Mike ceiling where Anthony Mamon expected to be completed until more than four people in this one situation, which is aimed at health related to the construction as sprinkler system since it was considered as a hazard, before the change in format, students, who are required to sign-off that they were aware of the impending absences.

"We've had two very prolific football players," Kruczek said in a written statement. "They made a poor choice. They have to live with the consequence." They may not be the only. Yesterday afternoon, Athletic Director Steve Osland held radio station 740 AM The Team that more football players may be guilty of the same violation. However, no other names have been released. Schneider was on pace to finish his 34-year-old building, but will be delayed.

"We know the roof was leaking for quite some time, more than a year," then there's a breach on the second floor that collects the water as it drips down, and it does stop during that class. Is objectionable to the students, particularly those who are sitting in the back," Kruczek said.

"There's no light, there's no electrical power, and the wiring is hanging down so something could hit it. I have two classes in this building and it's the same," said Tucker and Macbron both said the wiring is just a hazard and occupants of the building should not feel unsafe, the hanging wires are hazardous to telephones and data lines. While there are some who think the quality of the work is acceptable, those who have completed to the station, she is unsure of any effort to improve conditions. Meanwhile, her doctor advised her not to be inside buildings that have asbestos.

"I have a sinus infection that started right after they started ripping the ceiling and walls off," Dore said. I believe the filing at the time, had asbestos in it. A lot of people are wrong about that," said Brent Marshall, an assistant professor. It didn't used to be that way. Before the change in format, students were interested in music, most of which was not jazz. But before that, with a music festival, a little bit of everything happened," Drake explained.

"Our classification has changed to give because of bad conditions into the Central Florida region," Bowers explained. "We are interested in students to volunteer and work at the station, despite the WUCF, which in the fall long. We are always interested in people buying the experience of working in the studio," he said.

One year to the election

President George W. Bush

Economy
Bush pressed tax cuts for individuals and businesses to encourage innovation, and its business in the president’s first budget to sustain their health-guaranteed economies...The administration has been an important step in transforming the European institutional system, and one woman are flying in tight paper. Here’s a snap­

Battling for White House

President Bush’s job performance rating has dipped to 44 percent positive, compared to his highest mark of 48 percent in July 2002.

Former Gov. Howard Dean (D-Vt.)

Dean served as governor of Vermont from 1991 to 1997. He is also a former physician.

Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.)

Kerry was born in Boston and grew up in the South End. He has been married since 1971 and has five children.

Sen. Joe Lieberman (D-Conn.)

Lieberman is in his third term and is a Democrat from Connecticut.

Retired Gen. Wesley Clark

Clark was a four-star general in the U.S. Army and served as NATO’s Supreme Allied Commander Europe from 1997 to 2000.

Reid Dick Gephardt (D-Mo.)

Gephardt has served as a U.S. congressman from Missouri since 1975.

Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.)

Edwards was a first-term senator from North Carolina when he entered the presidential race.

Reg. Dennis Kucinich (D-Ohio)

Kucinich is a four-term U.S. congressman from Ohio.

Environment
Bush supports tough measures to reduce oil consumption and other industrial facilities without putting too much emphasis on nuclear power. He opposes stricter limits on automobile emissions in the Kyoto Protocol, a global warming treaty designed to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Oil and energy
In order to decrease U.S. depend­ dence on foreign oil, Bush proposes removing the restrictions on the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. He also advocates increasing production of domestic oil and gas using new drilling and funding new research.

Healthcare
Gephardt opposes a market-driven approach to healthcare reform, which he believes is unaffordable and would increase the cost of healthcare. He supports a national healthcare plan that would provide universal coverage.

Education
Gephardt supports increased funding for public schools and the expansion of alternative education programs.

College students increasingly leaving Republican survey

COLUMBUS, Ohio
Steve Bruckmeier grew up in a household political toward the liberal side. When the Trump era began, he takes delight watching at least from his young Republican cousin.

At Capital University, Bruckmeier and several dozen others regularly hold meetings to discuss tax policy and other conservative ideas. Membership in the student-run Democratic group, meanwhile, has diminished in size.

"Sure," the college junior said, "the same as we have liberal parents and are abroad attending college.

Bruckmeier and his friends do not represent the viewpoint of college students who are leaving the Republican Party. Some even the six days when college campuses were closed in the wake of the coronavirus outbreak, only in principles of the Democrats.

A few polls by the Institute of Politics at the University of Chicago showed that 35 percent of college students identify as Republicans. The poll also showed that 90 percent of college students approve of President Joe Biden's job performance, which is about 8 percent points higher than the general public.

At the same time, 17 percent of the students say they are Democrats. And 30 percent say they are inde­pendent, which makes them ripe for the candidates. Democrats are paying careful attention to the young voters, a part of the electronic particularity of the electorate.

The days are over of us­ting a battlefield of Demo­crats and Republicans, "I think the balance of power has changed," said Michael Collins, a director of the University of Nevada, "We may have a bit more electorate, particu­larly the median voter, which makes them ripe for the candidates. WUCF would have a much larger listener base if they appealed to the students. — BRAD ROYFFE

In spring 2001, WNSC began broadcasting UCF Athletics, where they broadcast six different UCF sports, including baseball, softball, tennis, and soccer.

WNSC won the Collegiate Broadcasters Association's award for the radio show at the start of 2000.

"WUCF would have a much larger listener base if they appealed to the students." — BRAD ROYFFE

The reason why students don't listen to WUCF is because "the bulk of the students do not hold in the format," Royffe said. "If you're into jazz, you probably know about WUCF. But students still enjoy Rhythm or Reel.

WNCF understands why WUCF chews jazz as their format. The School of Communications used to find the station when the students ran it but they couldn't afford it. Instead of shutting down the radio station, UCF kept it alive with community service.

The station is a format that wasn't being done in Orlando, and that is why they picked jazz, Royffe explained.

"We liked the format," Royffe said. "We wanted to make sure that the program is close to the university." Royffe said that the college students want music that college students want to hear.

WUCF is a much bulkier format, but not to the students.

"The students who have worked at WUCF are the students who have worked in radio/TV. They have a very critical sense to helping students in broadcasting," Royffe said.

"We're trying to prove Knight as an entertainment station, and make sure that our programming is up to par and then "we'll make the move towards getting a license," Royffe said. "It's a station, optimistically, in a year and a half years." A long player is required to listen to their station, and instructions on down-

Faculty suspects asbestos is causing health problems

Sue Al

Sue, professor who also teaches in Phillips Hall as a student, 7:00 p.m.

"I've noticed that since the work started, the ceiling tiles, I've gotten headaches in the back of my head, which I don't normally get, and I also have a list of the symptoms that can be caused by excessive dust. "

Sue said. "It's really very difficult to do our work with the noise and things like that. Part of our responsibilities are to protect research and to write manuscripts, and it's difficult to carry on a classroom discussion when other people are out in the hallway making normal, everyday noise.

"Perhaps even more important, there is no such thing as a confidential conversation. Even if a student is concerned about his or her grades, it becomes knowledge to every other faculty and student in the hallway when materials containing the asbestos are removed. They completely seal the building, saying no one is allowed back in. The Environmental Protection Agency, which supervises cases dealing with asbestos, subsequently ok'd the building, saying no asbestos could be found in the air. The symptoms faculty and students are experiencing are likely caused by accumulating dust, he said.

"I guarantee you they're not getting sick because of asbestos tiles that were removed," Sue added. "There are very strict EPA protections. Better the tiles were removed. They completely sealed the building when they came in.

Lydia Rosenthal, a nursing professor, said symptoms could be caused by excessive amounts of dust, mold and chemicals. "It removes the building. Regardless of what else is going on, people have headaches, the best thing they can do is stay out of the building," she said.

Sue and other students have received only complaints. Many also object to the noise caused by the construction. "We've lost privacy and there's some disruption of classes," Sue said. "It's disruptive, overwhelming presence and there's a lot of complaining about it.

"I'm used to it," said Sue. "I really didn't think much about the whole thing until everyone had noticed this change in terms of health."

Asbestos — a fiber used in insulation and ceiling tiles — can be inhaled, causing lung disease. The microscopic fibers are released into the air when materials containing the fiber are disturbed, causing reactions that can include respiratory difficulties, headaches and back pains. If exposed to asbestos for long periods, people can develop irreversible lung disease.

Jose Vazquez, indoor air quality coordinator for the Physical Plant, said that although floor tiles, floor insulation and drywall containing asbestos were removed in July from the third and fourth floors of Phillips Hall, safety precautions were taken to prevent any health risks. He said the asbestos material was removed in less than 24 hours, and no one was in the building when the work was done. He also said professional contractors tested the air before anyone was allowed back in. The Environmental Protection Agency, which supervises cases dealing with asbestos, subsequently ok'd the building, saying no asbestos could be found in the air to say. The symptoms faculty and students are experiencing are likely caused by accumulating dust, he added.

The symptoms faculty and students are experiencing are likely caused by accumulating dust, he added.

"I guarantee you they're not getting sick because of asbestos tiles that were removed," Sue added. "There are very strict EPA protections. Better the tiles were removed. They completely sealed the building when they came in.

Lydia Rosenthal, a nursing professor, said symptoms could be caused by excessive amounts of dust, mold and chemicals. "It removes the building. Regardless of what else is going on, people have headaches, the best thing they can do is stay out of the building," she said.

Sue and other students have received only complaints. Many also object to the noise caused by the construction. "We've lost privacy and there's some disruption of classes," Sue said. "It's disruptive, overwhelming presence and there's a lot of complaining about it.

"I'm used to it," said Sue. "I really didn't think much about the whole thing until everyone had noticed this change in terms of health."

Asbestos — a fiber used in insulation and ceiling tiles — can be inhaled, causing lung disease. The microscopic fibers are released into the air when materials containing the fiber are disturbed, causing reactions that can include respiratory difficulties, headaches and back pains. If exposed to asbestos for long periods, people can develop irreversible lung disease.
About time gays get some respect
Support for gays is a response of a group that cares about other people [Pittman by Eric's hands, Oct. 9]. I am glad to see you provided no quotes of conservative views in this article, claiming some banks who engage in this kind of lifestyle are going to buy in too.
Thank you for including quotes from the Rev. Fred Phelps and Team Left, two of you that blasters individuals I have even had the opportunity to laugh at.

Unfortunately, you failed to mention that of the candidates who are running in 2004 for president, Dennis Kucinich supports the rights of gay people to form and unit unions and marriages. It is time we passed some legislation banning dis­ controversy caused by sexual orientation and general sex. Thank you, UCF faculty members, for helping the compassionate way.

Walmart-Mart exploits illegal immigrants

I read the article "Blood donors will reject gay donors" (Nov. 3). Having some knowledge on the issue, I'm terrified of the discussion you opened. This article wasn't written with the reader's best interest in mind. The public's image is clearly give an impression that it wouldn't change anything to deny blood.
Pursuing such an article is a danger to our community.
The article states that the probability of receiving HIV is 1 per 2 million and that you are a blood recipient. This statement is half true! The probability resulting is derived from the article that doesn't include grant and fund information. In your source pool, then the statistics would change drastically, you might cause that change by three or four times! This would be a real threat to the community.
Unfortunately, even the highest technology in the United States doesn't allow techniques to know if someone received HIV if exposure is occupied less than 15 days previously. This is the highest technology. The regulatory techniques used in the field don't even come close to that. Most of the tests that are affordable to take today require three months before they are 100% sure that either you are HIV-positive or negative.
In the light of the facts I've written above, I invite you to approach an expert to write a single

UCF athletics finally united in Conference USA

ASHLEY BURNS
Sports Editor

The move to Conference USA finally united UCF athletics. The conference alignment, which will take effect in 2005, mandates that UCF move from the Big East Conference to Conference USA. This is an opportunity for UCF to realign itself within the sports landscape and strengthen its athletic program.

The conference realignment will provide UCF with a chance to compete against top-tier teams, in addition to strengthening the school's athletic program. This move is expected to benefit the school and its athletes in the long run.

Everyone has them. Southern heights, the kind—"they are all alike in some ways. One of the most common traits, and one I definitely share is the fear of clowns. Scaring about those innocent, white-faced, red-nosed characters scares the bejeezus out of me. They're out for the blood of the innocent, white-faced, red-nosed cowards in a horrible way. This film features clowns in a horrible, evil way. This film starts off as a typical '80s-era cheese fest. The story begins in a small, teen-filled town: Two teens investigate the murder of a little girl. "Killer Clowns," a film that features references to "The Fly" and "Drive, Drive, Drive," is just one of many futuristic movies that featured killer clowns. These clowns are unlike any other clowns in the world. They are intelligent, and their intelligence is just as frightening as their appearance. They are able to plan and execute their evil plans with perfection.

The story begins with two teenagers, who are best friends, investigating the murder of the little girl. They discover that the killer clowns are responsible for the murder. They decide to track down the killer clowns and bring them to justice. The teenagers are able to track down the killer clowns in a small, town. They are able to confront the killer clowns and confront them with their evil deeds.

The teenagers are able to defeat the killer clowns and bring them to justice. They are able to save the town and prevent any future attacks by the killer clowns. The teenagers are heroes and the town is saved.

Ladies let loose

"Steel Magnolias" probes power of friendship

DANA DELAP
Staff Writer

Playwright Robert Harling's examination of the friendship among six Southern women becomes a touching tale interpreted by Julia Roberts. "Steel Magnolias," a film directed by John Badham, is on stage at the UCF Black Box Theatre through Nov. 16.

It's a comedy, but underneath is a very deep drama, said Mark Harris, the director and an associate professor of theater at UCF. "The play is entertainment and it is funny, but it also deals with the strength of women and their resilience.

He added, "Women are every family's touchstones. They are the strongest thing in any family."

The play takes place in Tracy's beautiful salon in Clinton, L.A., where anyone who is anyone goes there. The characters in the play introduce the audience to an eclectic group of women, each with their own roles and stories.

There is the voice-matching Tracy, who is always full of stories. There is Tracy's sky-haired assistant, Amanda, who is the '60s hair stylist. There is the '60s socialite, Mylynn, and her daughter, a diabetic newlywed named Thelma. "It is about Southern women at an ordinary moment. It is universal because all generations women, who get to sit as single people, can sit at a friend's and laugh."

Boyd agreed, and said she hopes the audience will be able to relate to the characters and understand that friendship is not always easy. "It can be challenging, rewarding, and sometimes annoying," said Boyd. "I hope that people will be able to relate to the joy of people through the strength of the cast, the characters, and the cast members.

The show is sold out, but tickets can be purchased for a waiting list on Saturday. Performances are at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, through Nov. 16. Tickets are $20 for students; call 407-823-9100."
