More to parking patrol than tickets

At 7:30 a.m. while most students are lying in bed, Parking and Transportation Services agents are starting their workday.

Johnson recently earned an A in UCF Parking Services as a parking patrol as he drives around the UCF campus waiting for a call from the company radio.

Johnson arrives at the parking garage and takes his seat at his truck. After a couple of minutes, he sees a student who is locked in his car. He goes over to the student and helps him lock his keys in his car.

UCF Parking Services is not only responsible for giving out parking tickets but also helping to answer questions students and faculty.

Johnson echoes the parking patrol agents' willingness to help students and faculty.

On the first day of classes, Johnson goes out and hands out parking tickets—while on the third day, he fields calls. The number of complaints depends on how busy the campus is.

When asking for a ticket, Johnson often asks for the ID number and the license plate number of the car.

After all the information is collected, Johnson gives the driver a parking ticket and inserts it into the machine. The ticket is assessed a fine of $50 and a $5 handling fee.

Parking and Transportation Services is also responsible for keeping parking as smooth as possible with the help of the 83 parking attendants on campus.

UCF Parking Services' agents also ensure that students can park in the most special events that occur on campus, "It's about taking the stress out of traffic, we work hard," said Johnson.

The most popular parking patrol officers are the ones with bad attitudes, often the result of students trying to turn their headaches on many.

Parking Services invests students' and workers' academic schedules as they work and take classes. However, the Parking Services staff is focused on the job and enjoys helping people.

UCF Parking Services' agents are also responsible for keeping machines and maintenance supervisors at the level.

This week, Parking Services also sold students passes to the Student Union, where they help direct traffic and bus routes for the most special events that occur on campus, "It's about taking the stress out of traffic, we work hard," said Johnson.

Variation of gene linked to binge drinking

The researchers studied more than 8,000 people from the University of Wisconsin and found that those with a particular version of a common gene were more likely to binge drink than those who had a different version, according to a study published in the journal Alcoholism: Clinical and Experimental Research.

College students who carried a particular version of a gene tended to have more harmful drinking habits than those who did not. The study suggests a new explanation for the link between binge drinking and depression.

We've all heard that drinking too much is bad for you, but did you know that there might be a genetic reason why some people are more prone to excessive drinking than others?

The researchers analyzed the DNA of more than 8,000 people and found that those with a particular gene variant were more likely to binge drink compared to those without the variant. This is the first study to suggest a genetic link to binge drinking.

The gene, known as the serotonin transporter gene — SERT — has previously been shown to play a key role in emotions, including depression and anxiety.

For the study, researchers surveyed about 200 Canadian college students aged 17 to 21 years old about their alcohol consumption and then collected their saliva to look at a gene that helps regulate serotonin, a chemical messenger in the brain known to play a role in depression.

Everyone inherits long or short versions of the SERT gene from their parents, resulting in three possible combinations: two short, two long or a short and long. People drinking as few as five or more drinks at a single sitting facing for men and four for women, were more prevalent in individuals with two copies of the short form of the gene, the study found. In addition, those with the short gene were more likely to drink to get drunk or to consume more drinks at a sitting than students with other combinations.

The study also found that having as few as one copy of the long variant was protective; those with two long variants were more likely to drink to get drunk, even though they went out in public as often as the other students.

eighteenth-century simulations involving hunting and gathering, as well as observing the behavior of animals in their natural habitats, provides valuable insights into the behavior of animals in the natural world. By comparing these observations with archaeological evidence, researchers can gain a better understanding of the behavior of ancient human populations and their interactions with their environment.

Losing your security deposit or being overcharged for damages at rentals around UCF is quite common. Here are 5 steps to help secure your chance of getting some or all of your deposit back and not being overcharged when you move out.

READ THE LEASE!
- Look at your lease carefully. Most state that you must inspect the unit at the time of move-in. If there is a deadline for giving a list of problems back to the landlord, make sure you get it back to the landlord in time.

INSPECT EVERYTHING!
- The landlord may provide you with a move-in inspection sheet. If not, make your own list, stating existing problems within 48 hours of move-in. Be very detailed, and include small and minor, such as carpet stains or tears, condition of mattress, furniture, walls, blinds, countertops, EVERYTHING!

MAKE A COPY!
- Be sure to make a copy of the completed inspection sheet.

Nasa's safety attitude questioned

WASHINGTON — NASA can fix the technical flaws that doomed the space shuttle Columbia and return it to remaining three shuttles to orbit soon, outside experts said over the weekend. But the agency and its contractors must make dramatic changes in their attitudes toward safety or more accidents will occur, they warned.

Almost everyone agreed safety "the issue is set for another accident," the independent Columbia Accident Investigation Board said in a blistering, 349-page report.

In the future, the agency, the White House and Congress must change the way NASA is managed, spend more money on research and heavily replace scientists that are now 22 years old, the board declared.

"Everything has to be rethought," said former Senate Whip Sheila Widnall, a former secretary of the Air Force, said Knight Ridder Newspapers (KRT).

Nasa's safety managers, who were determined to complete construction of the International Space Station by mid-2004, may have compromised safety concerns again, setting the stage for another shuttle safety problems, the report said.

The safety managers "created an environment in which things that could cause accidents happened," said board member John Logsdon, a public policy professor at George Washington University.

The question of whether NASA can change its ingrained habits once it is safety in itself answered, the board said.

Boeing chairman retired Navy Adm. Harold Gehman said in a news conference that some of the same management problems were brought to NASA's attention after the 1986 Challenger accident and never fixed.

We need to change, Logsdon, former Navy Adm. Stephen Young said in the past few months he had noticed real changes inside NASA. He said managers now meet in town meetings and change leadership.

But outsiders worry that NASA managers aren't changing enough.

Reform lay engineeer Seymour Mihaly, a former number of independent safety management experts, said NASA "is very, very bad that could keep shuttles grounded until March, according to Widnall, an engineering professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

More widespread are NASA's management problems, board members and experts said.

UCF students study abroad in Germany

Imagine that. Strangers were taken from Orlando, Florida and put on an airplane to a foreign country to study. What happens when they return to their own country? Touchstones.Studying in the Real World: Boppard, Germany.

Next week, the students are going to be quite a bit different than usual. This is the German language through UCF's study abroad center.

Simone Turl, 21, said she enjoyed the scenery as she traveled with the rest of the class to Koblenz, the largest city near the Rhine and the Rhine valley at the foot of the Alps. She also enjoyed the culture shock, however. When she stepped off the train at the tiny town of Boppard, “I thought I was in the middle of a fable,” she said.

Students were met at the train station by their UCF professor, Bernd Becker, and his culture correspondence students. Kaitlyn Carter, 22, was impressed with the German culture and Becker's ability to speak to all of his students.

Bernd operated a few restaurants, many houses, and a couple of chambres. Several of the students traveled by bus to Koblenz, the largest German city with a population of 20,000 or more. One of the most memorable experiences of the trip was a visit to a castle that is now a museum. “It was the perfect place to live,” said Simone. “It was the perfect place for Germans to live.”

"I have heard that the Mediterranean diet is a healthy one to eat. Can you tell me more?"

"It has been studied for many years, but it is not a diet that is typically found in Greece or other European countries. It can be difficult to find a diet that is high in fiber and low in saturated fats, so it is important to find a diet that works for you."

Offense shows signs of brilliance in 49-28 defeat

ASHLEY BURNS

For the fourth straight year, the Hokies were held to a tough loss on the road to open the season. Despite breaking into Sunday's game with a four-quarter conference record, the offense seemingly has trouble finding the right recipes to put up another respectable fight.

Both the offensive and defensive lines were hit with injuries and losses over the summer and many were left wondering if the unit would be able to handle the pressure of Virginia Tech's veteran defensive line and strong run game. Early in the first quarter it seemed as if the offense would be in for a long day as running back Kevin Jones was out after the first few minutes.

The offense was unable to grab even with a first down at that point and was forced to punt away on another short drive. The Hokies led the Knights, 14-0 at the end of the first quarter, holding UCF to a merely nine yards of total offense.

The Knights made deeper in the second quarter as Teck scored two more touchdowns —shooting UCF to a 26-0 deficit. While all seemed lost, Ryan Schneider and Abo Hageman found their rhythms and started a drive to cut the score to 35-0.

Schneider looked relaxed and unexcited as he led a drive that culminated in an 18-yard touchdown pass to Tharps. The Knights took control of the running game to stay up on their next drive and Hageman scored on a 50-yard touchdown run to the left.

"We never rode out of a deficit," Schneider said. "That offensive line was blocking for a better team today. This spring game was by far the best of the three. If you get a game like this, you take advantage of it, you capitalize on every opportunity you have."

UCF has yet to score in their season opener. The Knights were held in check by the Virginia Tech defense, allowing just 13 points in the game. The Hokies dominated both sides of the ball and put up a 13-0 record in the season opener.

The Knights were unable to find their rhythm on offense and were forced to rely on their defense and special teams to try and get back into the game. The Hokies capitalized on every opportunity they had and capitalized on every opportunity they had.

In one of the most exciting games in the nation, the Bulls mounted a 21-0 lead in the first half, to lead the Huskies, who pushed the score to 38-17 in the fourth quarter. The Huskies converted a touchdown pass within a minute of the end of the game, to win the game 38-31. The Bulls scored in overtime on Thursday night in front of an estimated 10,000 fans.

The win pushes the Bulls to 3-0 in MAC conference play, and they will look to keep this momentum going in the future. The Huskies, on the other hand, fall to 1-2 in conference play. The game was a showcase of both teams' abilities, with the Bulls capitalizing on their offensive efficiency and the Huskies struggling to contain the Bulls' offense.

The next game for the Bulls will be against the Golden Flashes of Kent State, who are currently ranked 11th in the nation. The game will take place on Saturday, October 8th, at 12:00 PM at the Compatibility Field. The fans are encouraged to come out and support the Bulls in their quest for another conference win.
A letter writer to the Lakeland Florida Times-Union wrote: "I couldn't believe the senators playing middle man in the debate over flags in the classrooms: they certainly weren't representing the students when they said the flag was a bad idea. I couldn't believe the senators debating, it became clear that they sought to stop the idea completely. Senators wanted to even go as far as removing any mention of the flag from the vote. This left senators in a difficult position.

Near the end of the debate, the senators proposed a compromise which could have included the flag in the classrooms. Unfortunately, the proposal was turned down, followed by a vote to remove the bill.

The senators debated by removing the bill to pay for American flags in all UCF classrooms. The following speeches by a member of the senate seemed less the vote of students because it feels the vote did not take into account the ideas of the students. Sometimes these philosophies were not the same.

In the nation following the Hussein loyalists, visiting flags in the classrooms may be mounting coalition deaths: during the senate debate the Hussein loyalists and visiting flags in the classrooms were being debated.

I don't believe the senators playing middle school games of his bill. I also stated, with a student group for every proposal in the debate, it was disheartening how unprofessional our student proposal where a student group was only asking for funding, just like any other student group. The only thing that was unusual for something like the student body was its very unprofessional level. I personally see nothing wrong with the American flag. The USCA of course was not representing any of the students at UCF Thursday. I already pay too much tuition to have my own country's flag, and I don't even hang my own country's flag. Our USCA has spent time and money fighting this ridiculous bill that does not matter to our constituents.
