Construction delays could plague commutes for a year

Traffic north of campus still winds up stuck

ADAM WOOD
Corresponding Writer

While construction imposing the flow on traffic on campus wrapped up in time for the start of the fall semester, work has continued on a major artery for students living north of campus. State Road 434, undergoing a widening from two to four lanes, has made a chewed road even slower for commuters to campus. Students starting their senior year at UCF may graduate before the project completes — with an expected wrap-up around fall 2004.

The construction on State Road 434 started June 5 of last year. Weather delays and unforeseen problems have plagued the project, forcing an extension of work to late summer or early fall of next year. When it finishes, the road should be widened from unrepurposed Seminole County north of Orlando through to McGulloch Road. A segment running from Centaurus Drive to McGulloch will widen to six lanes.

According to the Florida Department of Transportation, more than 20,000 cars travel the 3.5-mile stretch of State Road 434 through Orlando. That traffic is expected to increase by 2,000 minutes per year and nearly 20,000 miles in the next twenty years. Currently, only one car per lane travelling on State Road 434 means to turn left on the four-lane stretch, traffic backs up behind it. The new road will be widened at the entrance to six lanes, offering four lanes near the south end. "(The) growth in the Orange area and of the UCF campus over the last decade, there's no question that this roadway needed to be widened," said Mary Devore, a department spokesperson.

Occasional night time closures will occur throughout the project, combined with lane shifts to temporary pavement, the speed limit through the construction area is 25 mph. Speeding fines are doubled in the work zone. Once the project completes, the speed limit will rise to 30 mph.

"State Road 434 project, which is 4.9 percent complete, is expected to cost nearly $324 million. Construction crews are working under an incentive plan, early completion of the project will earn them a bonus.

UCF's first biotech company cranks out low-cost vaccines with tobacco, carrots

The cost of medicine above Henry Daniell is bad. UCF's first biotech company this summer. The molecular biology professor has worked for 25 years in the field of vaccines, especially for his long standing contributions to the field of vaccines. He was honored at Florida's Crystal Mirror Awards Aug. 28, and he was among the list of honorees for his long standing contributions to the field of vaccines. Daniell is a pioneer in the development of vaccines, having contributed significantly to the field of vaccines. His research has focused on the development of vaccines for a variety of diseases, including cancer, HIV/AIDS, and influenza. Daniell is known for his innovative approach to vaccine development, which has led to significant breakthroughs in the field. His contributions have been recognized with numerous awards and recognitions, including the National Medal of Science, the highest honor given to scientists in the United States. Daniell has also been a vocal advocate for the importance of vaccination, and his work has helped to improve the global health landscape.

Incentives offer bonus to finish 434 faster

The incentive program is one of the ways UCF is working to encourage students to finish projects. The university has established a bonus system for students who finish their projects early. The bonus is designed to motivate students to complete their work on time, and it is intended to help the university improve its overall student success rates. Incentives have been shown to be effective in increasing student motivation and productivity. The bonus system at UCF is part of a larger effort to improve the university's academic outcomes and to support student success. By offering incentives for early completion, the university is signaling its commitment to helping students achieve their academic goals.

Replacing this fall, UCF students are provided with new test forms from their teachers. The move was prompted by UCF's testing policy. Test Scoring services on campus have revamped the design of the test results. The service is now color-coded, which makes it easier for students to identify their results. The old test forms were designed to write their personal identification numbers on the test results. The new test forms include a Security number that is only used to verify a student's identity. The new test forms also include a Scoring service that is accessible to computer Services and Telecommunications.

DEPENDING times lead to desperate measures for educators.

At times when schools face massive budget deficits, teachers are faced with a choice: cut programs or leave the classroom. In some cases, that means turning to the Internet for an hourly fee, at the UCF student union, for example. However, the wireless network allows both fast and reliable communications. Students without a wireless computer can rent one for $250 from the university's Scan & Go store, located on the main campus.

The advantage of the Internet is that it is possible to build a network of students who can work together on projects. The Internet can be used to share files and ideas, and to conduct research. It also provides a way to communicate with people around the world.

The Internet has become an essential part of education, and it is likely that it will continue to play a significant role in the future. As technology advances, the Internet will become even more powerful, and will allow educators to reach students in new and exciting ways.

With two dozen people in the audience and a mix of university officials, community leaders, and arts practitioners, the meeting focused on the future of the Performing Arts Center and its potential as a venue for the community and university. The meeting was held in the TD Waterhouse Center, with the goal of discussing the center's future and its role in the community.

The meeting began with a discussion of the current state of the Center, with many attendees expressing concern about the center's future. However, there was also a sense of optimism, with many attendees expressing hope that the Center could be saved and transformed into a thriving cultural hub.

One of the main topics of discussion was the Center's future as a performing arts venue. Attendees discussed the Center's current status, with many expressing concern about its future. However, there was also a sense of optimism, with many attendees expressing hope that the Center could be saved and transformed into a thriving cultural hub.

ARTS CENTER A VITAL STEP FOR DOWNTOWN

By Glen Henderson

Close to downtown's historic Old Courthouse is the emerging new arts center.

The old courthouse, now a site for fine arts events, is the centerpiece of the new arts district.

"It is a great idea to have an arts center in downtown," said one of the local artists. "It will provide a hub for cultural activities in the city."

Rushing for a change
Alex Haynes has helped to create a balanced offense

BRET HART
Staff Writer

This year promises to be an exciting one with the return of tailback, Alex Haynes. The junior backfield had a stellar sophomore year, rushing for more than 1,000 yards, which has been done only five times in UCF football's 13-year history. Haynes is attempting to become the school's second back to rush for 1,000 yards in back-to-back years, a feat previously accomplished by Marcus Smith in 1995 and 1996. Achieving that would be remarkable, given that UCF usually Balanced offense

As the Knights' running back for the 2003 season, Haynes proved his worth to the team and now looks to carry that success into this year. His ability to break tackles and挣 fundamental ball control have been key factors in his development as a running back. Haynes has shown consistency throughout his career, and his return to the team is crucial for the offensive line's success.

Hokies look for series sweep

In 2003, UCF quarterback Mike Clevenger led the Hokies to a 10-2 record, including a 3-1 mark in the Atlantic Coast Conference (ACC). This season promises to be even more exciting for the team, with several key players returning. MATT DUNAWAY

A playmaker is someone who steps up when it counts, a leader who brings out the best in his teammates. Atari Bigby is on his shoulders. A true warrior, he runs out of bounds and inspiringly leads by example.

On Saturday afternoon inside of Lane Stadium, two of the top defensive playmakers will square off in a ÒBig 12Ó clash in the nation.

Both are special, and their presence on the field brings national attention to special for one of the most underrated college athletes of all-time.

Bigby was twice a nominee for the Bronko Nagurski award, given to the top defensive player in the country. That kind of recognition was almost knocked off Auburn, Nebraska, Ole Miss and Virginia Tech earlier this season.

UCF's Charles Schneider is the best team that can break a team's defense in the country. That's big-time talent and respect for Schneider, the greatest quarterback in the nation.

As for DeAngelo Hall, right, he's the best team that can break a team's defense in the country.

Motivation is not a problem for either player. They know that all eyes are on them because they possess those special skills that can break a game open.

On defense, I really respect the greatness of Virginia Tech legend and replacing Steve Young as NFL legend and replaced Steve Young as the top defensive player in the country.

UCF's Charles Schneider is the best team that can break a team's defense in the country.

That kind of football talent is not always the case for Schneider.

While injuries are never good for a young profession, they sometimes tend to be blessings in disguise. In the fourth week of the 2000 season, Perez lost his starting spot for good when he separated his shoulder against William and Mary.

That injury was the beginning of something special for one of the most underrated senior athletes in the nation. Schneider came into that game and led the Knights to a 37-0 victory. Five weeks later, UCF's redshirt freshmen opened the Knights to a win over Virginia Tech.

Since taking over for Perez, Schneider has averaged more than 100 yards of total offense each week. With the team's previous starting quarterback, DeAngelo Hall, posted 55 tackles, four interceptions and a team-leading 12 pass break-ups. Schneider finished the year with 12 total tackles, four pass break-ups and a team-leading 12 pass break-ups. Schneider's performance in the Holker's was even more impressive. As a result, Schneider was named as a nominee for the Bronko Nagurski award, given to the top defensive player in the country.

For the matchups Hall was a second-team All-ACC East performer both as a defensive back and a return man. He posted 26 tackles, four interceptions and a return-leading 16 punt breaks. However, Bigby averaged 16 yards per return and brought back two returns to the end zone.

The match-up is one of the most highly anticipated and the most talked about.

On the inside of the game, though, both Schneider and Bigby have their own impressive performances. Schneider is a threat to contribute big plays not only about DeAngelo Hall, but also about UCF's schedule that started with a tough ACC opener and ended with a tough ACC opener.

That's big-time respect for Schneider, the greatest quarterback in the nation.

As for Schneider, he's looking to accomplish the one thing that no UCF quarterback has done before him. With that championship experience, he believes that this is the team to do it, too.

Dolphins release ex-Knight Fryzel

Saturday marked the end of Miami’s pre-season, and not just in the usual sense of the word. While quarterback Ryan Tannehill is simply the most prominent of Jimmy Fryzel’s brief tenure in Miami, the Dolphins decided to part ways with the former Knights’ quarterback after his release from the team. Fryzel had received 26 offers in the fifth-round draft pick, and while he failed to make the team, his performance during the pre-season was widely noted.

After the decision, Fryzel was said to be at peace with the move. "I’m ready to move on,” he declared. "I’ve had a great experience here, but I think it’s time for me to find my place in the league. I’m excited for what the future holds.”

Plenty of teams are expected to check in on Fryzel, and he will have the opportunity to show what he can do in an NLF setting. In Miami, he appeared to be a viable option, but the team decided to go with other options. Fryzel’s release comes as the Dolphins prepare to face the Baltimore Ravens on Sunday, in a game that will determine the team’s starters.

Every time we step on the field, we want to be the best team we can be,” Fryzel said. "I’ll be ready to compete, no matter where I end up.

For Miami, the decision to release Fryzel is a testament to their depth at quarterback. The Dolphins have Ryan Tannehill, Matt Moore, and Matt Schaub on their roster, and Fryzel’s release suggests that the team is confident in their ability to cover the position.

On the flip side, Fryzel’s release is likely to be a boost for teams looking for backup options. Fryzel’s stock is expected to rise, and he will have the chance to prove himself in a different environment.

If Fryzel is able to find a team that will give him a chance, he will have the opportunity to make a name for himself. For now, he will be looking for his next opportunity, and he is confident that he will find a team that will give him the chance he needs to succeed.

Haynes not concerned with offensive losses

"I'm not too concerned with our offensive losses," UCF offensive coordinator David Haynes said. "I feel like going out there and getting a thousand yards, and having the offensive line out there helping me achieve that goal and give us the chance to change for bigger and better things."

Haynes knew the importance of an effective passing game.

"Last season we had two quarterbacks (Glenn Fryzel and Doug Gabriel) that were great and balanced, but in the offensive yardage, they were average, with explosive yards," Haynes said. "They really had to have the pressure off me. That helped open the offense up more, but I felt like we're going to depend more on the running game this year."

The losses of Fryzel and Gabriel have given the opportunity for some younger players to see more and make names for themselves. Wide receiver Wide Davis, tight end Tim French, and running back Tajh Davis are coming to the Knights go-to players at wideout.

Haynes has confidence in the young receivers. "We have a lot of young guys, but I still feel our receivers are going to make big plays," he said. "To not get big yards, but I'll get a few more scores.""Shuffling the backfield with Haynes will be running backs Dion Wade, Nick Dries, and Dee Anderson. Dries is the most of the running backs, gives the rest after having Curry was dismissed from the team because of academic reasons. Haynes knows that losing Curry will hurt but has an excited for the new start ing ballhounds.

"I'm excited for Dee, he's been around us, we still needed Andrew," Haynes said. "We're really excited to get our success last year and go on to him, but Dee will step up and do the job well. It would be great to have both of them. Whatever hap pens, it's tough but we have to go forward. Dee is great for the job. All three of us are good friends."

Knight fans will see a new look on offense this season. Although Schriner is attempting to become the No. 3 NCAA quarterback for career passing yards this season, the team will have much more of a balanced offensive attack and one the most balanced offensive in UCF history.

"I feel like this is the new season, because we're playing with a new dimension," Haynes said. "Coach Kenrock has never really had a running back that could do what they could do. If I'm fortunate enough to go for opportunity and last season, I just stuck it and ran with it. I showed we can run the ball. So I feel Like last said we could show in the running attack."

This season, the team will be bigger than the past. That past generated big-size of difficult in the possession, he said, but overall things have been relatively smooth.

"I'm just growing pains," he said. "We have a lot of young guys coming out here, and we just have to teach them the ins-and-outs, the rules and how things go. I feel like they're picking it up pretty well, but I think everyone looks good for a young group. I think we're really moving a team now." I was fortunate enough to get the opportunity and started to go for career, Dee will have a lot of fun this year."

Haynes had a few minor injuries last season but feels great entering this one. "I feel like I'm 100 percent," Coach Kenrock said. "I'm feeling good, getting hanged up too much, so I'm pretty much healthy and the people that are hurt are getting healthy."

Punk rock “Authority” back again

MIKE RIGEL
Staff Writer

For the last 16 months, Bill Marcks and his fellow bandmates in Authority Zero have been touring the country. They’ve played hundreds of shows, opening for Sum 41, playing music-players on the Sarge Warp Tour and most recently playing a number of shows with primalya Moon.

It’s understandable why Marcks can talk so ardently about going home to Mesa, Ariz. Even with a strip-per of soft phone connection, he says the word “home” and makes it sound like it has suddenly become a forieyta-world and the ultimate purpose of the good life.

But he’s not home, nor for another three weeks, right now he’s in Florida, preparing for the band’s last show of the U.S. tour, at least until the next tour. Despite the hectic schedule and the hectic punk-rock shows, he still finds the time to think and make some of his “old friends” at the

Some students might make a band playing an acoustic set outside the Student Union almost a every day. This band is comprised of 10-year-old Jason Deluna, drummer Alex Hires, bass player Jeremy Wood and guitarist Molly. They were celebrating the release of their second album, “Live in Time,” and the sale of their first single, “One More Minute.”

Florida is a great place, and there are great courses,” Marcks says. “It’s real comfort in being in a hotel...” he adds, talking about how the finances in Florida are often similar to those of Mesa. The compact cities where he’s lived in, because he’s been here in Florida for a coupla years and spent the season of their first single, “One More Minute.”

That’s where you’ve already seen Authority Zero playing in the last year-and-a-half eight-shuffle tomatoes’ in the last and First Band because they’ve been really at it since. Marcks suggests that there won’t be anyone that he’s not heard. In Mesa, Marcks explains.

“We’ve been writing new stuff and playing it during soundcheck,” he said. “We’ve been playing a couple brand new songs every night. After playing the same songs for such a long period of time, it’s understandable that they’re looking to expand not only the set-list, but their creativity.
