Limited dollars coupled with current drought conditions may force the College of Arts and Sciences to make some difficult decisions. Of course offered this year is a class titled "the Reflecting Pond". It is an opportunity for students to explore the pond and its surrounding area, while gaining an understanding of its ecological significance. The course, led by Professor Patricia Xavier, will cover topics such as pond ecology, water quality, and the role of the pond in the local ecosystem. Students will engage in both theoretical and practical components, including field trips and hands-on activities. This course offers a unique opportunity for students to connect with nature and gain valuable insights into the importance of water bodies in our environment.
Textbook costs lead to irks

Some universities now rent textbooks

NATALIE RODRIGUEZ

As students return to UCF this fall, they find that not only had they given up on textbooks, but the price for some text books couldn’t be found.

The price of educational books and supplies has risen 20 percent in the last 10 years, according to the National Association of College Stores.

Some students would rather share books with other students than buy them new from a bookstore or online. Psychology major Don Tan has bought nothing but textbooks since this semester; instead he borrowed them from his friends. "It’s a way of buying the textbooks, the 35-year-old junior explained.

"I can save a lot of money," he said.

Students have the option to rent textbooks as an alternative to purchasing new books. Rental textbooks are just as effective as new books. According to Matthew Hickey, a senior in Health and Public Affairs, "You have the option to rent books through the internet through a third party service."

Junior Oscar Perez purchased 12 of his books this semester through Amazon. "It’s cheaper, it’s cheaper than going on campus or UCF or Kirkham’s or Georgia’s Connect," he said. "And also that most students buy their textbooks on Amazon because they have a variety of options."

About 25 percent of students know about their textbook rental option, according to the National Association of College Stores.

In the Aerospace Program, one of the more expensive programs at the university, textbooks are so expensive that some students are unable to afford them. "It’s not just that they’re really high," Hickey said. "It’s the fact that we are fund- ing the environment, and people just throw them away without even thinking they have gotten on campus."

One way students can contribute to the environment is by recycling textbooks.

"It makes sense that everyone would want to recycle textbooks because it’s environmentally friendly," said Jeffery Jones, a senior in Aerospace Engineering.

"There are a lot of books that UCF doesn’t need and it’s very important to recycle one book for every three done."

"We have many more textbooks than we actually need," said Matthew Hickey.

"If you don’t have a textbook, there are a lot of places you can go online and get a textbook at a lower price," he said.

"We have many more textbooks than we actually need," said Matthew Hickey.

"If you didn’t have a textbook, you could always go online and get one for a lower price," he said.

Burned-out fight leads to cocaine

A UCF student was arrested at an early morning hour for possession of cocaine, after his black Ford Ranger was pulled over for having a burned-out headlight.

Seun Adan, 21, was questioned by Officer George Pennzoile, who noticed Adan’s stained jeans, as well as the strong smell of alcohol coming from the open trunk of the truck. After Adan admitted to the officer that he had been drinking that night, Pennzoile had Adan perform field sobriety tests, all of which Adan failed.

Upon investigating Adan for driving under the influence, the officer found a razor and a black Ford Ranger was pulled over for having a burned-out headlight.

The arresting officer said McGough had extremely red eyes and admitted to having smoked weed. The officer then asked to be shown the drugs, and it was presented with a glass smoking pipe that still had marijuana in it.

On Wednesday, Turkish warships and a cruiser were seen parking off the coast of Lebanon, where they will remain until next week. The Turkish navy's announcement of the operation comes as relations between Iraq and Turkey continue to deteriorate. Last month, Turkey's Prime Minister Recep Tayyip Erdogan threatened to invade Iraq, a warning that has been met with concern in the region. The Turkish military buildup near the northern Iraqi city of Sulaimaniyah comes amid ongoing tensions between the two countries over a variety of issues, including the status of the disputed Kurdish region and the status of the Kirkuk oil fields. The presence of Turkish forces near the Iraqi border is likely to be seen as a significant show of force and could escalate the situation in the region. The US and other international actors in the region have called for de-escalation and a return to diplomacy to address the tensions. The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has also expressed concern about the situation, saying it could have negative implications for the Iraqi economy and the wider region.
Sorority sister calls Noland a bubbly, optimistic person

Noland learned to code. She spent a year in the Orange County Jail while waiting for her bond to be posted and later performed 100 hours of community service as punishment.

"I just need a minute," Noland said. It was the same sort of breathless cadence in which she described the moment when doctors found a way to control her seizures.

Noland called her newfound optimism a "butterfly effect," a phrase she had heard on the news. "You know how it is: you're walking on the street, and then you turn your head and there's a butterfly flying by?"

Noland's optimism has been passed on to her sorority, Sigma Delta Tau, where she now wears a sash that says "bubbly, optimistic person.

Increase budget, everyone wins

Up President John Hitt and other university presidents received a surprise initiative Monday to get money for state universities. The plan, which the board sought to pass this week, would increase the state university system's budget by $118 million. The plan would take money from the state budget and allocate it to the university system, allowing universities to use the money to fund programs and improve facilities.

Is this a good idea? Yes, we believe it is. It will help state universities maintain and improve educational programs and facilities. It will also provide a boost to the state economy, as universities will be able to hire more faculty and staff, and the increased spending will stimulate economic growth.

If you agree with this position, please let us know. We would like to hear from you about why you support this plan and what you think it will mean for the state of Florida.

Readers can submit their comments online at www.UCFnews.com or fax 407-823-5565. Letters to the editor should be kept to 200 words or less and are subject to editing.

Making that move is going to help me next year with the freshman class," said Britton.

Another one who took charge as a sophomore is midfielder Allison Schneider. She’s a junior. Last season, Schneider emerged as one of the best midfielders in the MAC conference.

"We had a lot of experience on our team, so that was definitely a big help," said Schneider.

"Overall, we’re happy with our team this year," said Britton. "We’re excited to see what we can do in the MAC Conference."

The men's soccer team extended its home unbeaten streak to seven games on Sunday with a 1-0 victory over conference-opponent Florida Atlantic. UCF's (7-2-3, 5-1-1) win provided the only offensive difference since center Kris Benzies scored his fourth goal of the season. The Knights' stingy defense held the FAU (3-6-3, 2-5-1) to just one shot in the entire game. UCF defeated the Owls' offensive production, finishing the game with 19 shots.

Suffragettes guard/key Kari Matsubara recorded her third double-digit assist of the season as she assisted three goals. With the victory, UCF remains on top of the Atlantic Sun regular season standings, four points ahead of Mercer (5-6-0, 4-1-1). The Knights lead the SoCon, C.N.C. of 11-0 against 6-12-0 in Campbell. However, Campbell is 1-3 in conference.

Jesse Starns made sure that Matsubara wasn't the only UCF goalkeeper recording a shutout. The women's team also recorded its own shutout
two weeks in a row.

The offensive onslaught was due to the great play of back-up Marissa Atwell and senior Josh Mcintosh, both who scored twice.

Frederman also scored her fifth goal of the sea son, which was enough to upset a weak Mercer defense. The Knights are currently 1-0 against Mercer.

The Knights remain in a deadlock with FAU for first place in the ACC. UCF continues to struggle to win urgently. The Knights travel to Jacksonville another time to face off against the Dolphins, who are 4-1 in conference play.

Knights look to rebound at home.

A balanced attack with five players in double-digits.

"We did a pretty good job moving the ball around tonight," Coach Tom Lawlor said.
"We had a few key points in the game where the ball was put to us and the offense stepped up. The ball was played well and we

"It's been a good week for us," Lawlor said. "At this point in the season, we need to start scoring goals to keep our record in the right direction."

Business student Ethan Hollander (10) had a goal and an assist in the game. He also recorded a point in the UCF Versus Miami game last week.

UCF looks forward to the rest of the season and the upcoming games. The Knights are currently 8-7-3 overall and 3-3-1 in the American Athletic Conference.

Bunk beds get students high, hurt

CHRISTINE DELLERT
UCF Staff Writer

Some things go bump in the night. As a student at UCF, bunk beds have taken the place of grizzly bears and monsters. For the past three years, UCF’s Dorm Bed Challenge has been a campus favorite. The challenge is an annual bunk bed scavenger hunt throughout the dorms. Twenty-nine dorms will be competing for the title of ‘most bunk bed dogs,' a new category introduced this year. As a result, the bunk bed race is being referred to as the ‘Bunk Bed Derby.'

Saturday October 7

It’s that time of year again. Every dorm is in competition for the title of ‘most bunk bed dogs.' The fun begins at 5 p.m. in buildings across campus where the challenge begins. For more information, visit activity.ucf.edu.

It’s time to feel the thrill of the two wheels at the Daytona International Speedway. The Fall Recreation Cycle brings America’s top amateur and expert motorcycle riders to Central Florida. Today is the last day to catch the four-day event, which offers some of the best action around. For more information, see the Daytona International Speedway on page 15 for details.

I will go so far as to say that it is about getting the action that it is about having the right atmosphere. I know that the Nights-in-Cahkessy-Knuckles-Campbell and Nightingale are right down the road for youngs, late at night starting at 11 p.m., with DJ water and free drinks. On top of that, there will be live music and dancing.

The University of New York at Binghamton plans to spend about $100,000 to build guest rooms into their beds, according to a recent article in the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Now, UCF officials are Raiding the sleeping arrangements on campus. They are getting rid of at least 30 of the worst bunk beds in the dorms by taking them down.

Although a number of students know of someone who has useful, the bunk bed is not a popular item. It is surprising to see so many bunk beds still taking up room in our dorms.

Self-serving cell-phone users must go

BRANDON HARRISON
UCF Staff Writer

Ninety-seven percent of Americans somehow claim that they use cell phones in some way. Only 78 percent of Americans own cell phones.

According to the ideal survey, only 41 percent of cell phone owners said that they actually use their phones to talk. The rest used their phones for text messaging, playing games, and browsing the internet. It is clear that cell phones are being used more than ever in America. Is this a good thing? Are cell phones really helping us?

I believe not. Cell phones are taking over our society. They are taking over the way we communicate and the way we interact with others. Cell phones are becoming a nuisance and are no longer a useful tool.

Students called in their lines to lend their voices to his nightly radio show. They had watched him on television and now, from Campus Activities Board, Dr. Drew Planning Board, they called in at 8:00 p.m. in room 603 at UCF Arena. It is up to each school to set height standards for bunk beds. Hartler said, "I don’t have any basis for a height standard."

Sophomore Jenna Roth, 19, said she is happy with the height of her bunk bed. "I would not have enough space in my room,""she said. "When I move into the floor that I am on,"" she said. "I don’t have enough space in my room." Each bed stores a mini refrigerator, a soda and two damage bins with wheels and stacking.

Dana has raised her bed to its maximum height — 4.5 feet. "I’m just trying to get away from my roommate," she said.

Hendry said students often ignore the option of offering a guardian for their beds through Housing and Residence Life. The guardians are not mandatory because “students often find that students take them down,” she explained.

For this year, any student has asked for a guardian, Hendry added.

Guards cost less than $15 and are available during his admission, because the arena box office.

Business is good for serial villains

...dream powers, they usually end up killing for fun.

More than his methods, Bergey is most memorable for his characteristically violent and sadistic behavior. Indeed, his attacks can be extremely dark and graphic. Often, the victims are depicted as innocent civilians or even children. His brutality is rarely depicted in a violent manner, usually showing the victims in a state of pain or suffering. Bergey's attacks are usually unprovoked, and he often shows no remorse for his actions. This often leads to a sense of fear and terror in the victims and the audience. Bergey's violence is not only physical, but also psychological, as he often taunts his victims before killing them, causing them immense psychological trauma.

In conclusion, Bergey is a terrifying serial villain whose actions are both horrible and architectured. His violence is meant to be scary and disturbing,

and it is achieved through the use of graphic and violent imagery. The effects of Bergey's

violence are not only physical, but also psychological, causing terror in those who witness his actions.

cell phones and their impact on society. He concluded his piece with the following comment:

"Cell phones are a mixed blessing. They have become an integral part of our daily lives, but they can also be a source of distraction. It's important to be mindful of our
