Campus construction under investigation

One building's woes may signal trouble

CHRISTINE DELLERT

Laser brick and missing precast concrete panels may be issues at the Student Administration Building as building inspectors reported that the building's masonry work still needs much improvement.

"It still looks like something might happen," said Jackie Butler, associate dean of Student Affairs. "We're still waiting for the final report on their investigations." Butler relayed that the investigation into the safety of other buildings will continue as well.

Crewmen are now replacing the brick at the base of the building and hope to have it completed by the summer term, according to Butler.

UCF football games will have tailgating activities such as food, external power source, and propane grills. No kegs or mass quantities of alcohol will be allowed. The Florida Gators and Georgia Bulldogs will compete in the stadium on Saturday.

On-campus housing loses drug tolerance

BANDY HARRIS
Contributing Writer

A new resident director at the Department of Housing and Residence Life is taking serious steps to combat drug policy issues as well.

As part of a new "zero tolerance" approach that became effective in the summer of 2003, residents cannot have UCF's "bodkin tail" by possessing or using illegal or controlled substances. This policy aims to protect students and faculty from drug-related incidents that could negatively impact the university community.

The new resident director, John Hartzler, says that his team is working hard to prevent drug use on campus.

"We are seeing an increase in the number of drug-related incidents in residence halls over the past few years," Hartzler said. "The Office of Student Conduct implemented the zero-tolerance sanction as a result of numerous meetings with the Department of Housing and Residence Life."

Hartzler said that the increase is both due to the national averages of drug-related incidents at other universities across the country and significantly less when compared to other Florida universities such as FSU and UCF.

The sanction impacts on-campus residents with convictions at the Lake Clarke, 11th Avenue, Apollo and Lime Communities. Because of a difference in housing agreements, the zero-tolerance rule does not apply to UCF's off-campus residents.

Hartzler said that the drug policy was always enforced, but the new resident director is looking to make sure the policy is being enforced properly.

"We are trying to be more proactive," Hartzler said. "We want to prevent drug use on campus before it becomes a problem."

Acknowledged by Professor William P. Doherty, director of CREOL, the situation is unusual because CREOL is a research laboratory building and not a typical educational facility. However, Doherty said he anticipates that the situation will be resolved within the next few days.

The incident occurred at approximately 6 p.m. on Monday, when a water pipe located in the basement of CREOL was broken, causing water to inundate the building.

Doherty said the building was evacuated and the water was pumped out. The cause of the break is currently under investigation.

Structural material found to be flawed

By KL

The 11-story UCF Student Union, which has been labeled as the tallest building at the University of Central Florida, has been found to contain an array of structural problems.

The University of Central Florida has been under attack for allowing the building to be completed in 1960 without proper construction standards. The university has been criticized for allowing the building to be completed without proper testing and adherence to construction codes.

According to a recent inspection, the building's exterior walls were found to be filled with concrete blocks that were not properly attached to the building's structure. This has led to concerns about the building's stability.

The university has been criticized for not taking the necessary steps to ensure the safety of its students and employees. The building's south face is the tallest at the university, and the university's administrators have been under pressure to take action.

The university's administrators have been investigating the matter and have taken steps to ensure the building's safety. They have also been working with local authorities to ensure that the building is up to code.

Stat. 562.111, you may also have been given the opportunity to resolve your case, without going to court by filling out the back of the notice to appear and pleading no contest.

Keep in mind that if you resolve this matter by pleading no contest and paying the amount on the back of the charging document, you have in effect entered a written plea of no contest in the crime and received a sentence of a withholding of adjudication, a fine, plus court costs. Lack of sleep may be culprit for depression, study says

NATALIE RODRIGUEZ
Staff Writer

College students often go to sleep in the wee hours of the morning, and for obvious reasons. "You go out late at night and then work the next day," junior Celeste Cudney said.

Robert Harman, director of the UCF Counseling Center, has observed the same thing: "They've got jobs to do, so they have to make room for sleep." Many students fantasize about what college life would be like if they weren't so sleep-deprived, he said. "They imagine it being easier to get things done.

The number of UCF students consulting doctors for sleep problems has increased over the years, Harman said. Concerns about stressors, family relationships, work and classwork all lead to stress. "Time management becomes critical when you're a person's ability to cope with stress," he said.

"If you can, head down to your room and take a nap," Harman said.

"Don't think you're wasting your time," he added.

Drink up! Red wine may lengthen life

Study shows wine may be healthier than beer or liquor

NASEEM SOWTI Staff Writer

Recent studies show that the basement of youth might be hiding with red wine instead of water.

Well, maybe that's a bit of an overstatement, but there is some new research that may link red wine and a longer-lasting life.

Dr. David Sinclair and his colleagues at Harvard Medical School in Boston have found a class of naturally occurring chemicals that extend the life of yeast cells by about 70 percent. These chemicals, which are a subset of the elements found in red wine, red berries, olive oil and other foods.

The recent finding also underscores the so-called French paradox, a phenomenon in which, despite their high-calorie diet, people in France suffer from fewer cardiovascular diseases.

These findings are fueled by an increasingly hot field focused on the molecular biology of calorie restriction. This link was first demonstrated in the 1930s.

Students who received all nutrients but 20 percent fewer calories in their diet have been found to live up to 30 percent longer today. It's believed that calorie restriction can have the same effect in humans.

One of the explanations for this finding lies in a series of genes, known collectively as sirtuins. Leonard Guarente, a biology professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been elucidating research on these genes. He noted that even a moderate, low-calorie diet can extend the life of yeast cells by about 50 percent.

Resveratrol, which is one of the chemicals of this class, is a prominent component of grapes, red wine, olive oil and other foods.

According to David Sinclair, who has a chemistry background, red wine and red berries might be safer than beer or liquor.

Matt Prater has redefined the Knights' kicking role this year

ERIC BERNHARD

During the UCF football game against Virginia Tech, a new school record was set, and it has to do with supershot specialist Dan McCardell or San Huyes.

Versatile kicker Matt Prater finished the day with a 65-yard-point-record-breaking, the previous single-game record of 45-yard point-record, which was set by Chris McCudden back on November 5, 1993.

In the game versus the Hokies, Prater booted six points for 364 yards. Among these six, three of these would be 60-yard point-record which scored an impressive kicking style which may be best described as a Specialty Kick, a method that unarguably contributed to the distance of his points.

The most amazing aspect of his record-setting feat was that it was the first time that Prater was posted to a college game.

Instead of using frequent punter Scott Snow, the Knights turned to Prater who is more capable and versatile kicking duties for the team. Virginia Tech's gifted punting unit had the coaching staff call on Prater because of his extraordinary ability to kick, the hard kick.

Prater and the men trained for nearly three weeks to familiarize themselves with the technique. When they finally got actualized to using it on game day, their plan worked perfectly. In the game, Virginia Tech didn't want to rush the kickers as many as they normally did. Instead, they opted to play the punt safe.

With 40 seconds left to play, Virginia Tech, the Knights are going on to create another Specialty Kick to finish the game.

"As you've seen, we're kicking with it," Prater said. "We've been working on this with specialty kick the last five or six times, putting in some kicks. Tomorrow we know what we're going to do every time they have a 60-yard kick to block." Not only does the unconventional style of punting work well, it also allows Prater to keep his legs warm for kicking duties throughout the game.

Prater grew up playing soccer since the age of three. Eventually he began playing intractability at the age of one, some of his teammates was Santiago Cristante, place-kicker for rival UCF and younger brother of Tampa Bay Buccaneers kicker Martin Gramatica. At some point when playing together, Santiago and his brother studied for kicking duties, conjuring what and his family to do the same.

As Prater said, "I'm passing about 40 minutes. I learned kicking in football and playing soccer on and off," Prater said.

As UCF's kicker, Prater only needs to focus on football. As he is generally better among the Knights, he doesn't really think about personal record-setting, as he is in a team for the team's win.

And with big games in UCF's future, as well as a division championship being won, Prater will play a prominent role in the days ahead. After missing the role that may be significant of the quarter, Prater understands that his role in the future will either be essential, or essential part of the team.

"I think is a pretty big role because I can double get the doubles with the final three weeks. You're not the persistence," Prater said.

One of the toughest aspects that kickers in general need to deal with is finding that most teams have three specialists to rise in return, aiming for their legs. Prater scored 12-3 and 37 points, but was the game's penalty blows of Saturday.

Do Prater want to know the next game? "It's all about me and you," said Prater.

Last year Prater finished under the guidance of former UCF kicker Scott Melton.

"I helped him prepare mentally," said Prater. Perhaps everything is a learning curve.

Men's soccer records another home victory

DAN WIERB

The Golden Knights men's soccer team closed the 2003 season on Saturday afternoon with a 1-0 victory over the University of San Francisco Dons. Seniors forward Chris Brown scored the only goal for the Knights, whose record improved 5-4-2 for the year.

UFC moved the only goal that they would need late in the first half when Brunner put the rebound of a shot that appeared to be hand died by untested-Jon Jonas. Jonas got the credit for the point at 17:26. After the goal, the Golden Knights looked back and held the Dons scoreless.

For the second straight game a thunder storm delayed the contest. When the game finally started time were hot and muggy. Despite the weather, "I pressured

Knights ready for Owls

Cougaring off of a big week and playing against a division 1-AA opponent, the Knights should be able to satisfy both the offensive and defensive units for next Saturday's match up against Syracuse. The largest corner in past seasons was the special teams unit, but this year the highlight of UCF’s loss to the Boise State. Wide receiver Matt Prater will be able to use a true unconventional punting method, he will look to add even more impressive numbers to his 2000 punting average.

Prior to the loss to Valdosta State, FAA was kicked out of the podium among division 1-AA schools. The Knights remain national underdogs as they are ranked as low as 70th in the nation.
Two years later, peace eludes us

O ne thing that's become obvious is the meaning of the words "seamless transition" to American officials. The term is a favorite one in the Bush administration, and it's used to describe the handoff of power taking place from the current administration to the one that will take the oath of office January 20.

The Bush administration insists that things will be "seamless," meaning that there will be no legal, administrative or logistical gap in the transition. The problem is that there is, and the gap is already wide and growing.

The Bush administration has been criticized for not providing adequate transition plans and for not coordinating its efforts with future administrations.

Bushe's request too much for too little

B"ush is a fellow that likes to do things in a big way, and he has a big state that he wants to show the world. And the problem is, the world is not going to buy it. The world is not going to pay for it. The world is not going to support it.

It's not that the world is against American power, but it's that the world is against American arrogance. The world is not going to pay for American arrogance.

The world is not going to pay for American arrogance in the way that Bush wants to.

Our STANCE

SA failed by denying flag money

As a former NSA censor, I am astonished by the failure of the Senate to contribute to the war effort in a meaningful way. In the past few weeks, I have heard the refrain that the Senate is too interested in their own interests and not the interests of the country.

The Senate has failed to pass a significant amount of money to support the war effort.

Our STANCE

Bush support spoils flag symbol

Burke support spoils flag symbol I applaud the debacle for its "flag fly by" today. It broadcasted itself and many others in the conservative ideology, and it was a wonderful thing. Burke's view is as follows: and I applaud the "flag fly by" today.

Attending the University of Central Florida can open up countless opportunities for personal development, career planning, networking and fun. One of the easiest ways to experience all of these benefits is by joining a club or organization.

At UCF, there are over 300 registered clubs and organizations available for membership. With a variety of opportunities, everyone from fraternities to honorary societies to special interest groups, every student has a place to go.

Opportunities for membership can be found at the beginning of the academic term. Fraternities and sororities have recruitment events and the clubs and organizations have the Activities Expo at the Student Union. There are also opportunities to join throughout the semester; when the organizations have meetings, displays or tables set up. For a complete list of registered organizations and contact information, students can access the Office of Student Activities web site at osa.sdes.ucf.edu.

If any students want to start their own club or organization, the registration process is simple. Student organizations must meet two basic requirements: they must not interfere with the mission of the University of Central Florida and they must have at least 12 UCF students. If these requirements are met, the organization must submit the Registration Form and a copy of their Constitution to the Office of Student Activities. All of the necessary forms and resources can also be found on the web site. In partnership with the Student Government Association, OSA can officially recognize any new student organization. If you have any questions please contact osa@mail.ucf.edu or call (407) 823-6471.
Registering as a UCF club

Organization eligibility
In order to be a registered student organization, two main requirements must be met:
1. The organization’s objectives must be “consistent with the broad organizational goals of the University” (GCY-5-0021, FAc).
2. There must be at least 12 students in the organization that meet The Golden Rule membership criteria.

Registration form
Each group must begin by turning in the completed Student Organization Registration Form and their organization’s Constitution.

The Registration Form is checked for accuracy and student eligibility according to the university.

As stated in The Golden Rule
Membership in any student organization is limited to any student who is currently paying fees and is enrolled with the University of Central Florida. Organizational membership requirements must also be satisfied.

UCF faculty, staff, alumni and Central Florida Research Park employees may be non-voting members. In order to comply with the University’s commitment to non-discrimination, no discrimination shall be made on the basis of gender, race, color, creed, age, religion, disability, national origin, marital status, sexual orientation/preference, parental status or veteran’s status.

Any errors in the form will be reported to the contact person listed on the form.

Constitution
The organization’s Constitution is checked for completion, using the Constitution checklist as the rubric. The Constitution must be approved by the following people:
- Graduate Assistant of Student Activities
- Assistant Director of Student Activities
- Attorney General of Student Government
- President of Student Government
- Director of Student Leadership Programs

Any errors or revisions will be reported to the Contact Person listed on the Registration Form. It is highly recommended that student organizations follow the Sample Constitution closely to speed up the registration process.

Once the Constitution is approved and the Registration Form is completed and accurate, the student organization becomes registered with the University of Central Florida, barring any discrepancies with University policies.

Changes and updates
The Office of Student Activities seeks to have accurate and updated information at all times. If an organization amends the Constitution in any way, notify OSA so the file is up to date. If any club officer information needs to be changed or updated, contact the office or fill out the organization update form. All forms will be found in the appendix of the OSA student organization handbook.
