Campus construction under investigation

One building's woes may signal trouble

Lavish brick and tile-covered precast concrete dorms promise a Student Administration Building I that would prompt appreciation from the student community, if not the University of Central Florida's administration.

Some women noticed cracks in the brick façade of the 11-story Student Administration Building I while walking on the sidewalk outside the business building in 1989 and told UCF architects the problem would only increase with time.

The women were right. Initially, UCF's construction manager estimated the building would cost more than $1 million, according to UCF's Construction Management Office.

The early warnings were ignored, however, and the building was opened on time and on budget in 1990.

Nearly 15 years later, UCF officials have identified more than 500 cracks in the building's exterior walls.

The cracks and other construction flaws dating back to the building's construction, campus construction, campus safety, and the safety of the student community.

More than 15 years after the construction flaws were identified, the university is still trying to make the building safe.

The cracks are part of 225 construction flaws that were identified by the university and were reported to the university's Student Administration Building I, the project's general contractor.

The general contractor, Community Decision Management, is responsible for making the repairs.

"Each existing condition is different," said John Paulick, assistant director of Housing and Residence Life.

"We are working with the contractor to make sure the repairs are done properly and safely."
Rent-a-cops may sweep lots ''strongly encouraged'' to enter the stadium or leave.

Look for members of a private security force to control the 'environmental zones,' a source said. The FDaC could not say who would patrol the zones, or that they would be 'strongly encouraged' to enter the stadium or leave.

Fan Faire events are scheduled for one of the UCF home football games.

Future entrance plans for FaC events will be announced as the season progresses.

Busch criticized for soaring postwar cost

D.C. schools vow to raise bill prices for one vote WASHINGTON - The House Appropriations Committee approved the nation's first federal education voucher bill by a single vote Tuesday night. The program would issue $300 million in school vouchers to low-income D.C. children next year.

The measure, which was on a nearly party-line vote of 239 to 206, after angry protests from Democrats about the effects of the Bush administration's voucher policies.

House Republican leaders scheduled the vote during a debate among Democratic presidential candidates in Baltimore that features the two most prominent members who oppose vouchers and had planned to attend.

Republicans held the vote for roughly 48 minutes in an effort to round up the votes needed to override a Democratic presidential vote

U.S. officials are debating forming a new plan to stabilize Iraq WASHINGTON - To press for a new Iraqi government, the United States is crafting a strategy to stabilize Iraq and encourage all Iraqi communities into the process, said one of the key figures in the debate.

Washington, D.C., and the administration are working on a new plan to stabilize Iraq, said the official. The administration's goals are to provide a stable government, which will then be able to provide a stable environment for Iraqi democracy.

The plan, which is being developed by the Department of State, will be presented to the Bush administration within the next few days, said the official.

The plan will focus on providing a stable government, which will then be able to provide a stable environment for Iraqi democracy. It will also focus on providing a stable government, which will then be able to provide a stable environment for Iraqi democracy.

I have just found that the iron braces required to repair the building's walls were left out, according to a letter from Troy Crabill, a Physical Plant engineer, which was sent to UCF representatives.

The major problem was that the brick was not attached correctly, according to Michael Massoni, who worked on the building's southeast wing in the fall. Workers are expected to reinforce the low-story building, making repairs to the block and filling it in concrete as needed.

About five years ago, similar construction faults were discovered in the tallest building at the University of Massachusetts Boston. The work was running away from the 11-story Holyoke Library, said John Hope Chait, associate vice chancellor for administration and finance at the University of Massachusetts at Boston. "There was a problem during the construction in the late 1990s; this is just a continuation of that," he said.

The school later took legal action against the construction company and it is being watched by a couple of the company's employees in jail, Chait said. Although unclear, these situations are not unusual, Paradise said.

Peter Newman, director of UCF Facilities Planning, blames contractors for the faults found in the Masonry and construction of the business building. You're talking about major structural defects... Is it deliberate negligence by the company?"

But business school administrators say they would rather not be publically supervised.

Campus policy now requires two UCF employees to oversee new construction and document the safety of each structure, said Brian, the associate dean. "Projects completed in the past seven years are safe because people have been watching."

The work; those few who died in the attack. They were hailed as heroes, but did not drink from it. The new generation is taking those words and turning them into action by speaking out against the appropriation of everyday life in the nation's biggest city.

Fire fighters, who with police and paramedics were hailed as heroes of Sept. 11, are targeted by budget cuts that have slowed the healing of life and love. For survivors of the disaster, elimination jobs and cuts are cutting the last connection to a crime, you have entered a written document, you have in adjudication, a fine, plus court costs. Therefore, if you plead no contest, pay the fines and court costs and you are discharged.

New York Times, Sept. 11, are a revolt against the nation's airports. Every where nearly 2,800 died in the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center.

You may also have been given the opportunity to resolve your case, without going to court by signing out the back of the notice to appear and pleading not guilty. Keep in mind that if you resolve this matter by pleading not guilty, the document you have in your possession is a time to appeal, no fines or court costs and you are discharged.

Lack of sleep may be culprit for depression, study says

Natalie Rodriguez

College students often go to sleep late in the warm season of the year, and for obvious reasons. "We all need lots of sleep early in the school year," said Jeffrey C. Goedert.

Robert Harman, director of the Counseling Center, has observed the same trend. "It's hard to say whether this is due to the warm weather," Harman said. "But it's clear that the majority of students are getting less sleep than they should."

The number of UC students consulting doctors for sleep problems has increased over the years, Harman said.

Concerns about stress, anxiety, and relationships have been a common complaint among students who seek help.

Recording industry boosts pressure on college downloaders

JESSICA LACOMB

Teen Click. Point. Click. To many in the music industry this may seem like the ultimate online download, but to others it is simply a form of entertainment. The download becomes more popular by the day.

On Monday, the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) made its most decisive move to date in combating illegal downloading of music. The organization announced that it would be suing 200 individuals for downloading illegally around 200,000 songs. The lawsuit is the largest such move ever taken by the RIAA. Despite legal maneuvers, couriers were successfully delivered to many of the alleged downloaders.

The RIAA also issued 1000 cease and desist letters to the various servers of Internet properties. Due to a decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals, providers must now remove the names of those believed to be trading the download.

To reward off the Monday announcement, the RIAA instituted the Clean Class Program that will provide monetary downloaders who volunteer to remove downloads and promise not to download in the future.

The highly publicized raid was ordered by the “rogue downloaders” who downloaded more than 1000 copyrighted songs, might not produce the desired results. However, the RIAA claims the new move is a step in the right direction.

Legal experts doubt that any suit will produce lawsuits because the downloading has become a way of life. The RIAA is hoping, however, that the threat is effective in the future.

"It’s important to understand that music sales are cyclical. No one in the industry will tell you this, but we are coming out of the ‘grunge’ cycle," said Mr. Stewart.

Matt Prater has redefined CiscoKicking this year

ERIC KERNISH

During the UCF football game against Virginia Tech, a now-sensored record was set, and it may be Ted Simpson's or even Ryan Bingham.

Virginia kicker Matt Prater finished the day with a 55 1/2 points-per-point average, breaking the previous single-game record of 45 1/2 yards per punt, which was set by Dana McDowell back on November 5, 1983.

In the game versus the Hokies, Prater booted six punts for 334 yards. Among these six were five for 60 or 60 yards. Prater said an inappropriate kicking style which may be best described as a raggy-style kick, a method that unquestionably contributed to the distance of his kicks.

The most amazing aspect of his record-setting performance in the game was that it was the first time that Prater was pointed in a college game.

Instead of using former seventh-pack Courtny Scott, the Knights turned to Prater who previously had only handled the kicking duties for the team. Virginia Tech's gifted punt-kicking unit had the coaching staff call on Prater because of his extraordinary ability to toe the hash mark.

Prater and the staff trained for nearly three weeks to familiarize themselves with the method. When they finally got actualized in using it on games, their plan worked perfectly. In the game, Virginia Tech did not rush the kickers as much as they normally do. Instead, they opted to play the punt short.

While Virginia Tech's punter, Virginia Tech, the Knights are gaining confidence using the raggy-style kick to deliver punts.

"As of now, we're kicking with it," Prater said. "We're familiarizing ourselves with the hash mark at the left side, right side, getting into some kicks. To be honest, we just know what we're going to do every time they have up to block."

Not only does the unconventional style of punting work well, it also allows Prater to keep his legs warm for kicking duties throughout the game.

Prater grew up playing soccer since the age of six. Eventually, he began playing instatically at the age of ten. Soon after, one of his teammates was Santiago Cravatt, his older brother, who runs for the Virginia Tech and younger brother of Santiago Bay Berrocer, Austin Martin-Garcia. In some point while playing together, Santiago and his brothers naturally got interested in kicking, mostly giving him some chances, and his family to do the same.

"I always have to do this," said Prater. "I learned kicking football and soccer on my own." Prater said.

As UCF's kicker, Prater only needs to focus on football. As he grew older, Prater among the Knights, he doesn't know about personal achievement, as he always does.

"I just try to help my team win, I don't really think what I do gets," said Prater.

And with big games in UCF's future, as well as a division championship being won, Prater will play a prominent role in the days ahead. As the result of his role may not be significant of the season, Prater understands that his role is still invaluable, or essential part of the team.

"I think it's a pretty big role because you can double the games with the final three weeks. So it's the pressure does little to intimidate him."

Last year, Prater handled kicking duties for both the offense and defense, allowing him to develop a better understanding of the game. Last year, Prater said.

One of the loudest spectacle that kicks off with a standout man on the team is facing off, aiming for their legs. Prater stands at 6-1 and 235 pounds, but in games, the pressure every time is to hit the field.

"I don't know," Prater said. "Some of them, don't even think about it. Just go out and do it.

Last year Prater trained under the guidance of the Owls UCF head coach Frank.

"He helped me prepare mentally," said Prater.

Perhaps everything's been thrown into Prater's hands. In the past the past and Prater in carrying out stellar performance throughout the remainder of the season and possibly gain a chance at the Big East Bowl, award in the nation's top punter.

Bush's request for too much for too little

President George W. Bush was in Texas last Monday to reassure the American people that the war on terrorism was "closer to victory than ever before," and he laid out to his fellow Americans a $763 billion budget request for the fiscal year 2008. The White House has already prepared the document for the fiscal year 2007, and it is a lot to ask for any American public. President Bush has already asked taxpayers to pay $1.7 trillion more than the national debt in the upcoming election cycle.

The budget request is a $6.2 trillion increase over the previous year's request, and it includes $650 billion for the military and $533 billion for homeland security. ADULT ADHD STUDY

ADHD affects about 4% of the adult population.

In other words, you're not alone.

People with ADHD often have symptoms such as:

- feelings of restlessness or impatience
- procrastinating or disorganized
- bored easily
- difficulty paying attention

If any of these symptoms sound familiar, you may qualify for a medical research study investigating an investigational medication. Call for immediate appointment. Eligible participants receive a comprehensive psychiatric evaluation and compensation. Appointments always available.

Attending the University of Central Florida can open up countless opportunities for personal development, career planning, networking and fun. One of the easiest ways to experience all of these benefits is by joining a club or organization.

At UCF, there are over 300 registered clubs and organizations available for membership. With a variety of opportunities, everyone from fraternities to honorary societies to special interest groups, every student has a place to go.

Opportunities for membership can be found at the beginning of the academic term. Fraternities and sororities have recruitment events and the clubs and organizations have the Activities Expo at the Student Union. There are also opportunities to join throughout the semester; when the organizations have meetings, displays or tables set up. For a complete list of registered organizations and contact information, students can access the Office of Student Activities web site at osa.sdes.ucf.edu.

If any students want to start their own club or organization, the registration process is simple. Student organizations must meet two basic requirements: they must not interfere with the mission of the University of Central Florida and they must have at least 12 UCF students. If these requirements are met, the organization must submit the Registration Form and a copy of their Constitution to the Office of Student Activities. All of the necessary forms and resources can also be found on the web site. In partnership with the Student Government Association, OSA can officially recognize any new student organization. If you have any questions please contact oso@mail.ucf.edu or call (407) 823-6471.
Registering as a UCF club

Organization eligibility

In order to be a registered student organization, two main requirements must be met:

1. The organization’s objectives must be consistent with the broad organizational goals of the University (6C7.5-0021 FA.13).
2. There must be at least 12 students in the organization that meet the Golden Rule membership criteria.

Registration form

Each group must begin by turning in the completed Student Organization Registration Form and their organization’s Constitution.

The Registration Form is checked for accuracy and student eligibility according to the university.

As stated in The Golden Rule

Membership in any student organization is limited to any student who is currently paying fees and is enrolled with the University of Central Florida. Organizational membership requirements must also be satisfied.

UCF faculty, staff, alumni and Central Florida Research Park employees may be nonvoting members. In order to comply with the University’s commitment to non-discrimination, no discrimination shall be made on the basis of gender, race, color, creed, age, religion, disability, national origin, marital status, sexual orientation/preference, parental status or veteran’s status.

Any errors in the form will be reported to the contact person listed on the form.

Constitution

The organization’s Constitution is checked for completion, using the constitution checklist as the rubric. The Constitution must be approved by the following people:

- Graduate Assistant of Student Activities
- Assistant Director of Student Activities
- Attorney General of Student Government
- President of Student Government
- Director of Student Leadership Programs

Any errors or revisions will be reported to the Contact Person listed on the Registration Form. If it is highly recommended that student organizations follow the Sample Constitution closely to speed up the registration process.

Once the Constitution is approved and the Registration Form is completed and accurate, the student organization becomes registered with the University of Central Florida, barring any discrepancies with University policies.

Changes and updates

The office of Student Activities seeks to have accurate and updated information at all times. If an organization amends the Constitution in any way, notify OSA so the file is up to date. If any club officer information needs to be changed or updated, contact the office or fill out the organization update form. All forms will be found in the appendix of the OSA student organization handbook.

Benefits of recognition

Recognition as an official UCF club has its privileges. The following university resources are available to recognized student organizations:

- The privilege to use the university’s name as part of the organization’s name
- Opportunity to apply for student organization funding through SGA
- Access to campus for recruiting, fundraising and publicity purposes
- Free organizational e-mail address and Web site (see http://reach.ucf.edu/~wdp/pegasus.html)
- Access to resources provided by university departments and offices
- Use of university facilities (either free or at reduced rates) for meetings and events
- Free banking at the UCF Credit Union
- Organization mailbox in the Student Leadership Center
- Access to free publicity on the OSA Web site
- Opportunity to apply for cubicle space on campus
- The privilege to grant awards and honors to organization members
- Opportunity for joint programming with the Campus Activities Board or with Volunteer UCF
- Opportunity to participate as a group in Homecoming
- Access to leadership development opportunities like E.R.C.E.

MOVING IN? SECURE YOUR DEPOSIT!

Losing your security deposit or being overcharged for damages at rentals around UCF is quite common. Here are 5 steps to help secure your chance of getting some or all of your deposit back and not being overcharged when you move out:

READ THE LEASE!

○ Look at your lease carefully. Most state that you must inspect the unit at the time of move-in. If there is a deadline for giving a list of problems back to the landlord, make sure you get it back to the landlord by the deadline.

INSPECT EVERYTHING!

○ The landlord may provide you with a move-in inspection sheet. If not, make your own list, stating existing problems within each room of the unit. Be very specific - note everything major and minor, such as carpet stains or tears, condition of mattress, furniture, walls, blinds, countertops, EVERYTHING!

MAKE A COPY!

○ Be sure to make a copy of the completed inspection sheet

Before giving it back to the landlord. Keep it in a safe place during the duration of your lease.

TAKE PICTURES!

○ To further protect yourself from being charged for damages existing when you move in, take photos of all common areas, your room, and bathroom. Photograph any current problems with the condition of the flooring, carpeting, furniture, and the lawn/landscape (if you are responsible for lawn upkeep). Take more pictures when you move out. Print the photos with dates!

INCREASE YOUR CHANCES!

○ By taking these steps, you should not be charged for pre-existing damage when you move out. And you will be able to prove which damages were there at the time you moved in, if the damages claimed against your deposit are disputed.
