted to reconsider his first vote. Singh said his reason for reconsideration was that more senators joined the meeting after the first vote occurred.

The bill, sponsored by Student Body President Marco Peña, failed during the first vote by 8-8. Brian Kirlew, student body vice president, has the $50,000-$60,000 price tag for a private lobbying firm.

Sen. Anthony Tsonis, a private lobbying firm to represent student government.

Singh told Senate that lobbying was a good idea, but Coupled by Singh's decision. Singh would not comment on the issue, and Tsonis did not want to name the person who might have changed Singh's decision.

Out of 39 current senators, 22 attended Thursday’s meeting — 16 of whom engaged in the lobbying bill's first vote. The bill passed on its second vote by 13-7 and three abstentions.

Before senators voted for the second time on the lobbying bill, Marcus Gould, a former senator and current director of SGAA’s Special Projects division, spoke to the body explaining the importance and need for a private lobbying firm.

Singh said, "We need this place to function like a business. Can any of you name any corporation that has a $10 million budget where the CEO of that corporation does not have a legal adviser that is actually a lawyer?"

The lobbying bill must be approved by Peña, and Tom Haldon, director of Student Development and Enrollment Services, before it can take effect.

Silly student, kicks aren’t for cops

Andrew John Odell, 18, was arrested Sept. 21 on charges of resisting arrest with violence, possession of marijuana under 20 grams, possession of a counterfeit identification and disorderly intoxication.

Odell presented a fake ID to get a wristband at a Kappa Sigma party. Sergeant Troy Williams asked Odell where he went to school and where he was from, to which Odell gave several conflicting responses. Williams told Odell he would be arrested if he did not tell the truth, but Odell insisted that the ID was his.

Williams tried to handcuff Odell, but he resisted and refused to follow instructions. Officer Mangan and Sergeant Carpenter were called in as back up. Odell kicked Mangan in the right arm when he attempted to remove something from Odell’s pocket.

Odell was handcuffed and carried to the patrol car for further questioning. Once in custody, Odell told Mangan, “You aren’t Bill Rollo’s (College) security.”

I see fake people

Mark David Tishman, 18, was arrested Sept. 15 on charges of possessing a counterfeit license and alcohol under the age of 21. Officer James Roberts stopped Tishman for having a broken break light.

- Roberts observed a bottle of Bacardi rum in the back seat of the vehicle. Roberts asked Tishman and his passenger Adam, Jeffrey Robbins who purchased the rum.

Tishman admitted he did and gave Roberts the fake ID. After arresting Tishman for possession of alcohol and a fake ID, Roberts searched Robbins’ wallet for a fake ID.

Robbins found a counterfeited Wisconsin driver’s license with Robbins’ name and photo inside. A search of the passenger area of the vehicle uncovered a burnt pipe with marijuana residue.

Robbins, 18, was arrested on charges of possession of counterfeit identification and drug paraphernalia. Tishman and Robbins were both transported to the Orange County Jail.

Strike two

George Michael Sologuren, 23, was arrested on charges of driving with a suspended license and possession of marijuana Sept. 15.

Officer Michael King stopped Sologuren for driving a vehicle with an expired tag. Upon checking with a dispatcher, King learned that Sologuren was stopped by Sergeant Emer on Sept. 14 and was issued a citation for the same offense.

Sologuren was arrested and placed in the patrol car. Upon searching the vehicle, King found a medicine bottle containing marijuana.

Not so funny money

Bradley Clark Orman, 18, was arrested on charges of serving alcohol to a minor and resisting an officer without violence Sept. 16.

Officer James Roberts stopped Orman for driving recklessly in the south parking garage. Roberts observed that Orman and his passenger smelled of alcohol.

Orman’s passenger, Michael Skolek, 18, admitted to drinking rum earlier in the evening. When Roberts asked Skolek where he got the rum, he said Orman gave it to him.

Roberts asked Orman for his side of the story, and Orman denied drinking. During the search of his vehicle, Roberts found a counterfeit $5 bill.

Orman was transported to the UCP police department.

Twice Orman dissolved officers and stopped over the handcuffs to place them in front of his body. Additional charges are pending for the counterfeit $5 bill.

'Girl Gone Wild' may get her day in court

KNIU I V J R D E R N E W S P A P E R S
TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—

The case of a former Florida State University student who exposed her breasts and unwittingly became a "Girl Gone Wild" may go to trial in Tallahassee.

But the Girls Gone Wild video makers defeated a similar lawsuit in Louisiana earlier this year, in which a judge ruled that women who "flash" in public don't have to consent to being filmed.

Jury selection has been set for Oct. 7 in Becky Lynn Gritzke v. M.R.A. Holding and Mantra Films, producers of the Girls Gone Wild video series, which features young women baring their bodies, usually in public.

The 25-year-old Gritzke, a one-time swimsuit calendar model, said she was videotaped without her permission when she pulled up her top on New Orleans' Bourbon Street at the 2000 Mardi Gras celebration.

The footage wound up in the Girls Gone Wild "Sexy Sorority Sweethearts" video, which includes unrelated scenes of other women performing sex acts, according to court documents. Gritzke's photo also is on the cover and nationally-distributed ads.

She first sued in September 2001; the case now is in federal court before U.S. District Judge Robert Hinkle.

Gritzke is seeking more than $75,000 in damages, and an undisclosed cut — estimated to be in the millions — of the profits from the video's sale.

Her case now rests on two claims: That her likeness was used without her permission, and that her appearance in the video has unjustly subjected her to ridicule, embarrassment or disdain.

But the Girls Gone Wild team has wrapped itself in the First Amendment, saying in court records that Gritzke's "removing her shirt in public at the world famous Mardi Gras celebration ... is certainly a matter of public interest (and) publications of public nudity generally are considered newsworthy."

Case law largely has not recognized a right to privacy in public. But the courts have affirmed a person's right not to have his or her image exploited commercially.

Gritzke's lawyers at first said she did not know she was being taped because the video cameras were hidden. The tape featuring her was shot by an independent cameraman who sold it to Girls Gone Wild.

But according to recent court filings, Gritzke asked the cameraman, "What's with the light?" and he answered he was "making a video."

That doesn't constitute consent, according to documents filed by her attorney, Kelly Overstreet Johnson of

When will people learn that the First Amendment is not meant to protect the speech that society deems nice or appropriate? How many times will college administrations attempt to deny college newspapers their right to free speech, and how many times will they suddenly realize the error in their ways? The delay in the University of Central Florida's decision to allow the Student运行 to let administration deny the Student run, but it would come as no surprise that the federal government has begun scouring the university for evidence investigators could gather from academic records.

Their editor, Margaret Acker, refused to comply with the authorities' request for her student journalists' records. With a regular subpoena, we would make a reasonable effort to inform students, said Burgess. The Registrar's Office receives requests for student information on occasion, "It's not uncommon," said Burgess. Burgess said that local law enforcement agencies have brought forth occasional subpoenas to investigate for possible immigration violations, but, as far as he knows, no inquiries relating to terrorism.

Burgess did not want to speculate what evidence investigators could gather from student records, and he said the school does not know what crime any given for subpoena is for.

Government agencies thus far have not invoked the Patriot Act at UCF, but hundreds of universities across the nation have given up students' records to investigators. In the process, the government has violated the privacy of those students. The country may be at war, but that hardly justifies the secrecy and spy tactics the government is employing in its effort to root out terrorism.

OUR STANCE:

War on terror does not justify violation of students' privacy

It comes as no surprise that the federal government has begun scouring the universe and other college newspapers across the nation, that editors like Acker realize that newspapers have the right to report and editorialize, no matter how intelligent or moronic their language and discourse.

Most college students can stand to read an opinion column that contains a few naughty words, but won't stand by and allow administrators to deny them their right to free speech.

Our stance: There at Seminole Community College, we believe in empowering students as much as possible.

OUR STANCE:

No right more fundamental than freedom of speech

Seminole Community College student Margareti Acker is fighting the wrong battle.

Acker, the editor-in-chief of The Scribe — SCC’s school newspaper — defends her right to freedom of speech after her school’s administration deemed an opinion column by one of her staff reporters inappropriate and demanded she alter the opinion with their revisions.

Acker, who had revised the opinion about unwanted pregnancies and sexually active teens once already, refused to make any more revisions and SCC’s administration literally stopped the presses to prevent the vulgar column from going to print.

Acker’s concern appears to be the idea that if she gives an inch, it will inevitably turn into a mile, and if her school’s administration objects to printing a few profane words, they may next time pull an article that slams an administrator.

What journalist wouldn’t agree? As a journalist myself, I would stand up in a heartbeat to defend the First Amendment. Each one of us has the right, thanks to our forefathers, to speak our minds and express ourselves freely.

But Acker’s intentions, while noble, are misplaced. She’s defending her right to free speech even though free speech isn’t the issue at hand.

SCC is not doing anything illegal or unethical — they aren’t trampling all over her right to express an opinion. As the publisher of The Scribe, SCC administration has the final say in anything that goes to print. That is the way it works at The Future, as well as at any other newspaper.

The issue is not a free speech issue, simply a policy that the newspaper’s publishers, the SCC administration, have in place that enforces for a certain level of professionalism — one being that profoundly has no place in college newspapers.

What SCC administration has done is set standards that they expect its publication to abide by. Acker’s job as editor is to provide an informative and possibly entertaining publication within the realm of what her publishers expect in accordance with the policies of the newspaper.

If Acker wants the right to publish an opinion that contains profanity or inappropriate material, then she has the right to publish whatever she desires in her own publication that she has funded with her own money.

There are plenty of words I cannot use in my own forum, even though from time to time, I slip them in. However, they have yet to make the pages of any published issue.

The reason they never make the published pages is because my editors view my content and decide what is and is not appropriate, based on certain guidelines.

Miss Acker, if anything, you have not done your job. Possibly, you are just an idealistic, full of augst, hoping to stir the pot. Maybe you felt you were truly in the right. Perhaps, you felt you were standing up for college journalists everywhere.

You weren’t. What you did was compromise your own professionalism as well as the newspaper’s reputation.

Granted, you got some attention, and so did your publication. But is it the kind of attention your newspaper needs or deserves?

Isn’t it better to motivate readers to read your material, not because it’s scandalous, profane or tasteless, but because it is thoughtful, informative and compelling?

Club DSM members face financial consequences

I wish to voice my opinion to you about Leon Terry’s article “Central Florida’s fast and the furious” that published Sept. 16, 2002. In the article, Mr. Terry has referred to Club DSM as a “national street-racing club,” and that is as far from the truth as possible. I demand that a retraction be written to this, as I think this is slander!

I think that from now on when Mr. Terry writes an article that it may be in his best interest to check his facts and make sure what he is printing is true. The statement that he has made can in fact cause financial damage to each of our members as it can cause rumors in the law enforcement area as well. Please follow through with this as Club DSM is a nationwide organization with many members that are very displeased with his comments.

United States a thorn in the United Nations’ side

Worry the time the wicked organization that welcomes Saddam Hussein’s right hand man, but shuns Colin Powell, the only representative to speak out against the ethnic cleansing and racist policies in Zimbabwe. How about an organization whose Human Rights Commission chair is Libya, a state sponsor of terrorism and human rights abuser?

Sounds like an organization that is corrupt and prejudice, one that may be making selfish and bad decisions constantly: Maybe Enron or the Mafia?

Wrong. This time the wicked organization is the United Nations. While the United States is a great and generous freedom fighter, the United Nations has become nothing more than a money-making club. In the U.N. charter one of the reasons for its formation is “To reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small.”

The U.N. investigated political murders in China. It took no action. When slave labor was on the rise in the U.S.S.R., the issue was removed from the U.N. agenda. All of these instances of human rights abuse go on ignored while these nations continue to sit at the U.N. table of power. Americans value their freedom and liberty. Our civil rights and standards do not fit into the U.N. or European Union charter. Our Constitution is a thorn in the U.N.’s side. We can’t even set a cure to the U.N. or the E.U. wants or around.

Garnet fan support first, then sell tickets

JASON IBRAH
STAFF WRITER

I recently spent a very warm Saturday afternoon in Gainesville working security at the Florida Gators-Miami Hurricanes football game. As this was my first venture into "The Swamp," I was initially awed and overwhelmed by the experience.

The stadium was completely packed and extremely loud, alive with thousands upon thousands of University of Florida students, decked out in orange and blue, cheering their team on. Early in the game, the fans truly were the "12th man." Sure, the 12th man couldn't stop Miami, a truly superior team, from running all over Florida, but the fans' enthusiasm still made the game very exciting. For a visiting team playing Florida Gators-Florida, but the fans' enthusiasm still made the team thousands of University of Florida students, tickets and T-shirts.

We shouldn't get to mooch off the same money. We shouldn't get to build Golden Knight pride that actually exists.

In a school where spirit barely exists, where fans are a minority and even an aggressive marketing campaign to "fill the bowl" can't convince students to attend UCF's football games, implementing a system to keep non-UCF students out of athletic events manages to turn away much-needed fan support and defeats the whole notion that UCF wants or needs more pride and spirit.

UCF should realize that they are much like an amateur band that must play free shows to earn a fan-base before they can expect people to spend big bucks to buy their T-shirts, concert tickets and T-shirts.

If UCF wants to increase its fan-base, it has to entice and motivate UCF students and non-students alike in order to gain their support. Forcing non-UCF fans to pay entrance fees into athletic events won't convince most to become Golden Knight fans.

If the decision to implement the card-swipe system is financially driven, how much money does UCF expect to garner from non-UCF students who will have to pay their way into athletic events?

Moreover, has UCF considered how this might affect stadium vendors? Those underpaid workers must be ecstatic that the university wants to take away a large chunk of their customer base.

UCF claims it wants to build pride and tradition, yet its actions threaten to damage the Little bit of Golden Knight pride that actually exists.

COUNTERPOINT

Real fan support is about financial backing

RENEE BEAUDON
STAFF WRITER

As UCF students, we complain. We complain about what SRA does or doesn't do with our money. We complain that our SRA president should resign. We complain that tuition is too high. Now some students are complaining that preventing non-UCF students from gaining free admission into athletic events is also wrong.

Some feel that this will only decrease fan support leaving just the athlete's parents to cheer the teams on.

However, this move to eliminate the practice of free admission into athletic events is also wrong.

UCF athletics need money as badly as it needs prestige. The university needs money to fund athletic scholarships, advertising and marketing.

When you let 30,000 people into the game for free, UCF doesn't make money to fund these things. UCF football particularly needs revenue since the football program is a huge expenditure for the university's athletic program. All UCF students pay the athletic fee that entitles us to get into any home game for free, along with other events.

If a student from Valencia Community College wants to go to the game, they have every right to, but they should also kick in the same dollar that UCF students do to attend.

UCF cannot afford to let everyone who wants to attend a football game or who wants to watch a baseball game in for free simply because the Knights need all the fans they can get.

It's frivolous to paint a picture of UCF as a school that so desperately needs to fill seats at sporting events, that it's willing to let any warm body in to garner fan support.

We all complain about how much UCF wastes our money and now that UCF is doing something to protect a privilege that we pay for, some still complain.

People shouldn't get to mooch off the same events and services that UCF offers to students who do pay. It only serves to cheapen the privileges that you and I pay for.

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. — Close but no cigar is a recurring theme for the UCF football team.

After losing by three points to open the season at Penn State, the Golden Knights fell Friday to Marshall 26-21 in their first-ever Mid-American Conference game. UCF pulled to within five points with 12:25 left in the game, but failed to find the end zone in its final four possessions.

The Knights’ last chance at a comeback came with just over 2 minutes left in the game. Cornerback Asante Samuel picked off Marshall quarterback Byron Leftwich on the UCF 47-yard line. The Knights failed to convert on third-and-three, and on fourth down Ryan Schneider was picked off by the Herd’s Terence Tarpley.

Marshall scored on the next drive, starting on its own 47, after an 18-yard punt return by Samuel. The Knights drove to Marshall’s 36, but a muffed handoff between Schneider and Frank landed his first triple-double of the day against Rice, but it wasn’t enough as the Knights fell 23-30, 30-29, 30-28, 33-17, 13-15. Frank finished with 14 kills, 34 assists and 10 digs.

Samuel had 26 kills and 12 digs in the match, while Watts also had a double-double with 17 kills and 14 digs.

The Golden Knights’ only win of the weekend came in a five-game decision over Liberty on Friday. Sante had 26 kills and 12 digs in the win. Sante said.

The UCF volleyball team went to five games in all three of its matches this weekend, beating Liberty on Friday, but losing to Rice and Georgia on Saturday at the Outback Invitational.

The Golden Knights played tournament host Georgia in their final game Saturday, falling 25-30, 25-30, 31-29, 30-28, 15-15. UCF was going for its second win over an SEC team in a week after the Knights beat Ole Miss on Sept. 21.

The set was going for 25 in the win. Frank has set a career-high with 14 kills, 54 assists and 16 digs.

The Golden Knights had 26 kills and 12 digs in the match, while Watts also had a double-double with 17 kills and 14 digs.

The Golden Knights’ only win of the weekend came in a five-game decision over Liberty on Friday. Sante led UCF with 25 kills as the Knights won 26-30, 30-28, 29-30, 20-28, 15-8.

She also had a career-best 26 digs and Frank had 64 assists and 16 digs in the win. Freshman Chaz Arah knocked a career-high 12 kills along with three blocks.

and Haynes gave the ball back to the Herd.

Carlos Thompson picked off Leftwich in the end zone on the ensuing drive, giving the Knights a touchdown.

The Knights used the momentum from the turnover to get on the board first with a 65-yard touchdown pass from Schneider to Tavaris Capers. Three consecutive rushes by tailback Alex Haynes, a rare occurrence in UCF’s pass-oriented offense, set up the long pass.

The Herd answered back with 10 points of its own before Haynes broke loose for a 58-yard touchdown run, the longest of his career. That put UCF up 14-10, but Marshall scored 10 more unanswered points and took a 20-14 halftime lead.

UCF failed to score in the third quarter for the third straight game. Marshall scored a touchdown with 8:06 left in the period, but the two-point conversion attempt failed, putting the Herd up 26-14. The Knights have been outscored 45-0 in the third quarter this season.

It wasn’t all bad for the Knights, though, as they showed a national television audience they could play with the premier team of the MAC.

"It shows a lot about us and our football team," punter Ryan Fink said. "How good we are and how good we can be. We just need to just pull it all together as a team."

"This is a work in progress for us," he added.

One bright spot for the Knights was the running game. Haynes rushed for 131 yards, his longest total of the year. He averaged five yards a carry.

Golden Knights get first interception

CHRIS BERNHARDT STAFF WRITER

Though they faced perhaps the best quarterback in the nation in Byron Leftwich, UCF picked off a pass for the first time this season. In fact the Knights did it three times, though only two counted.

In the first quarter, Carlos Thompson stepped in front of a pass in the endzone. That ended Marshall’s first drive and allowed UCF to take an early 7-0 lead on the following possession. It also was a big moment for Thompson, who spent the past few weeks playing cards-up more than football. He missed almost all of two-a-days because of academic ineligibility.

The other two picks came at the hands of Jaante Samuel. The senior appeared to just scoop a Leftwich pass off the ground on a second down in the fourth quarter. But it was negated when the official ruled it hit the ground first. Marshall missed on the subsequent third down and Samuel got an interception that counted on the Thunderbolt Beard’s next drive.

Schneider more than half-way to Daunte

When Ryan Schneider connected with Tavaria Capers for a 65-yard score, it gave him 12 straight games with a touchdown pass. That ties him for second on UCF’s all-time list with Darin Hinshaw. Hinshaw did it twice between 1991 and 1994.

It also puts him more than halfway to the school’s all-time mark of 22. Daunte Culpepper holds that record.

UCF wins in a night of firsts

TOM ALEXANDER

UCF's soccer team celebrated winning the first conference game of the season. The Knights were victorious against Stetson, improving their record to 2-2-1 in the A-Sun.

Freshman Austin Gunning scored his first collegiate goal against Stetson. The Golden Knights scored 44:02 into the game when Gunning took a rebound off the crossbar and scored his first collegiates goal for the Knights.

The Golden Knights also recorded a shutout with 19 saves in the game, the first time in their history. The win was the first time the team has won a conference game after being tied for first in the A-Sun last season.

UCF goalkeeper Ryan McIntosh recorded three saves in the game, the first shutout of his collegiate career. It was the first time UCF and UC-Riverside faced each other, and the first full game the Golden Knights had played in two weeks after their home opener was rescheduled due to lightening.

The Golden Knights improved their record to 2-2-1 on the year and the Highlanders fell to 2-3-2.

UCF returns home Thursday when the Knights will face conference rival Stetson at 7 p.m. It will mark the first time the two schools have met in men's soccer.

The Golden Knights lead the all-time series against the Hatters by a large margin. The Golden Knights are 21-4-1 all time versus Stetson. UCF faces a tough challenge in their first conference match, as Stetson tied for first in the Atlantic Sun last season.

The Hatters also return the deadly Ian Zarra, who scored 11 goals and had 3 assists last year. Stetson is 2-0-1 in the year so far and 1-0 in the A-Sun. This is the first conference game for the Knights.

Career weekend

Four Golden Knights set career highs in the three games last weekend. Against Liberty, Sante recorded 20 digs, Arndt had 12 kills and Dell had 11 kills, all personal bests. One game later, Dell improved her career best to 14 kills against Rice. Watts knocked a career-high 17 kills against Rice and recorded 15 digs against Georgia.

Statistical leaders

UCF leads the Atlantic Sun in assists with 14.16 assists per game. Among the leaders the conference, Rice leads the Atlantic Sun in assists with 15.69 and is third in digs with 2.73.

Junior Lindsey Whalen leads the conference in digs with 2.65. Sophomore middle blocker Amanda Stone leads the league in blocks with 0.37. She is sixth in digs with 2.56. Watts is third in the A-Sun in hitting percentage (.349).

The UCF women's soccer team improved its record to 6-1 with a 3-2 win over Colorado College in Colorado Springs on Friday.

Senior Amanda King scored two goals against the Tigers. Her first goal opened the scoring at the 28:03 mark, but CC struck back five minutes later. CC’s Cortney Kitchen put the ball past Golden Knights' goalie Jessica Kuhlman on assists from Courtney Michel and Sarah Chadwick.

With about 10 minutes to go in the first half, freshman Jennifer Montgomery, who assisted on King's first tally, netted a goal to give UCF a 2-1 advantage. Montgomery leads the team with five goals and four assists, for 14 points for the season.

In the second half, King scored her second goal and eventual game-winner off an assist from Allison Blagriff. The Tigers made the game interesting, scoring with under six minutes left in the match. CC’s record drops to 2-4.

The Golden Knights play their second Atlantic Sun game of the season Thursday when they travel to Georgia State. They beat conference-rival Florida Atlantic 2-0 back on Sept. 8.

Third down streak ends

After failing to convert a single third down for the first time in school history against Arizona State, UCF missed their first three conversions against Marshall. That extended their streak of futility to 14. But on their next attempt they ended the streak in a big way. On third and-one Schneider handed off to Alex Haynes, who broke several tackles and used a stiff arm to get a 58-yard touchdown.

Still, UCF was hardly successful on third down conversions for the game. The Knights went 4-for-18 and are 15-for-43 on the season.

UCF has first attempts on fourth down

The Golden Knights had their first fourth down attempts of the season, going one-for-two against Marshall.

In the first quarter they used a quarterback sneak by Schneider to convert a fourth-and-tinches. The second attempt came in the fourth quarter on UCF’s last offensive play of the game. On that fourth-and-three, Schneider tried to hit Jimmy Fryzel downfield but was picked off by Terence Turpley on a deflection.

Hinn kicks career high

Ryan Hinn recorded the longest punt on his career against Marshall. Kicking from the UCF 38 in the third quarter, he punted the ball 61 yards to the endzone for a touchback. His previous high was 50 set two weeks ago against Arizona State.

Overall he had his best collegiate game, punting seven times for an average of 46.9 yards.

Prater gets day off

For the first time this season UCF freshman place-kicker Matt Prater did not attempt a field goal. He was relegated to extra-point attempts and kick-offs. He had been the most consistent scorer for the Knights, who had just three touchdowns through the first two games. He is 5-for-6 on field-goal attempts this season.

Watkins starts

As expected, offensive lineman Kyle Watkins made his first start of the season and his Division I-A career. With right guard Taylor Robertson out with an injury, right tackle Garrel McCray slid over and Watkins took over at tackle.

The 6-foot-8 Watkins transferred to UCF from Tyler Community College in Texas this spring, but fell behind in the offensive line rotation when he missed several two-weeks with an injury.

Miller plays tight end

Quarterback Brian Miller spent most of the spring and summer learning how to play the tight end. After backing up Schneider last year, he decided to switch position in an effort to get more playing time. But an injury to backup quarterback Brandon Sumner forced Miller back into his old role.

With Sumner back, Miller was finally able to debut at tight end against Marshall. He did not have a catch.

Defense holds Leftwich down

The defense was certainly impressive in holding Marshall to just 26 points. In addition to forcing the Thundering Herd to punt four straight times in the third and fourth quarter, the defense also kept Leftwich in check.

The Heisman candidate did have 340 passing yards, but it ended his string of five straight 400-yard games. Most of those yards came on underneath routes, as the Golden Knights played a soft zone designed to guard against long plays.

Injury report

Linebacker Chris Pilinko, right end Michael Gaines and safety Alari Bigby all suffered sprained ankles during the game. Pilinko and Gaines both returned soon after, but Bigby never returned.

Schneider played the entire game with a disk jacket after bruising his ribs against Arizona State. The ribs might have been a factor on two weak throws in the fourth quarter that resulted in interceptions.

Section 2: Ratification
The proposed amendment shall become part of the Constitution after a majority vote of the Senate and a majority vote of the Student Body enrolled in the University of Central Florida.

Article V: Constitution and Amendments

Section 1: Proposal of Amendments
A. An amendment to this Constitution may be proposed by:
1. A petition signed by twenty-five (25) of the Students.
2. A written petition, presented to the Chair of the Constitution Committee, the Senate, the President, the Student Senate, and the University of Central Florida.
B. The proposed constitutional amendment shall be published in the major campus publication and the proposed constitutional amendment shall not be voted on for two (2) consecutive weeks prior to the call by the Student Senate for a constitutional amendment election.

Section 2: Adoption of Amendments
A. The Senate shall vote on the approval of any amendment to the Constitution.

Section 3: Not Published
The Bill of Rights shall not be published in any campus publication.

Article VI: Amendments

Section 1: Amendments
A. The Constitution shall be amended by a majority vote as follows:
1. A bill of rights to be submitted to the Student Senate and Senate, then to the University of Central Florida, the President, the Student Senate, and the University of Central Florida.

Section 2: Ratification
The proposed amendment shall become part of the Constitution after a majority vote of the Senate and a majority vote of the Student Body enrolled in the University of Central Florida.

B. The Senate shall adopt the by-laws as they are enacted and submit the amended by-laws to the University of Central Florida for two (2) consecutive weeks prior to the submission of the amendment.
Basketball battles end historic first week of Intramurals

The first week of fall basketball action ever in the Recreation and Wellness Center was completed, and some familiar teams looked to pick up where they left off last season. The season kicked off Wednesday night as defending men’s champion ‘Rivets’ fell to a blistering blow by the Wed. Explosion, 43-23. Trevor Anderson led the Threat with 21 points, as Caris Collins dish out seven assists in the victory. Laiden Gass looked to be their early competition, as they shot by the Wiffleballs, 80-40. In women’s sectional action, Sibouns with Game destroyed the Terminators 84-54, and look to make their on-three thru basketball championship as they won last spring. Also in women’s action, the Dolphins best the Ducks 20-10 in a game that was marred by lots of fouls.

On Thursday night, defending five-on-five women’s champion Alpha Xi Delta fell off to a fast start with some new faces facing defeater Alpha Xi Delta 16-12 in an offensive struggle. Kappa Alpha Theta looks to be the surprise team of the year after they upset ZTA.

Freshman from the possible competitive league looks to be stacked, as 2000 champion Lake Show dazzled over the Latin Ballers 95-45. The Bus Drivers took Parkway to school with a 77-26 drubbing and the Firebirds shut down In Your Eye 54-29.

TRUE STUDENT STORIES: ‘My worst job’

Jeffrey Ashkin
Staff Writer

Jeremy Bray hated every second that he worked at Publix. The legions of people would come inside the store asking for odd brand name products, leaving messes on the floor and expecting exquisite service. The agony was constant.

“I was the [expletive] at Publix,” said Bray. “I vacuumed the rugs, cleaned the toilets and took out the trash. I left after a day and half. When it’s like that, you know you have to leave. It’s just not worth it.”

Many people have had at least one or two very memorable, awful jobs.

“As a whole, the general population really isn’t that smart” said Anastasia Searfoss. She lists her cashier experience at Publix as the reason behind her theory.

“People get all their groceries and forget their wallet, they change their mind about whether to have paper or plastic and ask if I could hold their items while they drive home and get their coupons. These decisions are not that big, they just aren’t thinking!”

Cardiff Shea, can relate.

“The absolute worst thing I had to do for compensation was working for Melbourne Beach supermarket... cleaning bathrooms, men’s and women’s,” said Shea. “Oh and by the way, the men’s was a lot worse.”

In college, with scholarships still in the mail, and payments for books...
Most people ignore weird classified ads charge of one dollar your shirt will be stained with your choice of cigarette burn, WD-40, malt liquor or blood. While scrolling down to the "Wife-beater Hall of Fame," the site displays clearly doctored photos of Kid Rock and Ron Jeremy claiming that they too wear wife-beaters.

Some ads, though misleading, are far less bazaar.

An ad reading "Out of the Box Brownies needs brownie eaters for a chance to win $10,000," may lead readers to believe that by eating brownies, they can make money. Upon entering the website, www.10000the-boxbrownies.com, you see a basic company with Your. The $100,000 dollars advertised is a prize for a contest promoting Out of the Box. The key to winning is inside a random brownie wrapper.

Matt Nelson, a junior marketing major, recalls an ad looking for thin, female eaters for a chance to win $10,000, "I thought it was a funny ad," said Nelson. "I usually don't give them a second look."

Ads that promote surfing the Internet and watching television at home for money are ideal for college students. In several cases, these employment opportunities require you to spend money to make money.

An ad in an Orlando publication read "Net surfers needed. Earn $25 an hour using the Internet. Aspiring employees must send a refundable, one-time, $30 start-up fee before they can begin work. The company also states that it will take two weeks for your information to be processed."

Though they are tempting, several students are wise to these misleading ads. "I would love to make extra money while I am in school, but some of these ads are ridiculous," said Reggie Germain, a senior at Full Sail.

Jackie Robbins, a junior business management major, said that she thinks they are all scams. Robbins said, "I don't pay any attention to them."

Cashiers, camp counselors, assistant coach among worst jobs students have worked food needed, it's important to have money. Yet, some people find it's not worth the time, effort, anguish, mind games, brushes with elderly people and near constant sarcastic to pick up a paycheck each week.

Sometimes it depends on how badly money is needed as to whether or not a person will subject himself or herself to a potential horrible job.

Chas Short said his worst experience came when he worked at a preschool summer camp.

"I was vomited on... repeatedly," said Chas. "Four-year-olds, grape Kool-Aid and monkey bars do not mix."

Even though this experience scarred Chas emotional-ly, he said he would still go back working for the summer camp. He said he just would wear not-so-expensive clothes next time.

It seems that there are people who don't let these experiences get them down and continue at what they do, and others who refuse to work afterward.

"My job at T.G.I. Friday's was the second job I ever had, but by far the worst," said Michael Cepero. "The only time I could take a food break was when it slowed down, and some nights this wouldn't be until about 10 p.m. Also, a couple of nights I stayed until 2 a.m. cleaning up the kitchen. I had to squeegee the damn kitchen because it flooded! I came into work at 8 a.m. to clean ceiling vents and fans. It came to a point where I had to ask myself why I was doing this in the first place."

Yuri Silva was an assistant coach for a team of eighth grade soccer players in Palm Beach Gardens. He said this was his worst job, because he had to help out the head coach, whom he knew was not very good. Silva claims he had better advice for the team and that he dreaded going to work, knowing the coach would make really bad calls. Yet, he didn't give up on the team.

"Other people are less forgiving."

An anonymous freshman said the clothing store he/she worked at in the mall, abused child labor laws and threatened to fire her if she didn't come in even if she was sick.

Another freshman claimed that a movie theater in Boca Raton would let 16-year-olds work 40-hour weeks and past 12 a.m. on school nights. He/she said that it has changed the way it does business, but he/she quit before these changes took effect.

Whether its babysitting, working at fast-food places, cleaning septic tanks or being the assistant to the guy who cleans septic tanks there will always be people who find no joy in their jobs.

Matthew Marcoux, a senior finance major, gave his advice about jobs.

Marcoux said, "Once you find a job you like, do anything you can to keep it."

Dance Revolution is creating a buzz around campus turned off and the massive flashy compound is surround­ed.

"Sometimes the crowd is there to just see one or two guys going on to see how many levels they can do," said Simon.

Dance Dance Revolution is a pretty simple game. There are four brightly colored arrows (up, down, left, right) on the metallic floor and the object of the game is to match your feet to the arrow that appears on the screen at the right time. All the arrows appear during songs and the sequence can be very rapid depending on the difficulty setting you choose (easy, medium, hard). If you can complete the sequence without missing any arrows, you can go on to, at most, three levels without popping in more quarters. There is another set of arrows for another person to play at the same time.

There are knockoffs of this game, most notably Mega mix, Pump Plus but he has resigned from the army, at first he thinks the reason is so they can get married, but soon he becomes a wife Ethne. Ethne is played by Kate Hudson, who is known for her roles in "Almost Famous" and "200 Cigarettes." This was a totally different role for Kate Hudson. The character of Ethne is a reserved elitist, whereas, the other roles she has played have been light-hearted airheads.

When Harry comes to Rithme with the news that he has resigned from the army, at first he thinks the reason is so they can get married, but soon he becomes jealous of his soon-to-be wife Ethne. Ethne is played by Kate Hudson, who is known for her roles in "Almost Famous" and "200 Cigarettes." This was a totally different role for Kate Hudson. The character of Ethne is a reserved elitist, whereas, the other roles she has played have been light-hearted airheads.

In "The Four Feathers," Heath Ledger and Wes Bentley play best friends who are soldiers in the British army and are sent to active duty in North Africa. You're feet hit that metallic floor, you don't want to get off," said Jebailey:

Jebailey said to be warned.

The audience could tell that they had a good relationship off-screen as well as on just by the way they related to each other.

The movie invokes many different emotions, such as fear, laughter, sadness and relief.

With the movie set in such a desolate area, you have to wonder what the cast did when they weren't filming.

"Every Tuesday night we would play drums with this Sudanese drum band," said Ledger. "We all bought bongos. We would just kind of get blind drunk on red wine and we would keep a constant beat for like three hours straight. That was fun out in the middle of the desert... just pounding away."

The F State (Florida)

- Among the 14 proposed constitutional amendments on the November ballot in Florida is one to make pregnant pigs more comfortable for fertilizing farmers to house them in "humane" 2-foot-by-7-foot cages, even though, reportedly only two farmers in the state still use the cages, and they say the cages prevent injury to the pigs. If it passes, it will likely be the only animal right enshrined in a U.S. constitution.

- In August, the state attorney in Palm Beach, Fla., began investigating psychic Linda Marks after two former clients accused her of exploiting them. Veronica Lynn Boys admitted that she had paid Marks $1.1 million over a seven-year period, including $150,000 for furniture and improvements to it, and two commissioners who denied they violated the state open-meetings law, saying they had been careful to remain silent.

- In Gainesville, Fla., in August,.accused drug dealer Marcus Isom, 20, was convicted of ordering the murder of Lemond Larlin, who he believed stole from him. According to testimony Isom had consulted both Georgia spiritual adviser "The Foot Man" and "Miss Cleo" psychic hotline to find out who he had emerged from an egg Marks had placed on a table. Also, an 88-year-old woman said she emerged from an egg Marks had placed on a table.

- Four of the five county commissioners in Pensacola, Fla., were indicted for land-sales corruption in April, and by September, two had agreed to testify against a third (the alleged leader, the former head of the state senate, C.D. Childers). Among the principals are a commissioner who owns a funeral home with a drive-through window (and who, as a proof, arranged for bedroom furniture for his paramour, who rejected it as too cheap); a man who needed the bribe-money for his paramour, who had to buy his son's wife breast implants because she said she was "tired of wearing a training bra"; a huge, egotistical car salesman who always carries thousands of dollars in cash; and two commissioners who thought they violated the state open-meetings law during their private scam sessions, in that one of them was always careful to remain silent.

Love being extreme? Don't care what others think about you? Sometimes we hide behind our masks, never allowing others to know the real you. These people here, though, they never seem to notice the way I look. Even the pastor guy has his eyebrow pierced. Now I know they accept me because God accepts me. And I don't have to trade my tattoos for a tie. I'm accepted just the way I am.
