Hickey: If dollars don’t come, expect cap

Enrollment may be capped if the Florida Legislature fails to submit the school's budget in the next budget year, UCF Provost Terry Hickey told the Faculty Senate standing session Thursday. Although the issue ultimately will be decided by President John Hitt and the Board of Trustees, Hickey told Faculty members that if UCF does not get enrollment growth money, he will recommend a cap for the 2004-05 school year.

UCF was forced to cap enrollment, restrictions would be heavily divided between freshmen and transfer students, he said.

"These new areas very difficult situations to deal with," Hickey told the faculty. "What people have to understand is that we are dealing with $600 million for which we get state funding and we look at $44 million budget cut. We cannot continue to have the resources provided to us by the state reduced, and continue to offer all of the services and courses we have in the past. It's just not possible.

Professor Diane Chase agreed, saying that although university growth and access are important, the loss of funding should not interfere with the quality of education provided to the student body at UCF.

"We're making a commitment now that you admit students to the university," Chase said. "We have to give them the quality that they ask for, so you don't want to admit new students and diminish the quality our education. Everyone hopes that does not happen.

Natali Modica, UCF's chief financial officer, said a number of his colleagues expressed concern about how budget cuts will affect class sizes. She said empirical data might help professors who have been unable to determine class sizes at an individual level, which he says has a direct impact on the quality of education.

Hickey added that the $4 million he will credit from the state is not enough.

Religious group gets SGA's help

Battle helps fund group's Africa trip

Ben Bardi

Ben Bardi covered the Florida group's Africa trip.

Ben Bardi of the University of Central Florida (UCF) is one of the Florida Legislature's most successful lobbyists. After winning the state's alphanumeric numbers in the second annual Diva Invasion, he went on to sign a bill passed by the Legislature that would allow an unclaimed $3 million lottery prize to go to the students. He now has available.

Bardi, 24, is a senior majoring in political science and sociology.

"I have set a goal to give the prize money to those students, which includes not only Orthodcts Christians but also those of other beliefs, such as Baptists, Muslims, Jews and Roman Catholics. Five members of the group will visit Tanzania, Kenya and Yunnan. Both countries have Islamic religious groups to go on a mission to eastern Africa. This trip was sponsored by the Senate, which is a good thing, especially when the Senate wouldn't. Bardi bought the ticket for the trip.

"Our Christian Fellowship numbers about 60 students, which includes not only Orthodcts Christians but also those of other beliefs, such as Baptists, Muslims, Jews and Roman Catholics. Five members of the group will visit Tanzania, Kenya and Yunnan. Both countries have Islamic religious groups to go on a mission to eastern Africa. This trip was sponsored by the Senate, which is a good thing, especially when the Senate wouldn't. Bardi bought the ticket for the trip.

"I believe the fellowship's main focus should be to serve other cultures, not only the ones we're familiar with, but also groups we're not familiar with. This is a great opportunity to learn more about the world and its cultures.

Dangers to benefit homeless

"To prevent a take-over of an open sleeping experience," said Stacie Whipp, director of UCF’s Student Government Housing, which takes place from 7 p.m. to 3 a.m. on the 2nd floor of the Student Union’s Pegasus Ballroom.

The charity event is designed for those who are homeless or less while stimulating students about how they can help their local homeless community.

West, a student in the College of Natural and Health Sciences, said that people are required to register for the event at the Student Union’s Pegasus Ballroom.

The event is open to the public and will allow people to donate money, clothing, or food items.

The proceeds from the event will support the UCF’s Homeless Outreach Program, which provides resources and support to homeless individuals and families in the local community.

 ### Late Knights draws pajama-clad partners

Rukus raised vaulted roof of Student Union

An all-night Tailgate, entitled Rukus pajama party and a mask-free party made an odd credit for no wear to the Student Union’s Friday night— an exceptional — he was participating in a "Late Knight" event.

As the theme of this "Late Knights" was a pajama party, only a couple of those who came actually sported their sleeping clothes. For those who did, though, there was everything from Trolls, Hulkster sleeping shirts to twenty-five point top performers.

In bed, bedtime stories flashed a whole variety of cartoon images, such as Kermit the Frog and Scooby Doo.

In the third gathering spot, there was a group of those who went to the Pegasus Ballroom, where local bands performed to first place. Night Music rang from the soft rock to Spanish with all types of top performers.

Everyone enjoyed the atmosphere. The event was hosted by Brown, Wiik, Native, another top group, was suppled by bands and dancers and two non-sung artists, who jumped and did other tricks against noise of cars.

Other performers included Camel Mountain and an all-female group.

For those who didn’t want to move around during the event, a maze of those who wanted to have their dance performance, some that were part of the Student Union’s performance, surrounded the building. The Student Union, spinning and juggling their bodies atop the Pegasus symbol.

It was an addition to many of what we’re going to be doing, said the Student Union’s president, Mark L. "We’re not going to have people coming around and saying, ‘Hey, you’re the good news’?"

However, before the group could hold a conference or whatever, it had to come with music and lyrics. Food and lodging is one of the activities that would be taking place there, at a cost of $2,500. Battles made the groups.

Through funding and overall support from the group members, there would be 24,000 dollars raised, or 40,000 dollars in the hole. That’s in the next $2,500. Battles made the group members.

This was the group that would be given a large amount of the money raised, or 40,000 dollars in the hole. That’s in the next $2,500. Battles made the group members.

So the Student Union, spinning and juggling their bodies atop the Pegasus symbol.

The Future

The Future

This year’s edition of the Future, the newspaper of the光学 corporation, included a variety of features and stories that highlighted the progress made at the University of Florida.

One of the featured articles was an interview with Dr. John Smith, a professor at the University of Florida, who discussed the advancements made in the field of materials science.

Smith talked about the importance of using sustainable materials in the construction industry and the benefits of using recycled materials.

He also discussed the challenges faced by researchers in the field and the need for further research to develop new materials.

UCF freshman Mary D’Alatri asked her way into a victory Friday night, as she became the first chairman of Communication Department at the packed COMD 10 auditorium.

The contest, named after the late chairman, Bernard C. Kissel, is composed of two rounds. The final began at 7:30 p.m. Each of the finalists was required to give a persuasive speech addressing "Current Issues of Equality in the United States." Each speech cited a specific problem and proposed various solutions. The speeches had to last between 6 and 8 minutes. Students who ran over were disqualified.

The topic ranged from the death penalty to racial profiling. D’Alatri’s call to reform nursing home conditions was one of the most substantive calls to action. She gave grisly examples of bad cases and offered solutions, noting that the same situation could happen to each audience member’s grandparent. D’Alatri’s call to action was the most substantive call to action.

Like many of her competitors, D’Alatri advocated communication with government officials to demand better conditions in nursing homes. Using anecdotal evidence in her own grandmother’s case and asking the audience to do the same, D’Alatri gave gripping examples of bad cases and offered solutions, noting that the same situation could happen to each audience member’s grandparent.

The final results of the 4th Bernard C. Kissel Annual Outstanding Student Speaker Competition are as follows: 4th place, freshman Mary D’Alatri; 3rd place with a prize of $800, sophomore Kyle Felix; 2nd place with a prize of $400, senior David Young; 1st place with a prize of $150, senior Mary D’Alatri.

The contest is bestowed every year and was organized by an 11 member committee chaired by David Young, a professor at UCF. Kissel’s surviving wife, Joan, and son, John attended the event.

My blood isn't for lightweights

I've yet to actually go to a protest since the party usually comes to me, but you know, actually, the only reason I enjoy Black is that it is a single Greek word for apologies for me in that week something period.

The only thing that truly irritates me about this advertisement concentration camp is two certain groups that who want me to give blood and those who hinder these lovely green plastic tablets.

For the majority of my classes full or around noon. During this time, there's usually a cigarette in one hand and a well shaved Macchiato shaving clogging coffee. That being said, with the amount of toxins and chemicals in my blood, I'm obviously not advisable to be giving blood.

So, why do the Blood Service ask me, a messy haired guy they assault every day.

I don't think there is actual blood in my veins, I like to assume my blood is nothing but piss and vinegar.

So, I detect these religious types who pass out these little holy tablets that most of which end up in the trash.

You know what those heavily-filled books are good for?

You can roll cigarettes with them. They're the perfect size, perfect paper, and burn relatively quick. Add to 100-some-thing pages, I won't have to buy rolling papers for months.

I know that some one exist, terribly misguided, in my denominations like myself. And in my liberal/conservative churches tried to instill me more than anything.

They're practically telling you that two church or religion is (explicit).

People do have their own rights to religion and handing out those lovey-dovey green plastic bibles. They're practically tell you that your church or religious organization concentration camp terribly sacrilegious, but in my denominations like myself.

If you've ventured into its pages, I wonder every day. If you see a hung-over smoker, see a hung-over smoker with you, you probably shouldn't ask me.

Women’s soccer earns its third straight A-Sun tournament championship

KEITH CURTIS

The UCF women’s soccer team continues its impressive season by capturing its third straight regular season A-Sun title.

The Knights defeated the University of North Florida 4-0 on Saturday to clinch the conference title. With the win, UCF moves up to fourth in the state of Florida, behind Florida State, Miami, and Florida.

UCF is now 11-1-1 in conference play and 16-2-2 overall. They are currently ranked No. 4 in the nation and No. 1 in the A-Sun.

UCF’s next game is a home match against Stetson on Friday, Oct. 25. The game is set to begin at 7 p.m. at the UCF Soccer Complex.

UCF head coach Jeff Waldrum said, "This is a really important match for us. We need to be ready to play and take care of business."

Waldrum added, "Our guys are focused and ready to go. They know what is at stake and they are ready to make a statement."

Pursuit of the perfect pint

Searching for an ideal brew is easy at a beer festival — unless you hate beer

BRANDON HARDIN
Staff Writer

The two UCF students stood outside the gates, plastic cups gripped firmly, impatiently waiting as the clock ticked down to the official start of the event.

"Damn! Twelve minutes!" said Anthony Arceri, 22, while pacing.

Finally, 3 p.m. rolled around, and it was time to go. As they headed out, drinking beer.

It was the 5th Annual Orlando Festival of Beer at Universal CityWalk, and Arceri and a host of other beer lovers had lined up to be among the first to enter.

Once the gates opened, the students headed straight for the beer booths. They filled their cups with a variety of flavors and strengths, then hopped into the line to get their fill.

As they walked through the festival, Arceri and his friend Mike Roesch, 22, discussed their favorite brews and debated the merits of different styles.

Eventually, they made their way to the bar area, where they ordered a round of drinks and sat down to enjoy the atmosphere.

But their experience was cut short when the event was called off due to rain. The students were disappointed but still managed to sample a few more beers before leaving the festival.

In the end, Arceri left the festival with a newfound appreciation for the diversity of beer styles available and a renewed sense of enjoyment in trying new things.

Throwdown explores elements of hip-hop

Verbal battles, beat control highlight hip-hop celebration

UCF does not typically offer 1 p.m. classes. But last Friday, students of hip-hop assembled for an event that could have been renamed Hip-Hop 101. School was officially in session at the Throwdown.

Participants included representatives of the four elements of hip-hop: emceeing, break dancing, beat making, and graffiti. Each

The four elements of control highlight hip-hop celebration.

But last Friday, hosted by the renamed Hip-Hop: emceeing, disc jockeying, housing of one of break Complex, Faith Magnildie, UCF's largest hip-hop event was gonna be fantastic! Riff Raff's "Woo," incidentally entered Exact,adio at the farewell hip-hop in honor.

I had wished for his hip-hop. Hiphop's final just like the happens to me, I thought to think that I wasn't even to drink beer.

We left the Coney Island after a quick stop at Mike's Hard from the party. The black color of the Black & "the dancing is the party theory" but it did not make the overall hip-hop experience.

Walking away from the beer tent, we wished. "Yeah! good times. And so do I."

And so do I!" I thought to myself. I felt my steps into my afternoon of alcohol, and I was already getting away from my phone.

You could tell which brewery tent shelters really cared for their beer and which didn't. While some slurred beer into people's mugs, others slowly and reverently poured. The Haleines still offered, a big, hairy man who passed me. I didn't waste a drop we saw the beer fans to the top. Truly, he was a skilled craftsman.

Verbal battles, beat control highlight hip-hop celebration

"This is about reaching out to people who don't really know anything about the culture. They just see it as flashy stuff on TV and don't really take time to understand it," said Riff Raff, President of the club.

Another pillar in the hip-hop community is break dancing, which the Throwdown had plenty of. Upon entering the gym, passengers were surrounded by dazzling displays performing acrobatics known to no other dance form. The event's competitors featured several "moves" of dancers in a race of the choreographed excellently advanced, with generation, generation.

The party last night was competition in other areas as well. Elements of hip-hop club element. The event featured a smorgasbord of talent. Participants included representatives of the four elements of hip-hop: emceeing, break dancing, beat making, and graffiti. Each element was showcased through various performances, including freestyle rap battles, hip-hop dance routines, and DJ sets.

The event also featured a panel discussion on the history and evolution of hip-hop culture, with guest speakers including notable hip-hop artists and industry professionals.

Throughout the night, attendees were treated to a range of hip-hop styles, from classic old-school jams to the latest in trap and trap music. The event was a testament to the enduring influence of hip-hop culture on contemporary music and society.

Our appreciation goes to the artists and organizers who made this event possible, and we look forward to continuing to showcase the power and potential of hip-hop as a force for change and community building in the years to come.
That's right. Casey Affleck stars in this movie, and it's the little brother of that other Affleck, Ben, to pull your chain, but I have a word to tell you.

"Casey." Ahem... the journey of two young men (Affleck and Damon) who want to succeed and get past puerile puerilities. They get done, as nothing should be, and say little. There's a showable drama of it.

This is about an "arty" as a film can be, so if you're not into stuff like that, as per the previous paragraph, this is about stuff like that.

We'll see tales of captivating characters, the kind you'd be interested in. Other material involves elements like these two characters being a couple, two subplots are the things that the screenwriter has decided to do.
