Visitors beware: You will be towed

FRANK KOSHEL

Many students who are new to the UCF area have become frustrated finding their cars after visiting friends or attending events. It’s not because they’re new to Orlando, but because their car has been towed.

In recent weeks, UCF parking officials, UCF University Housing, Community Standards and Boarding, and police officers have stepped up patrols and increased the number of parking officers. The university has also increased enforcement of parking policies, which include penalties for improper parking.

These efforts are part of a larger initiative to improve parking at UCF. The university has invested in new technologies and increased staffing to address the issue of parking violations.

One of the major concerns is the limited availability of parking spaces, especially during peak hours. The university is exploring options to increase parking capacity, such as constructing new lots and improving existing ones. Additionally, the university is considering implementing dynamic pricing to encourage off-hours parking.

“I think the university is taking a serious approach to the parking problem,” said a student who recently found their car towed. “It’s not just about the inconvenience, but also the cost. I mean, who wants to spend money on parking?”

The university’s goal is to provide a safe and accessible parking environment for all students, faculty, and staff. They are continuously evaluating and improving their parking policies to meet the needs of the community.
Students say Patriot Act costs the price

"You don't want out of school for it, but still, it's a very important day."

The tribunal for the Patriot Act trial opened on Friday, Sec. 19, which has been designated "National Week of Remembrance day." This is done in an effort to raise awareness about the Patriot Act and its impact on American society. The trial, which took place in federal court, was attended by activists and lawyers from across the country. The trial was held in a federal courthouse in Washington, D.C., and was open to the public.

The opening statement of the Patriots Act trial is a very important day, according to the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). The ACLU is a national organization that works to protect individuals' rights and liberties. The ACLU's statement said, "The opening of the Patriot Act trial is a very important day, not just for the ACLU, but for all Americans."

"Patriot Act" was rendered in the trial, and was attended by many people who were concerned about the Patriot Act.

Washington, D.C. — For several days after Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld fled an angry ceremony at the Pentagon, White House lawyers kept a low profile.

Their appearance, after the Army's top military officials were criticized for their handling of a ceremony last week in which a family of Serbs who were killed by the Army was offended, was the first time the legal team had spoken in public since the incident.

"Everybody has made a mistake on the issue of semantics," White House spokesman Dan Bartlett said. "It was a very public mistake that we're dealing with." Bartlett said the incident was a "wake-up call" for the administration.

But even as the White House sought to deflect criticism, some legal experts said the incident could have larger implications.

"This is a very serious issue," said Michael Gerhardt, a constitutional law professor at the University of North Carolina. "The problem is that the administration is not taking it seriously enough."

Gerhardt said the administration's handling of the incident was "unacceptable" and that it would be "very difficult to sweep this under the rug." He said the administration should have taken more immediate action to address the incident.

But White House officials said they were taking the incident very seriously and that a full investigation was under way.

"We are taking this very seriously and we are doing everything we can to make sure this never happens again," said Marta Marquez, a White House spokesperson. "We are committed to making sure this never happens again."

Meanwhile, the family of the slain Serb, the mother of a baby who was killed by a US soldier, was demanding a meeting with President Clinton.

"We want to know what happened to our son," said Dr. Miroslava Ristic, the mother of the baby, who was killed by a US soldier in the Kosovo conflict.

"We want to know what happened to our son," she said. "We want to know what happened to our son."
Enron connection kept White House under pressure early

During the interview, White was seated in the spacious living room of his Georgetown apartment in Washington. At the interview, White declined to discuss the price of the buyer, saying both parties are covered by a confidentiality clause. He plans to move back to Houston soon and expects to run for the Texas Senate.

"Personally, I've always admired the old system and have considered the service as the proper lead time to mobilize. The Army was seen as an army of military and corporate lawyers, didn't get it - didn't get this concept," White said. "I think he was of the view that somehow an army like servicemen, didn't get it - didn't get the business of transformation or modernization," White said. "And we were always lifted or characterized as being episodic and repetitive to change." White considered the characterization wrong. In recent years, White said, the Army has invested heavily in such transformational programs as the Future Combat System. While acknowledging the Army has been slow to restock its corps and divisions, White said, "I think his fundamental view was that we as an institution, and as a society, haven't done enough in the area of discipline and training." White was not sure if he would have agreed with Rumsfeld on this point. "I don't even think that he understood what he was getting into," White said.

"Perhaps I have tremendous respect for him. He's a man of enormous talent and energy and has really been a very strong secretary of defense." White also praised the military's overall operation in Iraq, but in addition to being critical of postwar planning, he faulted Rumsfeld for the way troops were deployed in the run up to the fight. Instead of sticking with the military's detailed schedule - the time-phased force deployment list that Rumsfeld dispensed with - instead of an immediate the promise, White said.

"The whole deployment plan was restructured into a series of small packages, all of which had to be separately, White said. "That process caused a lot of problems with the secretary, and decisions would be delayed, and it would not work well with reserve units that didn't get proper lead time to mobilize. It was not done in a well-thought fashion and it was due to the staffing of people that caused a lot of human suffering."

The secretary wanted to run it, he wanted control, White added. "I think his fundamental view was that we as an institution, and as a society, haven't done enough in the area of discipline and training." White was not sure if he would have agreed with Rumsfeld on this point. "I don't even think that he understood what he was getting into," White said. "Perhaps I have tremendous respect for him. MILWAUKEE (AP) — Single mother and Sgt. Dominica Grims, who served in the Army during the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, said she won’t return to active duty. She said it’s too difficult to get her mother’s support.

"I hear that from just about everyone that I get in touch with," said the soldier, who plans to retire from the Army later this year.

"It’s not that I don’t want to return," she said. "I just don’t want to go back to the same old life."

Lucky O’Shady: four-leaved fun

Irish eyes smiling at local band

VANESSA PASTORE

People commonly associate the Irish with drinking, but it’s definitely more than that. Patrick’s Day parties, parades, and clinking glasses may be the first thing that comes to mind when people think of Irish culture. However, it’s important to remember that it’s not all about drinking. Many Irish people take their heritage seriously and enjoy celebrating their culture in a variety of ways.

One of the latest bands to follow this Irish tradition is Dublin-based Lucky O’Shady. The band features three Irish-American siblings: Markley, O’Shady, and McNally. They grew up in New Orleans and Miami, but the band was formed in Dublin, Ireland. The three siblings met while playing in various bands around the city and decided to come together to create Lucky O’Shady.

Their music is a unique blend of Irish and American influences, creating a sound that is both familiar and new. The band’s music often features traditional Irish instruments such as the bodhrán and uilleann pipes, but also incorporates modern rock influences.

The band’s lead singer, Markley O’Shady, is a member of the McNally family and is known for his powerful vocals. He is one of the band’s founders and has been playing music since he was a child. Markley’s brother, O’Shady, is the band’s guitarist and has been playing music for most of his life. The third sibling, McNally, is the band’s bassist and has been playing music for over 10 years.

The band’s music is not just about having fun, but also about creating a positive message. They want to inspire people to be happy and to live their lives to the fullest. Lucky O’Shady believes that music has the power to bring people together and to bring joy to their lives.

The band’s latest album, “The Lucky O’Shady Project,” is a collection of songs that showcases their unique sound and style. The album features a mix of traditional Irish music and modern rock influences, with Markley’s powerful vocals taking center stage.

The band is currently on tour, performing at various venues across the United States. They recently performed at the Irish Festival in Boston, Massachusetts, and are planning to perform at the St. Patrick’s Day parade in New York City.

Lucky O’Shady is a band that is all about having fun and creating positive vibes. They want people to come together and enjoy the music, no matter what their background or style. Whether you’re Irish or not, everyone can appreciate the joy and energy that Lucky O’Shady brings to their performances. So, grab your friends and head to a Lucky O’Shady concert to experience the magic of Irish music in a whole new way.

Another 3-0 weekend for volleyball

MATT DUNNawy

The UCF volleyball team swept the Western Michigan Wildcats in straight sets to open its conference season and extended its winning streak to seven matches.

Head coach Meg Odenbach praised her team for its defense, mentioning the role of senior middle blocker justin Krieger, who had a double-double with 11 kills and 10 blocks.

Senior setter Jessica Frey distributed 41 assists, while outside hitter Mireya Arroyo chipped in with 13 kills and a hitting percentage of .557, outside hitter Mireya Arroyo chipped in with 13 kills and a hitting percentage of .557.

The Knights continued their winning streak by defeating the Golden Hopes in three sets, extending their conference record to 4-0. With the win, the Knights also improved their overall record to 14-1.

UCF is now tied for second place in the conference, just one game behind the co-leaders. The team will look to continue its winning ways as they prepare for their next conference match against the Temple Owls.

Opinions

Patriot Act protesters are true patriots

Students worried that the government has too much power to dig into the lives of regular people. They say that the actions of the FBI and the CIA are too aggressive.

Their petals want the local government to ignore the violations of their civil rights. They have joined in the related protests since Sept. 11, 2001, which gave the government more power to investigate suspected terrorists.

While UCSC student chapters of the American Civil Liberties Union and the American Civil Liberties Union Freedom Coalition are critical of the law, so are members of Congress who voted for the law.

This particular section of the act continues its own argument, over the work on the sequel has already started.

The bill was sponsored by President George W. Bush, and it was passed by Congress.

When the original act was passed in October 2001, it was signed into law by President George W. Bush. The law had an enthusiastic response from the public.

Law enforcement can also use roving wiretaps—techniques that can be used to tap into the phone conversations of anyone, the investigator to tap any computer in the world.

Shriver's argument is that the line between a war on terrorism and a war on the American people is not a clear one.

Shriver believes that the government has too much power to dig into the lives of regular people.

The Patriot Act has both a good cause, at heart. The law is designed to protect the American people from terrorism.
