WVoters will decide on topics ranging from classroom sizes to pregnant pigs' cage sizes by voting on 10 proposed amendments on the Nov. 5 ballot. One amendment, supported by the original 11 that initially made the ballot, amendment 5 was scratched after the Florida Supreme Court ruled its language was misleading.

Amendment 1 proposes reforms to the Florida death penalty. Amendment 2 requires changing the wording "cruel or unusual punishment" to "cruel and unusual punishment" in the state constitution. If the amendment passes, Florida courts match the U.S. Supreme Court in making capital punishment decisions. The amendment also allows the execution of minors ages 16 and 17, which is presently not permissible.

Supporters say it gives the state more authority in how executions take place. More than 70 percent of voters approved a similar amendment in 1988, but the Florida Supreme Court found it unconstitutional due to misleading language.

Opponents say the state does not need the amendment because courts take full advantage of the death penalty, giving an increasing number of convicts the death penalty each year.

Amendment 2 aims to open the lines of communication between voters and elected officials. Amendment 2 requires the Florida State Legislature to issue economic impact statements to the public before voters go to the polls. The amendment will provide information on how proposed amendments will affect the area's economy. Supporters of the bill say

"The only way you can have academic freedom is with a board independent of the university which can stand up for the universities," Gibson said. "Anytime the board can be wiped out at any time by political figures, you can't have academic freedom."

Under the current system, the executive and legislative branches have the power to dismiss any trustee for "cause," which is undefined in the statutes. In other words, if these people don't agree with Tallahassee, the Legislature or the governor can dismiss them and not have to explain why.

"That's an unforgettable sin as far as government is concerned," Gibson said. "It is a political system able to destroy the board at any time.

Gibson asserted that the current system as being run by politicians and political appointees has harmed the designation funds to universities they have, particularly ties to or special interests.

He cited a $43 million appropriation by Florida Senate President Rich放出 to build the Hispanic Heritage museum in Sarasota — an area opposed by the political influence in the higher education system. McKay has ties to the local seats of University of South Florida located in Sarasota.

The museum was, by no means a top priority in our education system, according to Gibson such as inadequacies we will experience.

Cook questioned the trustees' ability to make sound academic decisions, considering that most trustees don't have expertise on education issues and often don't have a background in business.

Handy defended the inclusion of business leaders, saying that if you build a great system across the country and their boards, you will see that boards are primarily made up of business people," Handy said.

Gilkeson pressed further with concerns that university presidents and local boards of trustees are vulnerable to becoming "handy, busy, and such a board in the interest of an overall coordinate body, which he said could potentially create a deathlike impact similar to the WorldCom and Enron scandals.

"Businesses need regulatory oversight, if you're going to say the current system is run like a business," Gilkeson said, after Handy responded to the current system as a business model.

Faculty members also warned that local boards are politically influenced by the Legislature which could hamper a professor's academic freedom in teaching particular subjects in class.

"We need to protect our boards of trustees, which is extremely vulnerable under this current system," Gibson said.

Two years ago, the Legislature under Cosec Deb, abolish the Florida Board of Regents after it retraced funding for two new law schools and one new medical school.

Handy added that in the 1960s, deemed the request for new schools as unnecessary and expensive. In the Board of Regents' place, the governor appointed local boards of trustees at each university and created the Florida Board of Education headed by Handy to encourage education policy set by the Legislature.

When the current system went into effect, the Legislature approved funding for the two new law schools at Florida International University and Florida A&M University and the new medical school at Florida State University — programs previously opposed by the Board of Regents.

"I wanted hundreds. It will never be enough." Several UCF students who either received Wilson's email, heard about the event by word-of-mouth did show up express their views on the issue and protest their beliefs.

"I hope that people driving by will see that war doesn't solve any problems," said junior Crystal Arlindo. "I don't see how good can come out of hate, unless you turn it around and make it into love.

Arlindo, who has attended several other local protests, said she was glad to see other young people who feel the same way she does. She believes people who support the war have the wrong ideas about it.

"We need to know more about our government to help make decisions about the war," Arlindo said. Junior Ryan Browne agrees with Arlindo's conclusions on war supporters. He calls most people's ideas on the subject contradictory, and believes many do not understand the real issues at stake.

"They want to be at war," he said, "but they don't want to go to war.

Browne also said that although some UCF students attended, he does not believe the spirit of protest exists with most students yet, but says a movement has begun to form.

"I'll end it with the spirit of change," he said, "but I don't want to go to stop."
Death penalty reforms, rights for sows and smaller classrooms among ballot measures

Amendment 10 aims to outlaw two-foot gestation cages used on industrial hog farms in Florida. Voters will decide if the ban should apply to the state's five largest urban areas, including Miami-Dade County, home to most of Florida's hog farms. The amendment, which affects only Miami-Dade County, would allow the Florida Legislature to change the county's charter with voter approval. It was sponsored by voters from Miami-Dade who were frustrated with the failure of the county commission to approve an alternative to the state level.

Supporters say the amendment weakens home rule in the area by forcing counties to adopt policies that pertain to county residents or make them an easier alternative to the current petition process.

Opponents say the amendment weakens home rule in the area by forcing counties to support policies that pertain to county residents or make them an easier alternative to the current petition process.

Amendment 4 will require a two-thirds vote of each house of the Florida State Legislature before a public document could be sealed. In 2002, the Legislature reviewed more than 150 bills for exemption from public access laws from the usual 70 per year. Presently a majority vote determines if a public document will remain public.

Supporters say special-interest groups try to hide information. They argue a two-thirds vote will help ensure access to government records.

Opponents say the Legislature represents the people and majority rule accurately can serve the people's will. They also say there is no proof of better governing because of public override.

Amendment 5 would have voted a committee to review sales tax exemptions had it passed. The committee would be required to report its findings by March 2004. A lower court ruled the amendment's language was misleading. The Florida Supreme Court upheld that decision and the amendment was dropped.

Amendment 6 proposes a ban on smoking from indoor workplaces with some exceptions.

Amendment 9 calls for a reduction in public school class size beginning in 2010. Amendment 105 proposes to reduce public school classrooms to 15 students per class in grades kindergarten through third grade, 22 students per class in grades fourth through eighth and 25 students per class through high school.

It is sponsored by The Coalition to Reduce Class Size. Supporters say the state has plenty of time to find a way to pay for the proposal, which dictates that it become effective in all of Florida's public schools by 2010. They also say teachers' effectiveness will increase with smaller class sizes.

Florida Board of Education opposes the amendment. Supporters of the bill say it would allow the state to decide how to pay for the program. They contend education standards will suffer unless quality teachers can be found to fill the new classrooms and say the program could cost up to $27.5 billion to implement and $2.5 billion a year to sustain.

Amendment 15 advocates better conditions for pigs during their pregnancy. Opponents say Florida schools already face teacher shortages and increasing the size of classrooms increases the need for more qualified teachers. They contend education standards will suffer unless quality teachers can be found to fill the new classrooms and the program could cost up to $27.5 billion to implement and $2.5 billion a year to sustain.

New system won’t remove politics real power until 30 days ago,” said Judy Albertson, a UCF board trustee.

Currently local boards have limited power of running their universities while in the transition phase. The boards will assume greater power in January when the current system fully goes into affect.

The current system, also known as “the seamless system” for its role in combining all levels of education K-20 under the Florida Board of Education, gives local boards the authority to create new programs limited to undergraduate and master’s degrees, construct new roads and buildings, hire and fire faculty members and increase tuition costs.

“We do not hire and fire university presidents,” Albertson said.

In the present statutory system, the Legislature specifically retained for itself the power to hire and fire university presidents, establish academic policy, enact laws pertaining to universities, appropriate public funds for universities and allocate those funds to their destinations within the universities.

Under Amendment 11, the Legislature would only have the power to appropriate state funds to the universities. It would not have the power to allocate those funds like it does now. Albertson and academic policy would rest in the hands of the statewide governance board.

Graham, dubbed as Florida’s past education governor, has actively sought to put the amendment on the ballot and has been campaigning around the state for its approval. He said the amendment protects the independence and stability of universities from political powers in the Legislature.

“I think the current system is inherently unstable because the governor can dismiss individuals for cause and the legislature can abolish anything at any given time,” Graham said. “But what constitutes cause has not been articulated in the statutes. Graham said with cause undefined, board members could be dismissed if the Legislature should become dissatisfied with their views.”

The local boards would have more responsibility over grants and state funds, which are now determined by the Legislature, he said. Under the amendment, local boards would have sole authority to hire and fire university presidents — something they do not have the ability to do under the current system, he said.

The amendment establishes a two-tier system with a statewide governance board comprised of 17 citizens and the individual local boards of trustees. Currently, student representatives have a place in the system at the local level with student body presidents from each university serving on the boards of trustees.

However, students have no representation at the state level under the current system and faculty has no representation locally or statewide.

“We feel there should be a greater voter say at the table for faculty and students,” Graham said. “How can a system like the current one leave out faculty and students when they are the ones most directly affected by the system?”

Under the new system, faculty and student representatives would serve on both the state and local boards with staggered terms of seven years for the state board and five years for the local boards.

Under the current system, the Legislature can abolish the authority to create new buildings within the universit system, rather than having a statewide board spending time deciding whether a new building should be built or whether a new president should be hired at each university. Those details would be left to the local boards to handle.

“We’re not interested defensively in voiding the current system,” he said. “We’re interested offensively in making it better.”

While all university presidents, local boards of trustees and student associations have unanimously voted against Amendment 11 in a resolution, some faculty, former presidents of universities and former members of the Boards of Regents have slipped in favor of the amendment.

Chris Martin, an attorney who teaches constitutional law at UCF, likes the idea of the new system.

“The current system is rife with political interference,” he said.

“Under the new system, the Legislature won’t be able to tell the local boards what to do because they would be protected in the constitution,” he said. “You can’t change anything in the constitution without a vote of the people. The current system basically makes every legislator a university president for a day.”

Proponents say the current system gives no accountability to a single entity because when the Legislature, Florida Board of Education and local boards all have power, no one knows where power starts and where it ends. The new system would hold the state board of governance and local boards accountable for higher education.

Richard Deiss, a research professor at the University of Florida, also likes the idea of a new system. He said with control in political hands, universities have been put in a position of having to compete against one another.

another for state funding.

"Universities are hiring more lobbyists than ever and signing up influential supporters to go to the Legislature for favorable treatment," he said.

But Robin Gibson, an attorney and former chair of the Board of Regents who authored the amendment, said it would establish a system of checks and balances.

Criser said proponents are making political figures out to be bad people.

"The appointment process by the governor or Legislature to public boards is a fundamental aspect of American democracy," he said.

"The threat to get rid of political meddling would be to have lump sums of appropriation for higher education," Criser said.

Opponents argue the current system has not been given a chance and say it has been working well so far.

UCF President John Hitt said proponents are making political figures out to be bad people.

"The appointment process by the governor or legislature to public boards is a fundamental aspect of American democracy," he said.

Two years ago, the Legislature passed a law to establish the two new law schools and one new medical school.

"That's kind of a problem we need to get solved," he said.

Political appointees always share the same political party as the person who appoints them, which creates partisanship.

"The current system has not been given a chance and say it has been working well so far," Criser said.

"I'd rid of political meddling, I'd be all for Amendment 11," he said.

He said as long as the Legislature will have the authority to appropriate funds, the system will still have meddling, and he doesn't see the need of going through another reorganization process.

"That sentiment is what we need to get solved," he said.

The increased existence of political meddling has forced many universities to hire more lobbyists to compete for funding in Tallahassee. The University of Florida recently hired 17 new lobbyists to do its bidding.

When asked about the move to hire 17 new lobbyists, Criser said, "I'll trade one speaker or president of the Senate for 17 lobbyists."

"That kind of problem we need to get solved," he said.

But Rob Richardson, an attorney and former chair of the Board of Regents who authored the amendment, said it would establish a system of checks and balances.

"That sentiment is what we need to get solved," he said.

Sniping at gun control issues

T he sniper killings in the Washington, D.C. area over the past month struck fear into the hearts of people across the nation. How could such horrible acts occur? Ask the National Rifle Association.

The NRA opposes additional gun control laws such as background fingerprinting and more stringent background checks on people who buy guns.

Background fingerprinting creates a particular mark on bullets fired from a particular gun. It would allow authorities, using a nationwide database, to match bullets to the gun they came from. Find the gun, find the owner, case closed. The sniper shootings could have been solved sooner if a background fingerprinting system already existed.

The government must enact tougher laws to make it more difficult to obtain guns. That means more thorough background checks on people who want to buy guns. Make sure these people do not have criminal records. Find out why they want guns.

Lawmakers must ignore the NRA, as powerful a lobbying group as it is, and do what is right for the nation. Laws should exist banning gun makers from selling powerful guns such as the one the sniper used. They included the second amendment because the U.S. was such a young country, and the threat of invasion by a foreign power still loomed.

That time has passed. Citizens need not worry about defending themselves against foreign invaders, nor do they have to hunt for food. The U.S. does not need more guns, but fewer.

In the gubernatorial election next week, voters will choose between two candidates with opposing views on many things, including gun laws. Jeb Bush supports stronger laws and background fingerprinting, and, in doing so, opposes his brother, President George W. Bush. Bill McCollum wants enforcement of existing laws, but has stated that he does not favor additional gun laws. Florida voters must decide which candidate has the right idea.

Equality doesn't mean special rights

The university as a whole should strongly support the civil rights of gay and lesbian students, within the limits set by the Constitution and state laws. It's a vicious and unfair argument to say that we should not have equal rights because we have different ways of expressing love. We should support our gay students and let them know that they are loved by the university and that they should be treated with respect.

Gay equality should begin at UCF

I was in the hallway of the Palm Bay Campus preparing for an interview for a labor management position when I first saw the headline of the Central Florida newspaper, "Motorcycle club with no own rides," by Adam Hitt, published on Oct. 2. When I saw the headline, it was very unseemly. I have always felt that you should be the one that gives you power to defend yourself against discrimination.

As a student at the university, I have seen many instances of discrimination. When I was a freshman, I was placed in the wrong class, and no one listened to my complaint. As a student at the university, I have seen many instances of discrimination. When I was a freshman, I was placed in the wrong class, and no one listened to my complaint.

Many experts believe that the 10 percent of the general population is gay. If we are going to defend our attitude against discrimination, we must be strong. We must be strong. We must be strong.

My name is Christopher and I am a student at the university. I have seen many instances of discrimination. When I was a freshman, I was placed in the wrong class, and no one listened to my complaint. It’s an attention getter isn’t it? The topic certainly caught my eye when I randomly stumbled onto a college student website while surfing the Internet.

The site contains great links for college students on a platform of interesting and valuable information that would take hours to read through. Included are new links to student poetry and articles written by college students around the country. Student.com also features organizational tools and a helpful link to search for specific articles on many topics.

I surfed and scrolled down the homepage until I found a link to the sex section. I began scanning the titles for some worthwhile reads. I found articles on contraceptives, the morning-after pill and sexually transmitted diseases. Informative, I thought, and the entertainment value that comes in the form of reading responses, which are posted bullet-style directly under the articles.

I found something quite the opposite. "Don’t blow it," was the first — an article on the art of giving a male oral sex.

An equally informative article on camouflages for females titled “Getting down; make sure you (eat) out right” gave a step-by-step guide on how to orally please a woman. "Master of your Domain: Find your own place to get yourself off" provides tips on masturbation techniques.

These articles are definitely not fastidiously, necessary or informative and offer very little entertainment value. They assume that college students, the people, are dysfunctional when it comes to sex. Sure, some sites visitors may enjoy a few extra shots on sex, but a full explanation of every sexual deed, method and position is ridiculously morose and tedious.

The entertainment value only comes in the form of8 extra shots on sex, which are posted bullet-style directly under the articles.

It’s worth a laugh because of the crazy suggestions and comments that readers post. If that doesn’t make you laugh, the poor spelling and horrible grammar will.

Student.com, part of The Student Center Network, a group of sites for college students, high school students and teens, should consider that articles of that nature discredit their otherwise reputable website.

Understandingly college students, a majority of them anyway, are certainly old enough and mature enough to handle information of this manner but most aren’t interested in reading articles that resemble soft porn. Moreover, the manner in which they are not an appropriate way for teens and high school students to learn about sex and masturbation.

CONSERVATIVE APPROPRIATE LEADER

For Women’s Health Advocacy

Stephen Hirst

Staff Writer

According to recent press reports, President Bush is strongly considering appointing Dr. David Hager, an obstetrician-gynecologist, to a top Food and Drug Administration (FDA) slot. "Hager isn’t the appropriate leader on women’s health and reproductive drugs.

Enough, the committee in question hasn’t met in two years and currently has no members. The committee is a travesty, it must be closed. Nominations have ceased quite a stir in the media and among the groups like the National Organization for Women and the Planned Parenthood Federation of America.

The political activism "Population Connection” website (www.populationconnection.org) accuses that Hager will undermine women’s health care if appointed.

The site warns that Hager has been a leader in an effort to rescind the approval of RU-486 — a drug that allows women to take several pills to induce abortions rather than going to a clinic.

They fault Hager for his books the power of prayer, pro-life, and a failure to prescribe birth control to unwed women.

I don’t want to paint Hager as some sort of quack — a faith healing televangelist with no regard for women’s bodies or their health — activists are quick to dismiss the reality that RU-486 poses serious danger to women’s health.

The drug and the accompanying drugs used in the abortion procedure frequently cause excruciating bleeding which has claimed the lives of many women. It is a fact that RU-486 has taken the lives of women.

In France, it is illegal to prescribe the drug to women who smoke or to women who are older than 50 years of age because of these deaths. We should all question the motives of anyone who advocates the use of RU-486 and then claims to care about women’s health.

The books Hager has authored on the healing power of prayer seem to particularly strike a nerve among activists who argue that he is not comfortable even though the science and the medical community side with Hager on the issue.

Scores of recent studies have shown the positive effects of prayer on the sick, even when the patients involved are unaware that they are being prayed for.

Quite simply, Hager is a target because of his religious beliefs. Hager isn’t suggesting anyone stop taking their chemotherapy and start praying as a way to conquer cancer — he simply believes, as millions of Americans do, that prayer is an effective supplement to traditional medicine.

Perhaps what is most troubling is the art in which the Population Connection site alleges that Hager isn’t pro-choice and that birth control fails to unarm women.

But Hager isn’t the only physician in the nation with the power to write prescriptions. By law, he isn’t required to prescribe anything he is not comfortable prescribing. Whether he bases that on personal beliefs, values or religious convictions, he is the right to deny a woman a prescription for birth control.

If a female patient isn’t happy with Hager’s decision, she can drive down the street to just about any other doctor and get a prescription for birth control there.

Even those who disagree should respect his convictions, and understand that just because they personally believe something doesn’t make it a universal truth.

Moreover, Dr. Hager is an excellent, informed choice for the head position on an FDA health panel. In the past, some appointees haven’t even been doctors, but Hager is a practicing physician.

The only people who oppose the appointment of Hager seem to be those dedicated to abstinence. But let’s remember that this panel isn’t about abortion politics, it’s about women’s health.

UCF holds on to beat Akron 28-17 Saturday

Tom Alexander

UCF picked up its first-ever home Mid-American Conference victory and its eighth straight homecoming victory Saturday night at the Citrus Bowl as the Knights beat the Akron Zips 28-17.

The Golden Knights improved to 3-4 overall and 2-2 in the MAC. UCF set the tone early, taking the opening drive 71 yards in 11 plays and capping it off with a three-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Ryan Schneidier to tight end Mario Jackson. It was the first touchdown of Jackson’s career, ending a 38-game drought for the senior.

Schneider answered with an 11-play, 65-yard drive that ended in a field goal by place-kicker Bill Sullivan. Zips' linebacker Chase Blackburn got his first career interception on UCF’s ensuing drive, and Akron drove down the field and scored on a perfectly-executed fake field goal to pull ahead 3-0.

The Golden Knights answered back on their next drive of this back-and-forth contest, beginning with a 35-yard reception by wide receiver Ivery-Gaskins. Blackburn got his first career interception on UCF’s ensuing drive, and Akron drove down the field and scored on a perfectly-executed fake field goal to pull ahead 3-0.

Former Knight Fisher makes an appearance

Johnson had started every game for the Golden Knights since transferring from Southwest Mississippi Community College last spring. But against Akron the junior, who replaced Josh McKibben, came off the bench. Freshman Frisner Nelson made the start and recorded two tackles. Johnson still rotated often, registering two tackles of his own.

Fisher makes appearance

Former UCF cornerback Travis Fisher, drafted by the St. Louis Rams in the second round of last year's NFL draft, took advantage of his team's bye week and attended the homecoming game. He was easy to spot, wearing his No. 22 Rams jersey as he joined his former team on the sidelines.

Poor crowd turnout, again

For the second consecutive week, UCF failed to draw 20,000 fans. The official attendance for the homecoming contest was just 18,278. Those numbers should improve next week, when Syracuse comes to town. Though the Orangemen come in just 2-6, UCF has promoted this game for some time and the Syracuse name should be enough to fill some seats.

Etc.

Freshman cornerback Omar Laurence recovered a fumble on the goal line in the third quarter, the first of his career. Strong safety Atari Bigby lay down on the sidelines receiving medical attention for several minutes during the first half. He then went down in the endzone for a few moments in the second half. He continued to play throughout the game, and didn't appear to favor the ankle he sprained several weeks ago.
Men's soccer team back at .500 mark

The UCF men's soccer team fell back to .500 Friday night in a 4-2 loss to Atlantic Sun Conference rival Mercer. Mercer's Ramiro Canovas scored two consecutive goals in the 21st and 28th minutes to give the Bears an early lead. The Knights started to get back into it when freshman Juan Pablo Giraudo scored his sixth goal of the season off a pass from senior Freddy Koyagialo in the 30th minute. Canovas completed his hat trick just after halftime, and picked up an assist on Mercer's fourth goal.

UCF would attempt to mount a comeback with a goal by sophomore Mauricio Ruiz in the 86th minute, but it proved to be too little too late. The two teams combined for 47 fouls, 26 of which belonged to the Golden Knights. UCF's Ryan Mcintosh recorded three saves and the Golden Knights fell to 6-6-2 on the season and 3-2 in the A-Sun. Mercer improved to 9-2-1 and 5-1-1 in the A-Sun.

Giraudo's six goals keep him three ahead of the next highest goal scorer on the Golden Knights' squad this season. He is in the top three on the team in every offensive category, and not only leads the team in goals, but also points (13), shot percentage (.286), and game-winning goals (2). He is also in the top-10 in the A-Sun in five offensive categories.

UCF lights up Birmingham Southern

Led by outside hitter Leyre Santaella, the UCF volleyball team swept Birmingham Southern on Thursday night, 30-26, 30-18, 30-27. Santaella led the match with 22 kills and 11 digs. Sophomore Amanda Stoutjesdyk added 12 kills and hit an above average .547 percent. Adding nine kills and four blocks, freshman Chaz Arub helped the Golden Knights take the win.

Knights among top in A-Sun

As a team, the Golden Knights lead the Atlantic Sun Conference in kills, assists and overall wins, remaining undefeated in the conference. Santa leads the conference in kills overall topping 604, but is second in assists per game with 5.83. Likewise, Jenny Frank leads for total assists with 1150, yet is second in assists per game with 11.79. Amanda Stoutjesdyk stands in second overall for total blocks (68) and blocks per game (1.69) while Lindsey Whalen is third in total in digs per game with 3.75.

Up next

while Schneider still needs to improve in some areas, overall he feels his quarterback played well. "I thought he played within his ability level," Kruczek said. "He was pretty proficient in what he was doing, seeing things. He gave it to the guy that was supposed to get it. He was a little late on one or two throws, got knocked down. Anticipating things is something that he's got to pick up a little bit, but he did a pretty good job."

Kruczek added that while the defense played better against Akron than it did against Toledo last week, there's still room for improvement. "[Tackling] was just a little better this week. We still have a long way to go. We missed a lot of tackles out there. But when you win a football game, I don't care what happens, it makes it easier to make the corrections," Kruczek said.

The coach also mentioned that the blocking up front was a reason that UCF's running attack didn't take advantage of Akron's poor run defense as well as it should have. Tailback Alex Haynes had 16 carries for 85 yards and a touchdown, and the Golden Knights were held to less than 100 rushing yards as a team. Akron's defense was allowing an average of over 200 rushing yards per game going into Saturday.

The Golden Knights hope to build upon this Saturday's conference win with a win over Syracuse next weekend. Kickoff is scheduled for 6 p.m. at the Citrus Bowl.
The value of virginity

Christine Dellert
STAFF WRITER

His deep dark hair and altering green eyes made every girl's head turn when he walked into the room. After working at Abercrombie & Fitch for two years, he was exceptionally well-dressed. He had a 3.5 grade point average last semester and made it to class most of the time. The 10-year-old sophomores had close friends, ground parents, and just last month, he finally paid off his credit-card bills.

Jesse had it all it seemed, even the thing that most men his age had already lost—his virginity.

"It seems almost expected nowadays that the guy will lose his virginity first," he said. "I am not going to abide by anyone else's stereotypes."

Quick facts:

- 90 percent of teenagers report having lost their virginity.
- 19 percent of females have had intercourse to reduce the risk of pregnancy.
- "I'm not a perfect example of this," she said. "People think that it changes you to marry, but I am happy for as long as I can remember."
- Lindsay McMahan, a sociology major who was married her husband Brandon, when she was 19.
- "It is not always easy, especially not come so easily for everyone. Sometimes couples need to break up for about a week so that we broke up for about a week so that they could hold them up when they need to."
- The bar scene is only one of the scenes in the play, "Sex Signals."
- The play came to the University of Central Florida.

Sex Signals' students on relationships, gender roles

Rachel Zall
STAFF WRITER

As a strikingly beautiful woman with dark features sits at a bar with a drink in her hand, a blue-eyed, brown-haired man makes his way towards her. Just as he is about to speak to her, he turns and shouts out, "What should I say?"

Many men and women have been in this particular situation where they encounter a loss for words. The only difference now is that this bar scene is not real; in real life, there is not always someone around to help break the ice.

"I am not going to abide by anyone else's stereotypes."

For most high school students, college represents their next big step in life. But for journalism major Sejal Jagirdar, that step was getting married.

Some might think that marrying while in college would prevent them from finishing school and earning a degree. In addition, one in five marriages ends in divorce or separation within five years, and one in three marriages end in divorce within 10 years, according to a 2001 report from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control.

Although students are aware of those statistics, it still doesn't prevent some of them from making that leap.

At age 19, Jagirdar married her high school sweetheart on Valentine's Day. With only a year and a half left of college and now a mother-to-be, she plans to graduate in the fall of 2005.

"For my husband and me, it was just right," Jagirdar said. "We knew each other for four years and now have been married for two and a half."

Lindsay McMahan, a sociology major who was married her husband Brandon, when she was 19.

"We are both in college and have jobs as servers at restaurants," she said.

The McMahans always knew they were going to get married. "It was just a matter of when," she said. "There really was no reason to wait, when you know, you just know, she added."

"I got married in June of 2002 after being engaged for one month and knowing Brandon for a year and a half," McMahan said. "People think that it changes everything, but it only changes what you allow to be changed," she said.

For us, everything just fell into place so right and so quickly"

Majority of virgins have higher self-esteem

I'm a 19-year-old guy. Of course I've thought about having sex for the fun of it. But I have enough self-control and self-respect to restrain myself from going wild.

—Jesse

I spent years growing up in church, but that was less of what I wanted and more of a glorified production event.

I CRAVE UNADULTERATED, FERVENT, ARDENT, HONEST, TRUE WORSHIP.

I think that there are others like me. Can I show you that it's not what people tell you it is? Can I tell you the truth?

But this also is my cry—
I want community. To be known, to be accepted and loved by others. At Numinous, I have found exactly that. I'm still not sure this place is real. I am blown away by their worship, the honesty of the community, and in their desire to live like Jesus.
Parents shooting their kids:

A man accidentally killed his 14-year-old son with a crossbow when he mistook the boy for a deer (Adamsville, Ohio, October). A man accidentally fired his hunting bow, driving an arrow into the skull of his 11-year-old daughter; but she survived (Muncie, Ind., September). An 8-year-old boy was taken away by child welfare officials for being late for school (Sweeny, Texas). Brief thrill:

Terry Declue jumped on a motorcycle immediately after receiving his driver’s license in Greymouth, New Zealand, in September and sped off at almost 100 mph; his riding experience lasted about 45 minutes, until police caught him, and his license was suspended. And to address a self-described “mid-age crisis,” Jim Zimmerman of Poughkeepsie, Mich., bought a Harley-Davidson in September; even though he was 60 years old and hadn’t been on a bike in 30 years, 10 seconds into his first ride, he slammed into a utility pole and broke several ribs, and shortly afterward sold the bike.

arresting officer, “(Kelli) refused to wash up (before we videotaped her), so she basically looks (on the tape) like a vampire with blood all over her face and teeth.”

Lead stories:

- The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission concluded in May that Costco Wholesale Corp.’s firing of Kimberly M. Cloutier for refusing to stop wearing an eyebrow ring at work constituted religious discrimination. The church says tattoos and piercings “are essential to our spiritual salvation.” Based on the EEOC ruling, Cloutier, 27, of West Springfield, Mass., filed a federal lawsuit against Costco for not “accommodating” her religious practice, as required by law.

- Police in Modesto, Calif., arrested Kelli Pratt, 45, in October and charged her with domestic abuse after she, enraged by her husband’s refusal to have sex, allegedly held him down and bit him so viciously and so many times that his severely ripped-open skin was ripe for infection. The old boy was taken away by child welfare officials (on the tape) like a vampire with blood all over her face and teeth.”

Play portrays college dating situations felt Stern was being put into an uncomfortable situation.

Murphy used his seniority to make him seem "more experienced" to Stern. Even while Murphy's aggressiveness increased throughout the scene, Stern remained timid and did not say stop, despite how uncomfortable the situation got for him.

Meanwhile, about 90 percent of audience members held up their stop cards, but Stern and Murphy would not stop. They did not stop because situations like this happen all the time and it is rare if anyone ever intervenes, they later explained.

But this aggression was only a beginning to the serious reality of college dating situations. Students constantly encounter such situations as roofies slipped into drinks at parties to forceful behavior, such as Murphy's, were mentioned:

"These types of people are like telemarketers; pushy, unwanted, and harassing," Stern said.

But when Stern gave Murphy an opening line to work with, a more serious issue was addressed: date rape.

'I really didn't rape that girl,' Murphy said over and over again.

When an issue as serious as this one is brought up, it is usually hard to feel sorry for the alleged rapist, innocent or not. But somehow, Murphy managed to do it by revealing his side of the story.

-Sometimes people are raped and do not even realize it because they do not know what rape exactly is, Murphy said.

-Stern managed an opening line to work with, a more serious issue was addressed: date rape. I really didn't rape that girl," Murphy said over and over again.

-Sometimes people are raped and do not even realize it because they do not know what rape exactly is, Murphy said. If an individual does not give his or her verbal consent to engage in sex, it is considered rape, despite whether the person may put up a struggle or not.

-Most people can't distinguish the difference between rape and regret," Murphy said.

-Sometimes it takes them days or even weeks to realize." Stern added.

In addition to performing in 10 percent of the shows for "Sex Signals," Stern was also an ex-director of a rape crisis center founded six years ago at the University of Illinois. She was about 34 years old when she found herself in the same situation she taught college students about everyday.

-Rapes occur between people who know each other 85 percent of the time, Stern said. "Even strong women can shut down. Luckily my situation didn't end in rape, but I taught this everyday and I still froze."

-But there are ways to prevent rape from happening.

-"Learn how to say what you think and don't be afraid to say it," Gwendolyn Druyor said, a crisis counselor for Rape Victim Advocates and opera main actress for "Sex Signals.

-"We think we can prevent rape if we are conservative or don't sleep around. But by doing this you are only pretending you won't."

In addition to working with "Sex Signals," Druyor also carries a bag and a beeper around 24 hours a day for one month to help any rape victims from Rape Victim Advocates.

-"If 13 hospitals have a victim come in, I come in to help them become a survivor," she said.

-Druyor also tries to prevent any possible rapes she might see from occurring.

-"Sometimes I will actually go and talk to the women that the predator is stalking. I totally intervene if I see something happen now I stop it at ground zero."

-Murphy and Stern were originally doing one person comedy shows in Chicago when they decided to start up "Sex Signals." Both are certified crisis counselors, as well as main characters for the play. At first, they performed the play Fri. and Sat. nights, for five to six weeks at the Stage Left Theatre in Chicago.

-Rape Victim Advocates was invited to these shows to give Stern and Murphy input and assure them that they are credible.

-In order to perform these shows, one must also be passionate about it, willing to invest time into it and able to instill it well Murphy said.

-"Keep it light, but at the same time profound. There is a fine line between offending someone and getting a point across."

-Stern agreed that the actors must remain calm and know "their stuff" at all times.

-"It's a tall order they fulfill, she said."
