Candidates have similar views on divisive issues

With the presidential election running today through Feb. 19, candidates offer views on protecting UCF’s gay community, the plus-minus grading system and solutions for easing the university’s growing pains.

Candidate debate draws 50 students

Addressing students in their first and only public forum, the five candidate slate seeking to run the Student Government Association presidential election are ready to make the change now.

As Golden Knights and Countess Katsafanas support adding sexual orientation protection to the policy and believe that communication with the administration is key to executing the students’ stance on the issue, the forum was designed to show and support the policy.

“A Golden Knight is a Golden Knight,” Katsafanas said. “If you go to UCF, it’s our job to make sure that you’re included, that you’re treated fairly and that you get a chance to be who you are without coming under the net.”

Hetin Butterfield and Joe MacKinnon want to find out how the students feel before they decide what the appropriate step is, and do not support taking a stand until then.

Students rally to spare scholarship program

Lawmakers consider eliminating, altering Bright Futures scholarship

From Miami to Pensacola, college students across the state rose before dawn on Thursday to travel to Tallahassee and rally to save the state’s Bright Futures scholarship program.

Carrying signs and wearing screen-printed T-shirts bearing the message “Keep our Futures Bright,” they arrived in early hours to challenge politicians who are considering slashing the state-funded program in an effort to reduce the state’s budget.

With a contingent of only eight students, UCF was under-represented in the protest group that numbered about 300 people. But those who did show up included both SGA officials and Bright Futures Scholarship recipients from UCF who hoped to convince state lawmakers to preserve the five-year-old, merit-based scholarship program that enables so many to attend state colleges at an affordable price.

“Being a recipient of the Bright Futures Scholarship, I feel I needed to show my support and be up here,” said UCF student Nicholas Soldo.

UCF Student Body President Marco Pena, who has made preserving Bright Futures a top issue, also attended the rally to carry boxes of petitions — more than 25,000 student signatures — to Gov. Jeb Bush’s office.

“We’re going to tell the state know about the importance of Bright Futures and why we believe it’s important for the economic and educational future of the state,” Pena said.

“I think that this is the most support that students have demonstrated in a long time,” he said.

Most SGA candidates expressed their support for adding sexual orientation to UCF’s anti-discrimination policy, as has the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Union in its fight for since last year.

Forum helps students decide how to vote

Scott Pickard / The Central Florida Future

Andrea Houchins said Wednesday she thought some students had not made up their minds on who to vote for yet but were still weighing the candidates against each other.

"I think that the forum helped the students, just kind of bring up the issues and give them a better idea of what the candidates think," Houchins said.

In the forum, each candidate was asked the same questions and was allotted a set amount of time to respond. The forum was held in the UCF Student Union Ballroom on April 11.

The forum was organized by Student Government Association (SGA) and attended by over 100 students. The forum lasted for about two and a half hours.

"It was very helpful in introducing the candidates, because I didn't know who a lot of them were," Houchins said.

FORUM HELPED STUDENTS DECIDE HOW TO VOTE

New organization hopes to help 'Ignite the vote'

Elizabeth Hallen knows this week's Student Government Association election is important, but she does not know why she should care.

"It's a big deal, but I don't really pay attention to any of the student body," Hallen said.

Some election officials, like Hallen, are hoping to "Ignite the Vote," plans to change such views. Originally a project for a public relations class, the "Ignite the Vote" campaign is now being promoted by 15 students and faculty advisor Frank Stamps.希望投票

The organization plans to accomplish this by raising awareness and informing students about the importance of voting.

The students involved would like to double voter turnout in this election. The last SGA election, which was held in 1993, saw a voter turnout of 29%. Since then, the student body has voted in any SGA election. To increase the turnout, "Ignite the Vote" plans to "educate and encourage" students to participate in the voting process.

"From the forums we are trying to get students excited about voting and to realize that it affects all of us," senior class president Marco Altding, 22, said. "If we didn't realize how much [selected student officeholders] do affect us, we wouldn't typically participate in the SGA election."
Speaker labels the left as haters of America

LISA HOTTLE / STAFF WRITER

Just seven hours after protesters flooded the Student Union opposing U.S. involvement in war with Iraq on Wednesday, Daniel J. Flynn gave a speech in the Keating Ballroom in which he signified his book, "Why the Left Hates America.

It was invited by ROCK - Rebuilding on a Conservative foundation - and is touring college campuses to come his writing. Flynn believes that he lives in a liberal bias among professors to remark on some of the anti-war protesters being "America."

"It's problematic to look at just the social science depart­ments," Lane, 19, said. "To take [20-20 people] and say they represent the campus is dangerous. It's a disservice to the tenure track that is drawing from limited research," Flynn said. He believes that leftists are not willing to listen to the great things America has brought to the world.

"The accentuate the negative and totally ignore the posi­tive," Flynn said.

Flynn gives a speech in the faculty looks like the number of professors.

"The former U.S. Marine said that he does not come to a place such as UCP looking to sell books but rather "to bring ideas to a place that are not normally repre­sented at a place like UCP." He said that by speaking on campuses he brings debate to the teach­ings of professors.

PF In his study, he said that he believes in his writing that the flag symbolizes hate. He noted rallies where flags are burned or defaced and cited an anonymous email sent to him from a UCP student that said: "The American flag stands for violence, opposition and the rise of Fascism."

"We don't hate America, we're just on the left," he said. "In America you have the freedom to choose your side, and it doesn't make you any less of an American if you are on the left.

Flynn said he tried to attend every anti-first protest, including anti-globalization rallies, to get material for his book and noted that he is not particularly born on President Bush's push for war on Iraq but found he disagreed with almost everything the protesters represented.

"They are not anti-first rallies, per se, as they are anti-American rallies," he said. Flynn noted UCP's recent rallies where students held signs such as, "Bush is the real terrorist," with little mention of al-Qaeda being a terrorist organization or Saddam Hussein being a "bad guy."

Many students embraced the philosophy of Flynn as a welcome change from the teachings of some UCP professors. Freshman Jarom Desps, 19, a member of ROCK, said she has been in a classroom where Democrats out­numbered the Republicans.

"There were like 14 people agreeing with the professor's liberal views and I was the only one disagrees," Lane said. "I pointed ROCK because I wanted to be around other conservatives."

Flynn said he feels the policy of keeping his political views private from his students.

In his book, he expanded his argument to include the anti given to other countries. The United States gave away $25 billion in foreign aid to other countries in 2002; since World War II, the United States has given away more than $500 billion, according to Flynn.

"That's $500 billion more than we've received from other countries," he said.

While UCFS pride itself on being a diverse, multicultural campus, Flynn said that students are "getting a sanitized, Mickey Mouse version of it," based on the truth.

"If multiculturalism were about praising other cultures and not degrading ours, then I would be all for it," he said.

So why does the left hate America?

We should face facts that leftists are not particularly deep," Flynn said. "Leftists say that capitalism is a failed economic system. America is the largest free market in the world and also the richest."

But capitalism is not a fail­ure, he said. He added that many leftists believe religion, specifical­ly Christianity, is intolerant.

"This country is run by men of the Christian faith, and people of any religion can practice their faith here without getting killed like they do in a lot of Muslim countries," he said.

How will UCF house students?

Plans in place to build more housing, but most land preserved for Greek organizations

Laur~ Stevens  Staff Writer

With UCF’s enrollment expected to rise by 10,000 by 2020, the university has plans to expand housing, but the new housing will benefit fraternity and sorority first.

With 80 percent of on-campus housing reserved for freshmen, many students want UCF to focus on building more dorms.

UCF responded to the needs of the campus and set aside a piece of land on the northwest corner of campus to construct new housing. However, preliminary plans have designated the land for Greek organizations and other groups.

Craig Ulbro, associate vice president of Campus Life, said the Master Plan dictates how housing, but the new housing will benefit fraternity and sorority first.

In the option, Ulbom said the university will build housing suitable for group living and lease it to organizations. In this case, he said, any group could live in the housing. For example, if only 75 percent of the residents were Greek, any number of other organizations could move into the other 25 percent, he said.

However, he said these are just options, and may change with time. The outcome depends on how much the university and groups want to spend. Ulbom said.

Currently only 12 of UCF’s 40 Greek organizations are housed on campus. The Greeks make up about 10 percent of the population of UCF students.

Christ Hartzler, director of Housing and Residence Life, said group housing maximizes the amount of students living in a space.

“I address a need for more Greek housing and provides another lifestyle option,” she said. “There are many groups who want to build who have not been able to.”

“The affiliation with Pegasis Landing and Pegasus Pointe is a direct action by the university to provide more housing for students with services that are similar to those offered in on-campus, university-owned facilities,” she said.

UCF has 1,000 beds in on-campus, university-owned housing and about the same number of beds in UCF-affiliated housing, for a total of 7,400 beds. With affiliated housing, UCF is second only to the University of Florida in bed counts.

“Due to a lack of state funding, UCF has historically had a deficit in on-campus housing,” Hartzler said. “Aggressive borrowing and building efforts over the past 10 years have added close to 2,000 on-campus beds.”

Hartzler said the private sector has entered to many students’ housing needs. “The problem has been alleviated somewhat, but the private sector has stopped in ill in the gap even further,” she said.

“Private apartments offer a variety of high-quality housing options for UCF students. Not every student wants to live on-campus.”

UCF just added 1,000 beds on-campus. There are vacancies in the private apartment complexes and some in affiliated housing.

“Since we have to pay off the bonds on our buildings, it is important not to overbuild to protect the financial integrity of the university housing system,” Hartzler said.

Hartzler expressed optimism that UCF can accommodate the housing needs of its growing population.

“I do think there will be more housing on-campus in the future,” she said. “As the current housing stock ages, I am sure that we will build more up-to-date facilities for our students.”

Most candidates support plus-only system

If, after receiving feedback from the students, they determine that the state’s organization is the addition, and Mattson said that they would take the issue to the administration and the Golden Rule committee.

"The first thing is to go back to the students and find out what they want, that we’re representing them the way that they want us to represent them," Battles said.

Andrew Houchins and Nathan Mitchell believe that the policy should be amended to include sexual orientation. "We’re not sure that he doesn’t have the jurisdiction to make such a change," Houchins and Mitchell believe that hosting the event to the students is the appropriate course of action.

"The focus is to go back to the students and find out what they want, that we’re representing them the way that they want us to represent them," Battles said.

Jeff Stepp and Aaron Clevenger also support the revision, and would lobby UCF’s administration to make the changes.

"I think all we’ve been doing by adding that is simply saying that everyone should be equal and everyone should be protected," Clevenger said.

Said Stepp, "SCA’s No. 1 goal always, is to do what’s in the best interest of the student body and to meet the needs of the student. There’s obviously a large number of students for me so I think that need should be met."

Brian Kirby, speaking on behalf of the Florida Oranges, advocated revising the policy as well.

"Every student, irrespective of their orientation, sexual affiliation or national origin, is guaranteed the right to learn in an environment encouraging tolerance, acceptance and understanding," Kirby said.

Another hot topic at UCF for the past few years has been the plus-minus grading system. Recently implemented at UCF, the system is not used much. The students surveyed stated that the system did not feel like this part students at a disadvantage and call for consistency in grading.

Talakala and Katsafanas support keeping the plus-minus system in place. They would like to see a mark of A+ added. Currently the system only includes “plus” grades for B, C, and D; although it includes an A-.

Talakala and Katsafanas also emphasized that they see no "current discontent about the system" springs from past SGA administration lack of action.

"Nothing has been done because the student government was sitting idle," Talakala said. "We want them to look at this issue, but I’m sure we’re not really possible to change."

Battles and Mattson advocated the move to a plus-only system, but emphasized that standardization is the most important issue.

"It should be across the board or not at all," Battles said. "It’s unfair to students if one class you’re implementing it in one class but not in another." Houchins and Mitchell also support the plus-only system and called for consistent standards among instructors.

"We think a plus-only system is definitely the right way to go. That’s why students aren’t punished," Houchins said. "It’s just a way to reward people for having higher scores.

Stepp and Clevenger support the plus-only option, but realize that it may be limited in its ability to fulfill students’ needs.

"We realize that while SGA can do it for them in the Florida Senate and the Board of Trustees, "Stepp said.

Kirkos called for the switch to plus-only grading, citing the University of Florida and other state universities that currently use such a system, which places UCF students at a disadvantage.

"I don’t know if it’s accurate or fair but in my opinion, we should all be on the same playing field," Kirkos said. "The minus system, I think, stinks."

Kirkos believes that taking the matter to the Board of Trustees is the best way to facilitate change.

Of course, the issue of growth always looms at UCF. Currently the second-largest Florida public university, UCF’s trajectory towards explosive growth mirrors the Central Florida region, and has earned it the nickname "Under Construction University."

Recently the Board of Trustees set a goal of enrolling 100,000 more students to UCF by 2010. The candidates have differing views on what SGA can do and we’re going to transition and help UCF in a more considerable number of 50,000 students.

Talakala and Katsafanas believe that SGA should open the lines of communication with UCF’s administration to make sure that all student issues are addressed, especially working to maintain manageable class sizes.

More important, they believe, is making sure that SGA opens itself up to everyone so that all students feel that they can contribute to the UCF community.

"It’s easy for students to feel left out or unappreciated, or if they’re just a number in the system," Katsafanas said. "Part of what we’re looking at is making sure that everyone feels included, and we get to vote for people who do things that they do."

After much research and planning, those involved in highkight the Vote feel it was successful.

"We think that the students are concerned enough about what goes on at [UCF] campus in terms of their time in something that, if successful, will make the campus more involved," he said.

Stroop believes the election is a chance to get the traditionally apathetic student body involved. "Right now, 90 percent of the offices in clubs and organizations are in the Greek system," Stroop said. "If we can get students to stand up and become involved, that’s just that the Greeks have chosen to be involved.

"It’s a shame that 90 percent of the population of the school lets 10 percent decide what to do," Stroop said. "That’s why I’d like to see a larger participation. This is a wonderful opportunity."
Peña encourages students to contact state representatives said, "The next step will be to lobby our legislators. Every student in every district of Florida should call their state senator and state representative, send them an e-mail, write them a letter, visit them in person."

Bright Futures, implemented in 1997, was modeled after a similar scholarship program in Georgia. Since its inception, the scholarship program has added more than 9,000 students. The scholarship has been funded by money raised through the sale of Florida lottery tickets. About 25,000 new students qualified for the scholarships last year.

Under a new proposal by the State University Presidents' Association, the program could be capped at $250 million by 2006. However, rising enrollment and tuition increases may require nearly $450 million in state funds by 2005 to keep the program intact.

Under the presidents' association plan, test scores and GPA requirements would be toughened and instead of covering the entire cost of tuition, the scholarship would be capped at $2,200 and tuition hikes may require legislators, Rep. Adam Hasner of Delray Beach, said the rally captured lawmakers' attention.

"The beginning of the process has been the students organizing and coming together with one voice," he said. "Now it's time to figure out a plan to keep Bright Futures as part of the state's higher education program, and the students will play a very important role in that.

"I think we want to keep true to the purpose of the program, which is to keep the best and brightest of Florida's students in Florida's universities," he added.

Florida Student Association, a group that lobbies on behalf of the state's 11 public universities, will continue to work with students to petition legislators to save the scholarship program.

"The first phase was a press conference in Boca Raton, the second was our petition drive. The third phase will be individual rallies on each campus sometime in March - each student government will do their own rally on the same day," said Scott Roth, executive director of FSA.
Living alone and loving it

"I couldn't understand it. We all had the same mailbox, and why would I want to do something like that?" Moore said. "We had one little fight over cleaning, and the next thing I knew they were trying to evict me."

Junior Erin Ressa, 20, also had several problems with roommates not paying their share of the rent and was tired of the constant struggle it entailed. She has been living on her own in The Woodlands apartment complex for about six months now.

"You don't have to worry about anyone else but yourself," Ressa said. "I know the rent will get paid and if it doesn't, it's no one's fault but mine. I have to pay a little more than I would if I had roommates, but in the long run it is worth it. You have more freedom to concentrate on more important things like classes and work, with no distractions and roommates concerns."

Like Ressa, Moore decided she couldn't live with roommates who were making her life miserable, despite the efforts made to work out their differences. Moore broke her lease and decided to move into a duplex after two months from UCF.

She still needed roommates, but this time the lease was in her name and she had the authority to choose them. Unfortunately, finding a good roommate turned out to be a difficult task.

"I interviewed four roommates bringing in the house," Moore said. "They either stole from me, were wanted by the cops or just never paid rent. I started to think maybe I attracted those people into my life." After six months of paying full rent for a two-bedroom apartment, Moore decided it was time to get her own place. She had two conditions for the apartment complex she would choose to move into; they must allow dogs and have one-bedroom apartments available.

"I love coming home and not having to deal with another person and their mess and problems. It's great to be able to walk around in your underwear or leave your towel on the floor if you feel like it."

Ressa and Moore both pay about $550 a month for their apartments. Although both of them agreed that it is much more expensive than the apartment complexes they lived in with roommates before and it is sometimes hard to pay rent on time, it is easier than when they were forced to deal with living with other people, both said.

Some of the major apartment complexes near UCF that offer one-bedroom apartments range from $550 to $750 a month, which may or may not include utilities. Most of these places do not offer the amenities of the popular student apartments, such as Boardwalk and Jefferson Commons, but also tend to not have as many rules and restrictions.

"The last apartment I lived in made me feel like I was back living with my parents," Moore said. "They had so many rules about overnight guests, and because my roommates were under 21, we couldn't even have beer in the refrigerator. I think places where you can live alone recognize you are an adult and should be treated like one."

Even though they do not have free cable and Ethernet and are forced to work 30-40 hours a week, both Moore and Ressa agreed that the best choice they made coming to college was living on their own. However, living alone is not for everyone, Moore said.

"Of course there are going to be some cons to living on your own. You get a little lonely at night, it's more expensive and you don't have as many of the luxuries included, but in a way I think it gives you more responsibility, almost a welcome to the real world."
Award recognizes ROTC program and cadets

LAURA STEVENS
STAFF WRITER

Camouflage uniforms, practice drills and attending extra classes on military leadership are not the only thing that sets the Army ROTC at UCF apart from others.

Last November the battalion received the General Douglas MacArthur Award for Best Unit of 2002. The UCF unit beat 100 Eastern district battalions from Puerto Rico to Maine, which places UCF in the top 17 units nationally.

Lt. Col. John Ruzich credit­ed this award to the work of seni­or members of his battalion at the National Advanced Leadership Camp (NALC) in Fort Lewis, Wash. NALC hosts for 32 days during the summer and cadets are trained in ways to lead a garrison when threatened with chemical warfare.

Twenty-one cadets attended the NALC last year and over 40 percent left with a ranking in their battalion's 500 cadets. Ruzich said the battalion's strength is the same among all its cadets regardless of gender.

"I am responsible for every­thing the battalion does and fails to do," Rodriguez said. "Winning this award gives me a sense of pride in my organization. It feels good to know we had done well, to know we are the best of the best," Houle said.

Although the battalion's grades at NALC was the main reason the battalion won the award, the unit also received the award because of how many officers they produced last year. Ruzich said, "We not only teach all of our cadets to be the best physically, academically and militarily, but we also train them to be the future war­rior leaders of this country, both in the military and in the civilian world."

This award recognizes the UCF Army ROTC program, and the cadre that are enrolled in it, Ruzich said. "It provides us national recognition to the many prospects that consider ROTC an essential part of their college experience."

One slate stands out to lead SGA

The Hooahuli/Mitchell ticket has the motivation we would like to see in our next student body president, and we commend them for doing to the challenges to run as the only independent ticket in the election against other slates who came into the election aided by Greek affiliations.

One day Antwone Hopehill and Nathan Mitchell may make strong student government leaders, but right now they lack the experience and knowledge necessary to serve the student body as effectively as other tickets could.

Although we do not endorse their ticket, we encourage Hooahuli and Mitchell to run for the SGA Senate, where they can gain that experience and to bring about the changes they seek.

The Streep/ClevengBr ticket has many excellent ideas that would improve life for the student body, and we are genuinely concerned about its success for our campus.

Jeff Streep and Aaron ClevengBr’s textbook-exchange idea, in particular would Seminar students hundreds of dollars by allowing students to exchange books rather than repurchase them from the book stores.

Both of the Greek-affiliated candidates have many viable solutions to the problems SGA currently faces, and believe the best way to fix them is to educate students about SGA procedures, such as requesting funding for clubs and organizations.

However Streep and ClevengBr have decided on how to handle the problems associated with UCP’s looming enrollment than other candidates — an issue entirely too important to ignore. The Talakala/Katsafanas ticket offers the student body fresh faces and innovative ideas to lead SGA forward. Pavan Talakala, an SGA senator, and Constance Katsafanas have made improving the relationship between the student body and SGA their key mission. Their slate is the only non-Greek ticket’s actions and procedures more public will earn them the trust of students who will know exactly how their voice will be being spent.

They share a united vision for UCF’s future, one that includes involvement from many more students, beyond Greek and non-Greek groups, who rushed this semester and supports the Greek system, and Talakala, an independent, would exclude other students’ involvement within the larger UCF community.

Furthermore, Talakala and Katsafanas ticket would promote certain programs that would improve UCP. Rather than eliminate the plans grading system, the candidates would like to make it uniform throughout the university and add an Aplus to the grading scale. They would work with the administration to maintain small class sizes as UCP grows, and they have vowed to work toward adding sexual orientation to UCP’s anti-discrimination policy.

Talakala and Katsafanas also want to expand Safe Ride to include shuttle service to area bars and clubs, and want to help his students in from branch campuses during Homecoming Week and to attend no major campus-wide events.

Therefore, The Future editorial staff believes Pavan Talakala and Constance Katsafanas are the most appropriate choice for student body president and vice president.

The Talakala/Katsafanas ticket is not without its faults. It lacks a plan of action on the sexual orientation issue, and Talakala does not have a clear agenda of items he would bring to the Board of Trustees.

Thus, if Talakala and Katsafanas do claim the presidency, they should not dismiss the ideas that other candidates have brought to their table. In fact, they owe it to the student body to implement any idea — whether it’s their own or another slate’s — that will enhance the lives of UCP students.

The liberal alternative

MENTAL DOODLES

CHRISTOPHER ARNOLD, Staff Writer

Daniel Flynn was on campus last week, and I missed it. I’m not saying I would have gone, mind you, but now my education is at stake. Liberalism as a topic for this column, and well, I’m regretting not having that perspective as a reference.

Flynn was in town promoting his book, “Why the Left Hates America,” and sharing thoughts on that very subject. From what I’ve gathered, it is his assertion that liberals are destroying our system of life from within — they’re evil and they need to be stopped.

Apparently this ragtag band of rebels is much less likable than the ones George Lucas wrote about a long time ago.

Well, having done a little research into the material, I can only imagine the lecture was an interesting time. Actually, I can imagine it being a number of other things, but I have those for a later time.

Anyway, this is Mental doodles, and with an opportunity to be timely, I thought it would be worthwhile to explore liberalism and see what turns up.

Normally, political matters arouse me into a physiological condition wherein my whole body turns lethargic and my eyes won’t open. I usually remain in this way for several hours or until my alarm goes off — whichever comes first.

What this means, in a nutshell, is I’m none too smart.

So let’s start at the beginning. The word liberal describes something or someone that is not limited to or established by traditional views. A liberal is free from bigotry, usually favors reform, is receptive to progressive ideas and is tolerant of others’ ideas and behaviors. Well, this certainly does sound like someone who would want to destroy America. Maybe I’m missing something.

What about some of the bigger issues? Maybe some tell-tale evidence can be found there?

When it comes to the always-controversial topic of abortion, liberals tend to view the matter as a woman’s choice. End of discussion. It is a decision only she can make and as such, her right to do so should be protected by the government.

I’m in agreement with that. Maybe I’m Liberal — but if so, does that make me the evil incarnate? So far they seem like fairly decent, idealistic people.

I should probably note at some point that these are all categorical generalizations based on party ideologies, and as such, should be taken with a grain of salt — but I’ll let you know later when I decide to do so.

Liberals believe free speech and a free press are paramount, and that censorship of any kind should never be tolerated or allowed. They promote conservation because they believe the environment needs our protection. Liberals are at least believers in equal rights. All are noble beliefs I personally support.

Liberals, however, see the vast amounts of money that have been spent on the drug war as a monumental waste and failure. They think the strongest solution to this problem is legalizing drugs.

I can’t help but think that this “answer” is nothing more than a copout. Liberals believe it to the end of Prohibition and its failure, noting that the drug war itself was organized crime just like Prohibition gave birth to bootleggers.

They rationalize that if drugs were legalized, then similar future criminals cannot develop. Personally, I don’t buy it.

Another area in which I find myself in conflict with liberal ideologies is their stance on gun control. Of course, liberal ideologies themselves seem to differ on the subject.

Some believe that all personal weapons should be made illegal. While I can support their intent to curb violence, I find issues with this method because it seems to be in direct opposition to another constitutional amendment — "the right to bear arms."

This substantially violates a person’s rights — something liberals supposedly fight for. This juxtaposition seems to form a sort of catch-22 that is either due to too little thought or too much.

Where liberals are getting the worst rap today, however, centers around Sept. 11 and the war on terrorism.

Whether it was Woody Harrelson calling the war on terrorism a “bullsh*t," or a few journalists admonishing America for the part it played in instigating the Sept. 11 attacks, liberals, as a whole, tried to maintain their ideologies, and in doing so, became perceived as “un-American” in a time when the general population was feeling a surge of patriotism.

So what is wrong with being Liberal today?

The problem I sense is not one that is limited to liberalism, but is shared by all political sides. What is wrong is not someone being Liberal, but being ultra-liberal. Just as it is being ultra-conservative, Republican, or Democrat or Green or Tory or Whig or whatever.

The ultra-partisanism of any political system rarely if ever seems to acknowledge the burden of fault when it arises. Political issues are much too compartmentalized to honestly believe that one party has all the right answers.

Sometimes it’s good to keep an open mind. Just consider one of my liberal tendencies, I suppose.

Liberal studies not easy, but exceptional

We are pleased to see the program and consider the program one of the stronger programs offered at UCF. We agree that there are numerous programs (as you feel that someone among many majors offered at UCF is in my future career). Students are seeking degrees in liberal studies at UCF because it is a safe haven for those who study liberal arts.

We have become one of the most popular programs on campus and a large percentage of our students wouldn’t have a problem getting admitted into any major on campus. We are actually the reverse major because I think majoring in liberal arts is actually as risky as that of other majors.

One of the reasons we are popular with students and not all other students is the special on one-semester major program. A general major is offered in the arts environment for this situation. The arts and other that are not in the degree in most universities are the opposite option to get helped in a wide range of fields.

FIRST HOME WIN

The UCF baseball team probably won't hit a lot of home runs this season, but the Knights' first long ball of the season had good timing. Sophomore Matt Fox took a 1-1 delivery over the left-field fence for what proved to be the winning run in Saturday's 6-5 win over Western Kentucky at Jay Bergman Field. The win was the first for the Knights at home.

UCF starter Mark Michael got himself into an early jam, giving up three singles followed by a grand slam in the first inning of his first start of the season. "I really wasn't nervous," Michael said. "They got a couple of hits and bases loaded, I got behind in the count and it was a hitters' count. I missed my spot right down the middle and he did what he was supposed to do with it." Down 4-0, David Mann scored on a sacrifice fly by Dee Brown in the bottom half of the first.

Michael settled down and didn't give up another run the rest of the way. The senior only allowed two hits after the first. "It couldn't get much worse than that," Michael said of his first inning.

Freshman Ryan Bonn helped the Knights chip away at the Hilltoppers' lead in the second. The catcher doubled to left field, scoring Ryan Bear in the third another freshman got in on the action as designated hitter Dave Lambert knocked a bloop hit over the shortstop, which scored two runs, tying the game at four.

"Our kids stepped up and hit their free-throws. That's been our Achilles heel in the past. But when you have a lead and then you're hitting [free throws] like that, you're going to be hard to beat," Coach Gail Striegl said.

Striegl's team began the game flawlessly, scoring the first six points and forcing three turnovers and two offensive fouls on Campbell's first six possessions. Campbell didn't score until the 15:40 mark of the first half, and never led by more than one point. UCF led by three at intermission.

The second half was the Jessica Striegler show. Billing's five 3-pointers off of clutch free throws by freshman Celeste Hudson and senior Erin Paige.

Knights knock off No. 15 Fresno State

MATT BETHUN
STAFF WRITER

The Golden Knights defeat­ed their first ranked opponent of the season, but dropped two of three games overall to open the Campbell/Cartier Tournament in San Diego.

On Friday, The Knights pulled in the ninth inning to defeat No. 15 Fresno State 9-2. Neither team pushed a run across until the bottom of the fifth, when Rachelle Schmitt singled home Jania Shinhoster to give the Knights a 1-0 lead. The Bulldogs answered back the next inning on a HR double by Lori Hoffman to tie the score.

The score remained tied at one apiece until the ninth inning, when Hoffman singled home Christina Clark. After a Pan West single, Dottie Cupp struck out the next two batters to escape further damage. The Knights rallied in their half of the ninth, loading the bases with one out. After Shinhoster struck out, Nikki Green lined a double to center field, scoring Psyda Simmons and Taylor Sawyer to give the Knights a thrilling 9-2 victory.

Cupp got the victory for the Knights, pitching nine innings and striking out six. All-American Jamie Southern got the loss for the Bulldogs, dropping to 1-2 on the season.

The excitement would not last long, however, as the Knights dropped both of their games on Saturday, losing to Loyola Marymount and San Diego State.

Against Loyola Mary­mount, the Knights jumped out to an early 2-0 lead in the first inning: The Lions fought back to tie the game at two, and Southern Cross singled home the winning run in the bottom of the seventh to give Loyola Marymount a 3-2 victory.

In the nightcap, UCF managed only three hits and struck out eight times, losing 3-0 to host San Diego State. The loss was the Golden Knights’ second shutout of the season.

After the first two days of play, the Knights sat at 9-7 on the season. UCF closed out the Campbell/Cartier Tournament on Sunday against U-D-Santa Barbara.

Soccer signs new players

Men’s soccer inks six

‘The UCF men’s soccer team signed six athletes to national letters of intent, Coach Bob Winch announced on Monday afternoon.

“This is a great class of player that will com­pete within, challenge and complement our program,” Winch said.

“We have added better players at every position. The difference between our season and our previous seasons has narrowed the team with our incoming talent and will help us make a stronger program.”

The six players signed were Conen Elder, Aaron Ingham, Chris Grasso, Matt Myers, Robert Rostomyan and Eric Loyd.

Elder, a defensive back from Los Gatos High School in California, was an all-league honoree and the league’s freshman of the year in 2000. In addition to playing for his team, Elder also traveled with Los Gatos United winning the Heartland Cup Championship in the Netherlands and competing in Brazil. He also trained with the Olympic Development Program in Northern California during 2000. A 6-0, 150-pound goalkeeper, Ingham is a four-year all-league honoree at Saratoga High School. He led his team to two district titles the past two seasons and the Piedmont County Athletic Conference North Championship in 2000. To date, he boasts 16 shutouts, a goals-against average of 1.3, and has been named to the American Soccer Coaches Association Region All-West honoree team. Grasso, a utility player from Islanders High School in California, was the villa­ge’s stat leader for two years. He scored 16 goals and had six assists. Matt Myers is a corners who will add good depth to the team. Myers, a defender from Our Lady of Mount Carmel High School in California, was a three-time all league honoree. fourth for UCF's first lead of the game before Wedelboll hit his homer in the sixth. UCF coach Jay Bergman was happy to see the Knights' bats explode a little bit.

"We had a lot of runners on. We had a lot more offensive situations," Bergman said. "You could kind of see the flow getting a little better and I think you'll see the flow getting better tomorrow.

"Michael pitched six and two-thirds innings for the Knights, giving up four runs on six hits. Mike Bilkie earned his first save as a Knight.

"The ball game today was identical to the game last night. The Knights could muster the rest of the way.

Billings gave credit to her teammates.

"I would have given her a double if I could have done better. It was definitely my best game this season. I just hope I can keep this up," Billings said.

Stertzbach earned the loss for UCF, fourth for the Knights, giving up four runs on five hits.

Senior Jessica Scala scored 11 of her points in the second half of Saturday's win over Campbellsville University. She went three-for-three from behind the arc in that period.

our guards did a great job of getting her the ball," Stertzbach said.

Billings gave credit to her teammates.

"We started off really well as a team, and I just wanted to contribute," Billings said. "I wish I would have had another rebound. One more rebound would have given her a double-double.

"There's stuff I could have done better, but it was definitely my best game this season. I just hope I can keep this up," Billings said.

Billings led the Knights to victory Thursday night over Gardner-Webb. Billings recorded her sixth career double-double in UCF's 74-60 win in North Carolina. She scored 12 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

The Knights led 41-30 in the first half and extended that lead to as many as 17 in the second half. Scala led UCF with 13 points, while freshman Shalyn Smith had 11 points for the Knights.

win," Abellard said.

At the end of the first half UCF lost some of its composure as the Knights' bench was called for a technical foul with three seconds left. UCF watched an 11-point lead fade into just a six-point lead in only three seconds.

Ravii Givens hit both technical free throws for a technical foul against the Hatters. The Hatters outscored UCF, 21-14, in the second half.

The Knights came out of halftime with the momentum, holding the Hatters scoreless for almost four minutes, while extending their lead to 15.

The Knights maintained control for the first seven minutes of the half, until a technical foul again sparked the Hatters. This time the tech was called on UCF's DeeDee Lyons after he was called for a personal foul. The two fouls forced him to the bench with four fouls and the Hatters cut the lead to five.

Abellard led UCF with 25 points and eight assists, while Dotson added 22 points and five rebounds. Roberto Morienti was the only other Knight to reach double-figure scoring, as the junior scored 14 points on six-of-nine shooting. UCF's 18 wins on the season surpassed last season's total and the Knights have three games left in the regular season.

Senior Ravii Givens gave Hatters' fans a performance to remember in his last home game, scoring 30 points, while freshman E.J. Gordon scored 28 points.

Joining Monday's 17 points and six rebounds weren't enough Thursday night against Jacksonville as the Knights fell 70-65. UCF started off hot with the first seven minutes of the game and the Dolphins jumped out to a 23-4 lead and took a 44-35 lead into the locker room. Ever other four Golden Knights retired double figures, but it wasn't enough as the Dolphins held on for the win.

Next up for the Knights are Troy State on Thursday and Mercer on Saturday. Both games start at 7:00 p.m.

Sigma Chi repeats

Sigma Chi used its experience and ability to knock off surprise finalists SAE in four games to win the 2003 Dodgeball League. Sigma Chi, the No. 2 seed, lost its first game of the night to the No. 31 seeded Citronauts and pushed to go undefeated for the remainder of the tournament.

The tournament got off to a shocking start, as top seed End of an Era was upset by No. 32 Terun Skoot. Skoot rode the momentum for their historical upset by defeating the aging O’Iox>yles squad to return to the finals.

Joining them in the elite eight would be the Haz Beens, who upset the No. 4 seeded Stoner Squad. The tournament wasn’t kind to the No. 3 and No. 5 seeded squads, as ATO and Pike were both walloped early on by DU and Patty Patriots, respectively. The only other top 10 teams to make it to the final eight were the Moose Knuckles and Kappa Sigma.

In the elite eight, the brackets were re-seeded, starting with the No. 20 Haz Beens against the No. 19 DU team. The Haz Beens rode the quickness of Geno Jarquin and trickery of Fephe Olvera to quiet a boisterous crowd and find a spot in the final four. Sigma Chi ended out the Moose Knuckles in the Quarterfinals, and beat them handily 50-4 thanks to Glen Lyle and Mike Romano. SAE put Cinderella to bed, as Team Street’s run ended. SAE’s Pete Perditch took his team to the final four where they would face Kappa Sigma — who plastered the Big Guips.

The semi-finals didn’t have the drama that was present earlier in the night, as Sigma Chi and SAE ran right through their opponents to the final. SAE ran out of gas in the best-of-seven championship round, as Sigma Chi’s relentless attack painted them into an early deficit. It was all over when Sigma Chi’s Ed White knocked off the final man during a two-on-one advantage to end the tournament.

NASCAR gives fans high-octane fix

BY CHRISTOPHER ARNOLD

Sophomore Chad Mazurek's girlfriend has an unusual hobby for a girl—she's a die-hard NASCAR fan and watched the 2003 Daytona 500.

For the past 15 years, sophomore Heather Hruby, 19, also has been a NASCAR-enthusiast. Hruby, who spent all last week checking NASCAR Web sites and watching the SPEED channel to prepare for the race Sunday, said that her family has gone to the race since 1987.

"I've gone to Daytona for the races since I was four years old," Hruby said. "I grew up in a family where our Sunday activities were watching the race and relaxing."

Like Brennan and Hruby, about 250,000 race fans traveled to Daytona International Speedway to watch the pinnacle event in motor sports, millions more watched on television. NASCAR fans on eBay bid as high as $760 for a single ticket to the event.

UCF sociology professor Jim Wright is so passionate about NASCAR that the race enthusiast wrote a book about the nation's obsession with NASCAR racing.

"I could talk about NASCAR for hours," he said.

Thrift-store clothing sparks latest fashion trend

Lisa Hottle
Staff Writer

Thrift stores sprouting up around Orlando cater to students such as junior Emi Kaneko, 21, who love the trendy vintage look at affordable prices.

Kaneko, used jeans are her favorite thrift-store items. Faded boot-cut jeans that sell for about $8 at a chain store can be purchased at a local thrift store for about $3—and the creases in the front are real, not machine-made. "I look for denim that looks washed and has some holes," Kaneko said.

The lure of wearing an old shirt that is back in style not only has proven to be economical and irresistible for many students, but also enticed students to jump on the "already-been-worn" bandwagon. Large corporations like Urban Outfitters and Old Navy are even taking a ride.

Heather Sander son, 24, owner of Echo Exchange, noticed the thrift-store trend about four years ago when she frequented a vintage store in Phoenix. "The store was just a warehouses full of old clothes but the crowds still poured in," she said. "I knew there was a huge market to take advantage of.

After relocating to Orlando, Sander son found an absence of used-clothing stores. After becoming the chance to tap into a neglected market, she decided to invest her creativity, fashion sense and entrepreneurial spirit into owning her own business.

"I was aware of the chance to tap into a neglected market, she decided to invest her creativity, fashion sense and entrepreneurial spirit into owning her own business.

Heather Sander son's brother Matt, 17, who is taking over Echo Exchange, knew it would not be easy due to the competition between the larger chain stores and the smaller single businesses. "You can get the same stuff here that you get there," he said. "A lot of the stuff is just as season old, especially with new, worn jeans— you can't tell the difference.

Sander son acknowledged the retail challenge. "When I first did Echo Exchange, I was just getting into the thrift-store trend. I had to face the statistic that the majority of small businesses close within the first year," she said.

But customers enter the stores for more than just clothes. Senior Mandy DeBoer, 22, said she shops at the Goodwill and Thriftstores for kitchen items and pottery from the 1970s.

"When it comes to clothing, it's hard to find something good," DeBoer said. "You have to look through everything, and a lot of the shirts are too big and old-lady stuff.

However, there are certain styles that attract more customers than others, Matt Sander son said. "Soft, floral peasant shirts are big right now. Anything that Carrie Bradshaw from 'Sex and the City' would wear sells.

The hard-core punk look from the '80s has also emerged within the last year, Sander son said. "The very latest style he has noticed is one that emulates the 70s.

"Clashed-waist dresses that are (flowy) and end at the knee sell quickly.

Although not many people wear these styles in Orlando, there is a high demand in New York for these styles, he said. "While it's not quite mainstream, college students come in a lot more than high-schoolers.

Echo Exchange features many varieties of women's clothing from the disco era to the mid '90s board shorts. The store operates by buying clothes from customers or other thrift outlets, then selling them for a little more. A seller must make an appointment to sell clothes and expect to receive 30 percent of the original purchase price.

It is obvious the new look of worn clothes has replaced the pristine style. Matt Sander son said. "I think it's because the clothes are softer to the touch and harder to find.

DeBoer appreciates that thrift stores are usually run independently. "I shop there partially because it's cheaper and partially because it's not corporate.

Junior Erikia Sain, 26, said the thrift-store trend has become so popular in her native country Japan, that it is more expensive to shop there than in retail stores. "We have a lot of beggars that go to Hawaii or New York and buy clothes for say $1 and then sell them in Japan for up to $100. It's a ripoff." Although most people are turned off by the thought of used clothing and the less organized atmosphere, it is still no reason to avoid at least going in to look around, Sander son said. "If I can get them in the door and they buy something, they'll most likely come back again and again."

The accessibility of the stars is one of NASCAR’s greatest assets and is another reason many find the sport so engaging, Wright said.

Wright said the sport has found a place in many people’s hearts because it is such a family-oriented event.

NASCAR projects a family-friendly atmosphere and many people respond to that,” Wright said.

A friend of mine says she usually has this smell when she finishes having sex and she does not know how she got it. Could she have an infection? Also, if I have my period, should I cancel my gynecologist appointment?

A potential concern associated with such an odor is infection. Whether a woman is sexually active or not, she may develop vaginitis. Three common forms of vaginitis are yeast, trichomonas and bacterial vaginosis.

A yeast vaginitis is usually caused by candida albicans and can occur after the use of antibiotics, with diabetes, or spontaneously. It causes itching and a white, clumpy vaginal discharge.

Trichomonas is a flagellated protozoan organism that causes a vaginitis associated with a frothy, foamy discharge. This can be transmitted sexually, therefore both patient and partner are generally treated.

Bacterial vaginosis is caused by a variety of bacteria. Unless the male partner has visible irritation from the head of his penis, only the patient is treated. This particular vaginitis classically causes a bad odor. Other infections that include STDs (GC, chlamydia, herpes, venereal warts, etc.) may also cause vaginal discharge and odor. Therefore, my best advice for your friend is to see one of our health providers.

In response to your second question, I would suggest that you follow through with a gynecological appointment even if you are menstruating. If you are menstruating, if this is the case, various other health issues can be raised and a partial exam be conducted. Often, the need for such an appointment is tied to the need for renewal of contraceptive pills. We can usually temporarily refill such medications pending completion of the full exam.

an Orlando Magic game.

But the funk/rap group Jupiter's Drive became the new Battle of the Bands champions. The band's hard-core style has varying influences that range from Jimi Hendrix and Bob Marley to Linkin Park and Tool.

The weathered Florida group of Jupiter's Drive is made up of Jae Melon on vocals, Randy Kettrman on bass guitar, Brandon Gibbs on drums, Jordan Donaldson on lead guitar and Max Sapper, who especially impressed the judges with his skill and ability on the turntables.

"I thought it was great. We really rocked out, we got a good response from the crowd and a positive response from the judges," Donaldson said.

Jae Melon was overwhelmed to hear they had won. "Oh man, it feels great, I can't even describe the feeling," Melon said. "We've been in competitions and we've always come in second place. To actually win, all the bands were really talented. It could have been anybody. Anybody."

For me, faith is not about rules, uncomfortable clothes, or some early AM meeting. Faith is not acting like saints on Sunday and sinners the other 6 days. Faith is about touching something larger than yourself—the Eternal One—and allowing that touch to change you. Numinous was started to connect with people who think like I do. In the process, I have found a group of friends like me who are looking for meaningful relationships and a spiritual connection.
